Owing to weather conditions caused by the lateness of the season also to fact that we have lost our pitcher, (she having left the city), we will be unable to meet any of the Toronto Ladies' Soft Ball teams this season, but would have liked to if we had been given the opportunity which we asked for some three weeks previous. However, we hope next year to give the public the chance to see some of the fast Toronto teams in action.

Australia Studies Closely Amer. Immigration Control

MELBOURNE, Sept. 12.—Members of all parties in the Commonwealth parliament are watching with keen interest the way America is meeting its immigration problem. Although it is recognized that the question of Asiatic immigration is not exactly similar to the issue of European emigration to the United States, all the effects of the Johnson bill, including the Japanese exclusion measure, are looked on as test cases which one day may be applicable to Australia.

Supporters of the "White Australia" policy protested warmly recently against the increasing numbers of Italians, Czecho-Slovakians, Maltese and other European nationalities who have been pouring into the Commonwealth to fill the labor demand in the sugar and cotton fields. This was the policy on which Sir Henry Barwell, ex-premier of South Australia, practically lost the election for the National party in that State.

Advocates of a white Australia are more active than ever.

Wills Not Impressive As a Challenger of Dempsey.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The complexion of the heavyweight fight situation underwent a radical change yesterday as a result of Harry Wills surprisingly decisive victory over Luis Firpo Thursday night at Boyle's Thirty Acres.

The Argentines' crushing defeat, it seemed certain, has eliminated the probability of a sequel to his dramatic battle with Jack Dempsey of 1923, but Wills, despite his victory, was not considered to have improved his chances of gaining his much-sought title match with Dempsey.

This view was shared by Tex Rickard who declared he had made no plans for a match which would bring the negro and Dempsey together.

COLLEGIATE SQUAD IS TALKING RUGBY

Coach Browne Has Strong Material For This Year's Team.

What chance has P.C.I. to cap the Interscholastic Rugby championship this year? Well, all indications point to the best opportunity the school has ever had.

For the last three years each season the Garnet and Grey has been in the semi-final game for the championship of Ontario in Collegiate Rugby, and each time has met defeat at the hands of a Toronto club. Three years ago they lost, playing at home, by 25 points, to U. versity of Toronto schools' crack team. The next year they lost by one point in an 8 to 7 score in which a debatable decision by the referee cost the P.C.I. the one point lead, and gave the game to Oakwood Collegiate. Last year, playing amid strange surroundings, on the muddy field at Varsity stadium, the P.C.I. went down fighting to the superior team from U.T.S.

But, this year—well, this year the local school hopes to take revenge for the many final defeats, and carry home the bunting successfully.

Previous years Coach C. S. Browne was faced with the problem of building a team from a bunch of youths of whom previously a scarce few had punted a Rugby ball or made a tackle—let alone sweated in a scrimmage. They were always eager and willing, however, and the coach each year turned out a team that beat anything east of Toronto.

Other years it was a worry to find enough men to form a team. This year no such problem faces Coach Browne.

He has fifteen of the twenty men he carried to Toronto last year, back at school this year, all getting in shape and fighting hard for a place. Of last year's team, the following are missing: Howard Young, Bruce Copping, Farron Stevens, Ross Thompson and "Spider" Martin. Of these, Young, the star quarter back, and Copping, the snap, will be certainly missed. Young was an all-around player, and Copping failed to make one misplaced snap all season.

But of last year's team, the following are back: H. Yelland, L. Killally, B. Craw, W. Rye, G. Pogue, H. Ebbs, H. Neal, B. Henry, C. Wood, H. C. True, T Outram, H Coe and A. Bookhout. Cole and Bookhout, who played in the half line last year will play that position again, with either one doing the kicking. Chew will likely try to fill Young's shoes at quarter, and promises to do it extremely well. The occupiers of the other positions are very uncertain, but each player is fighting for a place. Harold Peace, a new addition since last year's, looks to shape up well in the line.

Coach Browne called the first practice on Thursday afternoon at the Oval and 35 turned out. The players quickly got into the swing of things and a lively scrimmage followed. Some were inclined to pile right in and minor casualties were not infrequent. The way the half line passed the ball and the tackles made, helped to make it appear like a mid-season workout.

Rugby forms the chief topic of conversation around the school and Rugby uniforms and pieces of uniforms are at a premium. And all-the talk and preparation promises to be not in vain, for this year the scenes seemed to set for the garnet and grey.

AMERICANS WIN.

Tennis Doubles Went Four Sets—Keep Davis Cup.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept 13.—The Davis Cup, emblems of international lawn tennis team champion ship remains in the United States for another year.

This was assured Friday when William I. Tilden II, of Phildelphia, and William M. Johnston, of California, the United States team won from Gerald L. Patterson and Pat O'Hara Wood, of Australia, in three out of four sets. The scores were 5-7, 6-3, 6-4 and 6-1. The triumph of the United States doubles team yesterday, coupled with the two singles matches yesterday afternoon gave three victories to the United States team.

PITTSBURGH INFIELD BEST IN GAME

That's What Experts Say, Although Washington Is Not Far Behind.

The outstanding major league clubs of the last 20 years have boasted great infields.

Few pennants have been won by teams lacking an inner defense that could not only field but hit.

From 1906 to 1911 the Chicago Cubs of the National League were the big noise in that organization. The Cubs had a great infield.

Baseball fans will readily recall the Cub combination of Steinfeldt at third, Joe Tinker at short, Johnn Evers at second and Frank Chance at first.

In winning pennants and world series games for Chicago, the Cub infield played a most important part. Great on defense, it was almost as dangerous on the offense. That quartet could field, hit and think.

Then came the Philadelphia Athletics, who for several years monopolized the base ball situation as the one best team of the universe.

Mack's Costly Infield

Connie Mack's so-called $100,000 infield, big figures in those days, was made up of Home-run Frank Baker at third, Jack Barry at short, the brilliant Eddie Collins at second and "Stuffy" McInnis at first. Some infield.

Other famous infields that have figured in winning many pennant races are the present infield combinations of the New York Giants and the Yankees. Bancroft, star shortstop for many years, has been supplanted at New York by the youthful Travis Jackson.

One of the big thrills of the National League race was the late rush of the Pittsburgh Pirates. Only a poor start by Pittsburgh has made it possible for the Giants to be so compredicted by the head of Columbia

In the recent spurt made by Pittsburgh, the work of the Pirate infield featured the club's play.

Rate Pirate Infield High

A majority of the experts are of the opinion that the Pittsburgh club has the best infield in the majors. It is certainly one of the best.

Pie Traynor is a great third baseman. Wright at shortstop, playing his first year in the majors, is a sensation. "Rabbit" Maranville, shifted from short to second, is having one of the best years of his career. "Lefty" Grimm at first is a marvel in the field.

Vieing with the Pittsburgh quartet for infield honors is the Washington combination of Peckinpaugh, Harris Bleuege and Judge.

Washington, the sensation of the American League race, can thank its infield for the good part is has played in making the club a strong pennant contender.

Failure to make double plays cost many a ball game. Neither Pittsburg nor Washington suffer much in this respect.

There is little to choose between the two combinations. Both infields compare favorably with the leading quartets of the past.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

"What a wonder that fellow Cobb is! Twnety years in the big show and still going great."

"The most perfect swing in baseball. Why Speaker looks great when he misses the old apple."

It was Rogers Hornsby speaking, Only the other day President Heydler of the National League paid Hornsby the compliment of ranking him as the greates batsman of modern times.

Recently while working in St. Louis I had the opportunity of chatting with Hornsby on several occasions.

An injury to his back had sent him home for repairs just at a time when it seemed he was certain to break several long standing batting records.

Hornsby put in his time watching the St. Louis Browns play Detroit and Cleveland. It gave Hornsby his first chance to watch the two great stars, Cobb and Speaker, in a series of games.

Hornsby marveled at the enthusiasm of Cobb and his fine physical condition after 20 years of strenuous campaigning.

During the final series between Detroit and St. Louis, Cobb celebrated his twentieth anniversary as a big leaguer. The date, Aug. 30, to be exact.

Most big leaguers are passed long before they reach the twentieth milestone. Cobb, despite the fact that he has taken more chances than any played in the history of the game, is still fit and stepping out.

"Doesn't seem possible that Cobb has been in the majors for 20 years," remarked Hornsby after the anniversary game which was featured by his work.

"If I stick that long, I hope I have just half the 'pepper' that he has. However, I have no idea that I will be so fortunate. Infielders are in greater danger and seldom last as long as the outfielders.

"I have always thought managing a ball club was a big enough task without doing any playing. Yet Cobb, in his twentieth year, is still one of the outstanding stars, and manages as a sideline."

Cleveland followed Detroit into St. Louis and Hornsby watched Speaker in a series of five games, in which the batting of the Cleveland manager stood out.

Hornsby, a great hitter himself, says he learns much by studying the styles of the other great hitters and experimenting with them.

"To my way of thinking, Speaker has the perfect swing," was Hornsby's comment.

"It is free, yet there is the snap at the wrist and the follow through which gives distant to the drive when you connect.

"Speaker times most balls so well that he gets distance to his drives, when it appears he is not putting much power into his swing.

"Any batter could copy his style without making a mistake. There is no lost motion, no wasted energy with the Speaker swing. It's the perfect way to cut at the ball."

A majority of the truly great stars are modes. Rogers Hornsby, one of the greatest players of all time, is no exception to the rule.

DO YOU KNOW BASEBALL?

BY BILLY EVANS

QUESTIONS

1. Would you class Eddie Plank as valuable a pitcher as Rube Waddell? Who had the most stuff?—D.H.K.

2. If a player slides into a base with such force that he causes it to break loose, must he follow the base, or is he entitled to the base if previously declared safe? —S.A.H.

3. Umpire calls time as a ball is thrown onto the playing field. The pitcher does not hear the call of time and delivers the ball to the batsman, who hits for two bases, scoring two runners who were on at the time. Do the runs count?—S.E.Y.

4. It is the first of the ninth and the score is 2 to 0 in favor of the home team. Two hits and a base on balls fill the bases with no one out. Regular pitcher is taken out and a substitute sent in. The three men put on the bases by the starting pitcher score before the side is retired. The home team is beaten 3 to 2. Who is charged with the defeat? A.H.J.

ANSWERS

1. As a winning pitcher, Plank was perhaps as valuable as Waddell. He didn't have as much stuff, and lacked the color of the erratic Waddell, but was a brainy, winning pitcher.

2. The baserunner is entitled to the base. He cannot be held responsible because the bag broke away from its anchor.

3. The runs do not count. It is unfortunate, but when the umpire called time play suspened and no action was possible. Batsman hits over and players return to their original base.

4. The starting pitcher who put the three runners on, who later scored, deciding the result, is charged with the defeat.

POLO PERHAPS TO-DAY.

Fourth Attempt To Stage International Match.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13. — British and United States polo teams will make their fourth attempt to meet in the first match of the series for the international cup to-day at four o'clock at the Meadowbrook Club.

Frequent postponements have worked to the advantage of the British team by permitting its captain and star, Louis Lacey, to recover from an attack of shingles and an injured shoulder.

MILLBROOK MAN RAN INTO TRAIN

Could Not See Passing Train For Mist on Windshield —Had a Miraculous Escape.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 12.—Harry Clemens, of South Monaghan, met with a peculiar accident on Tuesday morning. Driving down Dawson's Hill in a closed car, the windshield covered with mist owing to the cool atmosphere, he failed to notice the 7.40 train going north to Peterboro. An almost miraculous escape is reported, for while his car struck the steps of the rear coach, completely detaching them, the motor got off with bent fenders only, though it was turned sideways and wedged against the railing which protects a culvert at that point.

None of the occupants, which included Mr. Clemens' two sons and another boy, named Nurse, were injured. It is likely had the train been coming toward Millbrook station, the accident would have had more serious results. The car was a sedan.

The special meeting of the Women's Institute, held in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening, was well attended, a good representation of members from the country being present, though the weather mas most unfavorable.

By invitation, Mrs. H. Skitch, of Bailieboro, district president, occupied the chair, and briefly introduced the object for the consideration of which the meeting had been called, namely, the advisability of the Institute purchasing a public rest-room and lavatory. Mrs. Skitch explained that a motion was necessary before discussion could take place.

Moved by Mrs. A. J. Fallis, seconded by Mrs. T. H. Aiken, that the Institute buy a building which could be used for rest-room and lavatory.

A lively discussion followed in which several took part. The building that was thought could be utilized; renting the apartments upstairs and furnishing the rest-room on the ground floor, was the one lately occupied by B. R. Raper. Eleven hundred and fifty dollars was mentioned as the purchase price. The treasurer, Miss E. Grandy, reported about $570.00 in the bank.

Councillors J. R. Eakins and H. A. Elson were present, and each addressed the gathering expressing sympathy with the project and believing it a wise undertaking that would prove an asset to the community. A donation of $100 from the village council toward the funds was promised by Mr. Eakins providing the rest-room idea was carried out; and Mr. Elson, on behalf of the Cavan Council, said that at least $100 could be counted upon from that body, and possibly $150 would be granted.

By a standing vote, the motion carried with a substantial majority—thirty-one voting in its favor and thirteen against.

On motion, Mrs. C. Thorndyke, Mrs. T. H. Aiken, Mrs. Wilbert Thorne, Mill E. Grandy and Miss Pearl Burnham were appointed a committee to attend to the matter of purchasing the building in the immediate future, with Councillors Eakins and Elson as an advisory committee.

In her closing remarks, Mrs. Skitch expressed her pleasure meeting with the Institute, urging unity of purpose and loyal support of the officers in the undertaking on hand. Community service was emphasized, and the spirit of mutual helpfulness, with the encouraging thought that, in her personal experience, the president had always found these Societies most flourishing which had some project on hand that, because of its worthiness, demanded co-operation and work.

The proviso had been added to the motion that the sum offered should not exceed $1,150, and the building secured for less than that price if possible. As many members of the committee as could be got together met at 10 a.m, on Thursday, and after going over the premises decided to make an offer of the sum mentioned. T. J. Lang telephoned the bid to Toronto to the parties who have the disposal of the property, but was met with the reply that the Lindsay Creamery Company had an offer fifty dollars higher already in. Their local representative, A. A. Birchard, will occupy the premises, using the ground floor for business purposes.

The Institute, therefore, will have to look elsewhere for suitable accommodation for the project which it has on hand.

Rev. S. T. and Mrs. Tucker, with their son and daughter, Ewart and Gladys, motored over from Orono on Monday and called on a number of friends in the village. They have recently returned from their month's holidays, camping at Wassgo Beach, Georgian Bay.

Miss Muriel Lang, who has been visiting her cousin, Mrs. Frank Carveth, at Toronto, for the past two weeks, has returned home.

Colborne High School has engaged a fourth teacher this term. Miss May Mitchell, who was assistant principal in the Millbrook Continuation School some years ago, occupies a similar position at Colborne.

Friends of Mrs. Albert Carroll (nee Kathleen O'Neill) will be sorry to hear she is in the Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay, suffering from a broken bone in her arm between the elbow and wrist, caused by falling down several stairsteps.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was held in the Sunday school-room on Wednesday afternoon. The attendance was small, possibly owning to the heavy downpour of rain, but those who were privileged to attend were rewarded for their efforts, as the meeting was most helpful and enjoyable throughout. In the absence of the president, Mrs. H. Lamb, the first vice-president conducted the meeting. The scripture lesson was taken from St. John, 15 chapter, followed by prayer.

The annual thankoffering was discussed and it was unanimously decided to invite Miss Greta Clarke, of East Emily, a returned missionary from China home on furlough, to address the W. M. S. at an early date, the time to be chosen by the speaker, should she be free to do so.

Letters were received regarding the coming plebiscite, but as the churches are uniting for organization in favor of the O.T.A., the subject received only a hot discussion.

Mrs. O. G. Williamson, one of the delegates to the W. M. S. Presbyterial, held at Norwood in June, gave a splendid report of the different sessions, and pictured a vivid account of the work done by many societies in the district.

The conclusion of the chapter in the study book was taken by Mrs. L. A. Mahood which brought to a close the mission work and life of John Leslie Mackay in Formosa in 1901.

The roll call was responded to by a verse of scripture containing the words "Trust," and the lesson and hymns were also in keeping with the subject.

At the conclusion of the meeting, a bale, valued at $25.00, consisting of five quilts, clothing, etc., also clothing for a boy of eleven, was packed for the North-west Mission.

TWO PLEBISCITE QUESTION OCT. 23

Announced To-day After a Long Delay and Seclusion of Premier Ferguson.

LOCAL OPINION.

Finally after six months' arduous labor on the part of Premier Ferguson, the announcement of the two questions to be placed on the ballots on October 23rd came today.

The two questions that the voters of Ontario will be asked to decide are:

1. "Are you in favor of the Ontario Temperance Act?"
2. "Are you in favor of the sale of beer and spirituous liquors in sealed packages, under Government control?"

In the opinion of one prominent local moderationist who was speaking to the Examiner in the Peterborough office of the Moderation League this morning, the questions forsake the working man and leave out one interest probably more seriously affected by the Ontario Temperance Act than any other.

According to him, the Premier should have obtained an expression from the people on October 23, on the advisability of the selling of beer and ale in licensed premises. He said the working man does not want to take alcoholic beverages to his home, because of the effect it will have upon his growing children. It is this environment, caused by the Ontario Temperance Act, that a great majority wish to eliminate.

Continuing, he said that the sale of beer and spirituous liquors will be still out of the reach of the working man, who after a hard day's work wants to go home and wash up and then go to some place of public meeting, where a glass or two of beer can be had, along with a little bit of sociability. He is now deprived of this privilege and throughout the city as a result, alcoholic beverages are being made in the home in the presence of children and with the resulting harmful effect.

Farmers, too, said this man, used to be able to get together and do business when they could have a glass of beer or ale together and if that condition obtained again, it would facilitate business, as men must get together to do business.

When asked whether the two questions merited six months' hard labor and required the Premier to go into seclusion to think the matter over, he smilingly remained silent.

This morning a well known citizen from the Township of Otonabee entered the office of the Moderation League. This gentleman is also a prominent church worker. After being introduced to those present, one gentleman queried: "Are you not an O.T.A. man?"

"Yes," he replied, "but I am glad to see things on the move and if there is going to be a fight, I think it should be in the open." Then, he asked, looking at the stacks of literature on the desk, "What have we got here?"

"O, certainly, certainly, how would you like a letter from a clergyman," asked one gentleman, and he was handed a pamphlet, containing the views of a clergyman who condemns the O.T.A. and the principles advanced depriving the individual of his freedom by restrictive measures and the demoralizing effects of the Ontario Temperance Act, in breeding cirminals and destroying the power of self control.

RECORD DAY IN BALL HISTORY

Five Peterborough Teams Play Important O.B.A.A. Games Here and Away.

Peterboro stands out prominently to-day on the baseball map Here, at Riverside Park, Kiwanis Bantams play McCormicks of Toronto and the Sacred Heart Midgets meet the fast Homewood team from the Queen city. These are the second games in the second O B. A. A. round; the locals having played and lost in Toronto, last Saturday.

Maple Leafs are in Cobourg where they hope to make it two straight and win the second round of the juvenile argument.

Lkeviews playing in Kingston, also one up on the Limestone city gang, having won here. To-day's game was made necessary because of the score of 2-2 when the teams first met in Kigston. A win ofr Lakeviews will bring Eastern Ontario honors on the right to play the winner for the Ontario Junior champion ship.

Canadian Generals should win handily at Bethany, having scored at will here in the first game of the third intermediate round.

THREAT OF WEST.

Reprisals If Hudson Bay Railway Completion Is Blocked.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 13.—(Canadian Press).—If Eastern "interests" continue to show serious opposition to the completion of the Hudson Bay railway then, in the words of a statement made here by a member of the On-to-the-Bay Association Exectuive, "it is time we in the West limited Montreal's bridge building, Toronto's viaduct and the millions voted to Vancouver for her harbor."

The statement said the association expected Premier King to make "a most favorable pronouncement covering the attitude of the Government" on the occasion of his Western tour.

WETS SATISFIED.

Drys Do Not Altogether Approve Plebiscite Questions

TORONTO, September 13. Canadian Press. — The Rev. John Bailey, secretary of the Ontario Prohibition Union, in an interview this morning, on the questions to be put before the electorate in the liquor plebiscite on October 23rd, stated that the form of the interrogation was not exactly what was wanted.

Continuing, Mr. Bailey stated: "I suppose, if the statement of the Premier is remembered, it will not be so bad, but people will think more of the questions, and there is a danger that they will think that under Government control, they will get somethng better than Quebec and British Columbia have. The Premier should have stated, in the event of the Ontario Temperance Act being upheld, that the law would be strengthened. A great deal of trouble would have been saved if the Government during the session had stated clearly in a bill what the Government proposed to do if the O. T.A. was defeated. It is now uncertain, and the whole thing, as regards Government control, is a mystery."

Representatives of the local brewing companies stated that they were perfectly satisfied with the questions, and expressed optimism regarding the result of the plebiscite. Cyril Boyce, secretary of the Moderation League, stated that he was perfectly satisfied with the questions to be submitted.

AT THE GRAND.

"THE CAT AND THE CANARY" At the Grand Next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

One of the many uniquely original features which make "The Cat and the Canary" stand out as the greatest thrill-and-laugh success that the world has ever known, is the fact that there is no hero in it.

That's the truth, and if you don't believe it, wait till you see this smashing success, when it's presented at the Grand next week, by Theatrical Enterprises, Ltd., popular stock organization.

Of course, Mr. Byron Hawkins takes the leading role, but that doesn't make a hero of him. He plays the part of Paul Jones, a rather bashful and stammering sort of a fellow. When all the troubles begin at the old mansion on the Hudson, Paul is scared stiff. His knees knock together. He is just as much frightened as any one in the audience, and that is going some!

But in spite of his terrors, Paul Jones blunderingly does his best to clear up the mystery. He takes awful chances. He gets away with some of them. With others, he doesn't. The spooky and murderous member of the ancient household nearly kills him before the affair is cleared up, but Paul Jones, despite his wounds, plods grimly along, even when his hair is standing straight up.

Every time Paul Jones open his mouth, you are going to laugh. You may be frightened half to death, as he is, but you'll laugh just the same, and before the horrific evening of thrills is over, you'll be mighty glad that Playwright John Willard created the character of Paul Jones, for most of those laughs he hands you will come as a welcome relief to the series of chills along the spinal column that precede them.

"THE FIRST YEAR."

The attraction at the Grand on Friday evening will be the famous comic tragedy of married life of the newly weds, "The First Year," by Frank Craven, under the management of Theatrical Enterprises, Limited, in conjunction with John Golden, the celebrated producer of clean plays.

This comedy ran for over two years at the Little Theatre, New York, to capacity audiences, and comes direct from that city for a tour of the Canadian Provinces under Canadian management.

The story of "The First Year" is the mishaps of courtship and the maladjustments of the first year of married life and bring tears to both sides of the footlights, of laughter to the audience, of anger, strife and repentance to Grace and Tommy. These two, Grace and Tommy, begin their life together by moving from Illinois to Missouri, to the romantic Grace the mere change in state is sufficient to satisfy her desire of travel; to the timid Tommy it seems a new start in strange surroundings. As the months pass, however, Thomas becomes more satisfied. Grace less so. Business looks more prosperous, but they make no friends. Tommy has more assurance but Grace has fewer clothes and so it goes on until Grace suddenly becomes tired of it all and goes home to mother; Tommy really becomes prosperous, but with no wife to spend his money upon, rushes after her. And so they are re-united and, as the fairy tales untruthfully state, live happily forever after.

AT THE CAPITOL.

The third change of programme for this week opened at the Capitol Theatre last evening, with Jackie Coogan starring in "Little Robinson Crusoe," and another of the popular Jack Dempsey fight pictures, making an excellent evening's entertainment for the last of the week.

The versatile small star has plenty of scope in his latest big picture, in which he has the role of Mickey Hogan, a San Francisco orphan who sets out in a tramp steamer for the Antipodes There is a big storm scene and a shipwreck on a cannibal island, where Mickey rules as king and has plenty of excitement.

Jack Dempsey, in "West of the Water Bucket," does a real "fight and win" stunt.

GLORIA SWANSON— "HER LOVE STORY."

That's the title of Gloria's latest Paramount picture, an Allan Dwan production, which comes to the Capitol Theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The story is an adaptation by Frank Tuttle of Mary Roberts Rinehart's novel and magazine serial, "Her Majesty, the Queen." Ian Keith has the leading man's role opposite the star, and others in the strong supporting cast include George Fawcett, Echlin Gayer, Mario Majeroni, Sidney Herbert and other big names well-known on both stage and screen.

To voice the opinion of the editor of the magazine in which the story appeared, "Mary Roberts Rinehart is one of the most remarkable personalities in this country. If some man wrote all the novels, all the plays and all the perfectly wonderful stories that she's written, we—meaning we men—would all get up on our feet and say, 'here is one who can produce more fine work than any living human being.'

"'But doing this—and a lot more—has been only one of Mrs. Rinehart's jobs. She has borne, trained, stimulated and launched five fine sons. And, between times, written 'The Man in Lower Ten,' 'Seven Days,' 'Bab,' 'Tish,' 'The Bat,' 'Dangerous Days' and so many others that I won't try to recite them all.

"And now she has written the tenderest love story in many a day."

Even that is putting it mildly. "Her Love Story" is said to be the best Swanson picture ever made, and when one recalls "The Humming Bird," "A Society Scandal," "Manhandled" and the others, this must be some picture. It's a story of a beautiful young princess, forced against her will to marry the reprobate king of a neighboring country. She is in love with a Captain of the King's Guards. There are complications, dramatic scenes galore, with a smashing climax that will pull you right up out of your chair.

AN EPIC OF WEST IS JAMES CRUZE'S FINE PRODUCTION.

"The Covered Wagon" Bristles With Dramatic Scenes That Thrill.

A magnificent epic of the early west is James Cruze's latest Paramount production. "The Covered Wagon," which will be the feature at the Capitol Theatre for three days, beginning Thursday next. This is a picturization of Emerson Hough's new novel of the same name, and it is said to be one of the greatest photoplays ever seen on the screen.

The features embraced in this story are many and varied and include among others, the start of 350 covered wagons from Westport Landing (now Kansas City), in 1848. The terrors of fording fresh et rivers, prairie fires and the like are depicted with great realism. A buffalo hunt is one of the most exciting scenes. Old Fort Bridger with a night attack and fight by day with Indians, are shown. The dividing of the trails to Oregon and California at old Fort Hall, a touch of the gold fever in California, magnificent mountain shots and a culmination of the romance with the establishment of one of the first homesteads in Oregon—these are all incidents in a picture that bristles with big scenes.

Such historical characters as Kit Carson, Jim Bridger and Bill Jackson, scouts and typical western characters, are portrayed in the Paramount screen version of the novel, which is conceded to be one of the most notable literary achievements of the present decade.

The various roles are in the hands of well-known screen players. The leading man is J. Warren Kerrigan, and the leading woman is Lois Wilson. Alan Hale is the villain. Others in the cast include Tully Marshall, Ethel Wales, Charles Ogle and John Fox. Jack Cunningham adapted the novel to the screen.

TWO BIG PICTURES AT CAPITOL NEXT WEEK.

Because of the booking of "The Covered Wagon" the last three days of next week, only two complete changes of programme will be made at the Capitol Theatre. The first three days will see the premier presentation in Ontario of Gloria Swanson in her latest story, "Her Love Story," and the last three days, the attraction will be James Cruze's famous production, "The Covered Wagon." The following week the Capitol will resume its policy of three complete changes of programme each week.

AT THE ROYAL.

ROMANCE AND ADVENTURE EAST OF SINGAPORE.

"The Cup of Life" at Royal on Monday.

Since Marco Polo first dared the hidden dangers of unchartered oceans to journey his way from Europe to the mysterious shores of India and the Orient, the colorful kingdoms and empires lying "somewhere east of Suez" have beckoned the adventurer with the lure of beauty, romance and glamor.

Singapore, the trade centre of the Orient, a port of ancient traditions and modern business, where to-day rubs shoulders with yesterday, is the alluring background of Thomas H. Ince's latest special production for the Associated Producers, "The Cup of Life," which is announced as the feature of the Royal Theatre programme beginning Monday.

The story is a tremendous drama of a father's love for his son and of the unjustified vengeance of a powerful Chinese merchant prince. Deftly combined with a delicate love story, and scenes of stirring action, are revealed the fundamental differences that will forever separate the Orient from the Occident—the dividing line of races.

The cosmopolitan atmosphere of Singapore has been exploited to the fullest advantage in attaining powerful and effective contract, and in reaching the tremendous dramatic situations which feature the production.

The leading roles are assumed by an all-star cast of exceptional merit. Hobart Bosworth appears as "Bully Brand," the type of characterization for which he has become justly famous. Madge Bellamy, Tully Marshall and Niles Welch are seen in parts no less important. Monte Collins and May Wallace complete the cast.

"The Cup of Life" has been produced in typical Thomas H. fashion, and no effort has been spared to make it one of the artistic and draamtic triumphs of the season.

PREMIER'S SON HERE.

Discussed Political Situation In The Old Country.

(Special to the Examiner.)

TORONTO, September 13. — In Great Britain a career begins earlier in life than in Canada and already they welcome MacDonald, 22-year-old son of the British Prime Minister, who can count himself a veteran in at least one political fight.

Although still an undergraduate of the University of Oxford, he was a candidate in the last British election. He was defeated but his enthusiasm was not destroyed, and in Toronto to-day as the guest of Mr. Vincent Massey he said that he still maintained his political aspirations. "I am going to be a reporter first when I go back," he said.

Mr. MacDonald is a quiet, unassuming young man of medium height, and dark complexion. He appears to have inherted much of his father's studious nature and to have absorbed the thoughtful Oxonian outlook on life. A pair of horned rim med glasses mark him as an exception among English students and he is not at all modelled on the Prince of Wales pattern. He is the Englishman of the workshop, rather.

In an interview, Mr. MacDonald discussed the present political situation in Great Britan. As an observer he has formed the opinion that the administration of which his father is head, is increasing continually in popularity with the people.

An election now would bring gains to the Labor party, for many who feared extremism at the last election would vote unhesitatingly for Labor the next time, and the Conservatives would also gain. Knowing all this the Liberals were not likely to precipitate an election by defeating the Rusian Treaty. For defeat of the treaty would have that inevitable result.

OBITUARY.

MRS. F. J. BULLIED.

After a brief illness, there died on September 6, at St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterboro, Mary Jane MacPherson, wife of Mr. F. J. Bullied, superintendent of the County House of Refuge at Lakefield. The funeral was held at Clydesdale, where the deceased had spent almost her entire life, and was very largely attended. The services were conducted by Rev. P. L. Jull, of Lakefield, and a special solo rendered by Mrs. Martin. A large number of floral tributes were received, including a beautiful wreath from the County of Peterboro.

The late Mrs. Bullied was born at Clydesdale, Ont., January 17th, 1876. In 1901 she was married to Mr. F. J. Bullied, who survives her with two children, Ross and Madge, aged 22 years and 17 years respectively. Four years ago the family moved to Peterboro, and in April last took charge of the House of Refuge at Lakefield. Two sisters and one brother also survive: Mrs. D. S. Campbell and Mr. Duncan MacPherson, of Clydesdale, and Mrs. H McCaskie, of Belleville. Mrs. Bullied was a very fine Christian character, kindly, courageous, and cheerful, under any circumstance, respected and beloved by all who knew her.

IN MEMORIAM.

CUNNINGHAM. — In loving memory of our little son and brother, Herbie Cunningham, who passed away Setpember 13, 1921, aged 4 years and 2 months.

"Often do our thoughts wander to a little grave not far away,
Where they laid our darling Herbie just three years ago to-day.
Do not ask us if we miss him —
there is such a vacant place.
Can we e'er forget his footsteps and his dear wee smiling face?
Friends may think we have forgot
you when at times they see us smile,
But they little know the sorrow that is hidden behind that smile.

BARNARDO HOME BOY SOUGHT FOR BRUTAL ATTACK ON FARM WOMAN

Theft of Purse Believed Motive of Youth's Entry Into Woman's Room While Asleep and Her Husband Absent—Trusted As One of the Family.

ST. THOMAS VICTIM TO RECOVER

ST. THOMAS, Sept. 15.—(Canadian Press).—County authorities are seeking a sixteen-year-old Barnardo boy as a result of one of the most brutal crimes ever committed in the St. Thomas district.

Mrs. Albert Couse, a young married woman with five small children, was brutally attacked Friday evening in the absence of her husband, and was found in the morning in a pool of blood by one of the children. She is seriously injured but it is expected will recover.

Husband in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Couse live on a farm on Talbot street about two miles east of the city. During the summer they had employed a young English lad, John Hammer. He had been given an ideal home, neighbors state, and was treated as one of the family. Mr. Couse felt that it was perfectly safe to leave the lad with the family while he made a visit to Toronto.

Friday night while the family was asleep, it is thought that Hammer entered Mrs. Couse's room with the intention of robbing her of a purse which she kept in the dresser. It is believed by the authorities that Mrs. Couse was awakened and her intention of giving alarm was prevented by blows from a sharp edged weapon in the hands of the robber.

The Money Taken.

Three blows on the head left the woman insensible. When the eldest of the children wakened in the morning and found her mother lying unconscious. Neighbors sent for assistance to St. Thomas. Dr. Ewis removed Mrs. Couse to a hospital where she is expectes to recover. The room had been ransacked and the purse containing $16 had been taken. The ceiling and walls of the room were splashed with blood and the bed clothes were wet with blood.

The description of the alleged assailant has been broadcasted and it is expected that Hammer's arrest will shortly follow.

Till a fortnight ago he carried on all the duties of his office and was confined to his bed for only ten days. Mr. Glackmeyer's tenure of office stands as a record among sergeants-at-arms of the British Empire. He served under sixteen Legislatures, nine Prime Ministers, thirteen Lieutenant-Governors and fifteen Speakers. Mr. Glackmeyer was born in Montreal on May 20, 1843.

Charge Against Garage Owner Dismissed When Jury Fails to Act

MAYS LANDING, N.J., Sept. 15. Jeremiah Delucca, a fruit farmer, was at liberty Saturday following failure of the Grand Jury to find an indictment against him in connection with the death of Michael Sacco, 16, who died from gunshot wounds in Delucca's garage at Hammonton last Tuesday.

Delucca had set a guntrap in the garage for thieves who recently slashed the tires on his automobile and stole articles from his garage. He was arrested on a charge of murder and was held in jail without bail. When the Grand Jury declined to act he was freed by Judge William H. Smathers yesterday afternoon.

Keep Walker Cup in United States

GARDEN CITY, N. Y., Sept. 15—By winning nine matches out of 12 in the two day tournament ending on Saturday, leading amateur golfers of the United States retained the Walker Cup, emblematic of the international team supremacy.

The United States won six out of eight singles on Saturday and three out of four foursomes on Friday, all the matches being of 36 holes over the heavily trapped course of the Garden City Golf Club, where the superior irons and back spin shot and putting of the United States players counted heavily.

INSTANTLY KILLED.

Boy Drawn Under Wheels Of Motor Truck Yesterday.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 15. Dwight Bunner, son of the Rev. J. W. and Mrs. Bunner of Stockdale, late of the Campbellford Seymour Circuit, was instantly killed yesterday.

The victim, a young man of seven teen years of age, was bicycling from his home in Stockdale to Ivanhoe, to attend a camp meeting of the Free Methodists. Near Ivanhoe, where the road is heavily gravelled, he caught hold of a passing motor truck. His wheel swerved and he was drawn under the truck's wheels and killed instanteously.

Dwight Bunner, with his parents, was the guest last week of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Kent of Campbellford.

FRENCH

France is selling to other countries at the rate of three billion francs a year in excess of what she's buying in the form of imports. Even though the franc is away below par, this leaves her a snug trade balance. Her military machine will spend the money quickly, if any is left over after paying pensions and rebuilding devastated districts. Funds to repay what she borrowed from our Liberty Bond sales are not apt to flow our way for a long time—if ever.

RAIN SET BACK WEST'S HARVEST

Wet and Cloudy Week Suspended Operations—Skies Cleared Sunday.

MANITOBA AHEAD

WINNIPEG, Sept. 15.— (Canadian Press).—A week of dull, wet weather suspended harvesting operations in many sections of all three western provinces, and the general situation is about as it was a week ago. The skies have cleared, however, and beneath a warm, bright sun grain in stooks has a chance to dry out, and uncut fields an opportunity to ripen. If fine weather continues cutting and threshing will be resumed in many sections today or Tuesday.

With favorable conditions cutting should be almost completed in the southern sections by the end of this week. In the central and northern sections there are large areas where grain still is very green and several days of sunshine are necessary for its ripening.

Southern Manitoba is about 75 percent threshed and is the farthest advanced of any part. Some threshing has been done in Southern Saskatchewan and Alberta, but it is not general. Cutting should be completed in Central Alberta in ten days, it is reported, but comparatively little threshing has been done yet.

SINGS OVER RADIO FROM OCEAN FLOOR

"Uncle Wip" Sends Bedtime Lullaby to Accompaniment of Piano on Atlantic City Pier.

ALANTIC CITY, N., J., Sept., 15—"Uncle Wip," bedtime story teller for Gimbel Brothers' Philadelphia radio broadcasting station, WIP, a lullaby through the ether to his many juvenile followers on Friday night from the bottom of the ocean here. The song was accompanied on a piano played two full city blocks away.

"Uncle Wip," otherwise Gus Carey donned his diving suiit and slipped into the fifty feet of water at the end of the steel pier shortly after 7 o'clock, the hour of retirement of most of his young audience. At the land end of the pier was Harry Link at a piano. The tune played by Link was conveyed to "Uncle Wip" through a head receiver within his diver's helment and also to a broadcasting unit on the pier where a wire from a microphone inside Carey's helmet transmitted the singer's voice. "Uncle Wip's" miscrophone was inset in a rubber sponge.

He first told the usual bedtime story and then read the names of numerous youngsters who had written him. Those of the listeners-in who thus heard their names through the air will receive gold pencils if they will write "Unce Wip."

"Unce Wip," while Link played the piano, then sang his lullaby. The accompaniment was perfectly timed, and to listeners-in the song sounded as if it was being sung beside a piano in the usual manner.

CHINESE FIGHT BREAKS OUT ON PEKING SECTOR

Chang Tso-Lin, Field Marshal of Manchuria, Moves Against Capital.

BEGAN SATURDAY.

Fighting Waged on Shanghai Front In Heavy Rain.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 15. — Two messages from Mukden, given out Sunday by Secretary Loh of Chekiang defense headquarters here reported that firing began Saturday night at Shanhaikwan in Chihli province, at the Manchurian border and in the Jehol district, in the heart of Chihli, 125 miles northwest of Shanhaikwan and about 100 miles north-east of Peking.

The second message reported the capture of Tsao-Yang, near Jeho.

These messages, if confirmed, will indicate that Chang Tso-Lin, the Manchurian field-marshal, is moving his troops on Peking from two directions in his effort to overthrow the government there.

BATTLED IN RAIN.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 15. — Rival forces of warring Chinese Military Governors battling for possession of Shanghai, disregarded their traditional rule against fighting in the rain. Firing was resumed at Hwangtu, fifteen miles west of here, while that area was being soaked by a new storm.

The Kiangsu Military Governor was reported to be rushing reinforcements to Changchow, 110 miles west of Shanghai, to defend that town against the advancing Chekiang troops, who took Ihling, according to a Chinese observer who arrived here from Chingkiang, 140 miliest west of Shanghai.

The observer was one of three Chinese messengers dispatched from Anting, twenty miles west of here, to view operations of the Kiangsu forces. He succeeded in reaching Shanghai by steamer, after viewing the invading Kiangsu army from behind its lines.

The observer discredited the assertions of the Chekiang forces that they were victorious near Hwangtu in the last three days. He said the Kiangsu forces were fully confident and well organized. The observer said he had witnessed night battles in the outskirts of Hwangtu in which both sides used artillery.

In the battle he saw the Kiangsu artillery force the fighting and advance into the outskirts of Twangtu.

On the Ihing front, 100 miles west of here, the Chinese saw the rival forces in action, and the Kiangsu leaders said there were more than 1,000 wounded, filling the hospitals and university dormitory at Soochow, fifty-three miles west of Shanghai.

The equipment of the Kiangsu troops was said by the observer to be superior to that the Chekiang forces. He added that the Chekiang field guns and ammunition were faulty. An examination of a number of shells, he asserted, revealed a great proportion of "duds."

The ineffectiveness of shells fired by the Chekiang forces, the observers said, was shown in an examination of the wounded, which revealed that nearly all were victims of rifle or machine gun fire.

A Japanese news agency received a report this morning from Peking that the Mukden Railway line had been closed to traffic. This was taken as an indication of impending warfare between General Chang Tso-lin, Manchurian dictator, and Wu Pei-fu military leader of the Peking Government.

SHELL SETS LIUHO AFIRE.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 14.— The town of Liuho is a mass of flames. About 6 o'clock last night a Kiagsu battery threw a shell into the town, and it is now burning fiercely. A fire brigade from Shanghai is on the way, but it may not arrive because of the fighting on the outskirts. The town had 20,000 inhabitants, but has been nearly deserted for several days.

To-day was the Chinese mid-autumn festival and by mutual consent, helped by a continuous downpour of rain, both sides stopped fighting until about 6 o'clock, when they went at it again.

It is said that General Sun Chuanfang of Fukian plans an invasion of Chekiang from the south with 30,000 men, and that General Lu is sending 20,000 troops to resist him.

There is a report of actual fighting at the town of Hsifongknow, located at a pass in the Great Wall between Chihli Province and Manchuria, north-east of Peking.

It is said here that the merchants of Canton have agreed to finance Dr. Sun's northern expedition in exchange for municipal reforms.

MUSSOLINI HELD PARTY IN CHECK FEELING TENSE

Disorders Over Murder of Fascist Deputy—Prevented By Prompt Measures.

WEEK END QUIET.

Few Mild Outbreaks, But No Actual Damage—Like Martial Law.

ROME, Sept. 15. — A feeling of tension prevailed througout Italy Saturday as a sequel to the assassination of the Fascist Deputy Casalini, but very little disorder was reported. A few mild outbreaks took place at Turin, Venice, Genoa, Florence and some of the smaller towns, although their effects were felt more in jumpy nerves than actual material damage.

The precautions taken immediately after the death of Casalini have not been relaxed. Fascist militiamen are guarding the plants of all the Opposition newspapers, the cordon of militia drawn around the building occupied by Il Mondo making it appear almost as if the city was under martial law.

Premier Mussolini has notified all the Prefects that they will be held personally responsible for keeping order in their districts. All the newspapers and many of the patriotic organizations issued appeals to the populace to keep calm and show no animus.

Placards were posted hurriedly on Saturday afternoon announcing a procession of war invalids to the Chigi Palace as an expression of sympathy with Premier Mussolini. About 2,000 veterans answered the call and marched through the streets to the palace. Although the Premier was aware of the demonstration he did not appear at the window, explaining that he desired to discourage such expressions of sympathy.

It is generally conceded that since the disappearance of Deputy Matteotti the different factions of the Opposition had been encouraged by the greater degree of leniency of the authorities, notwithstanding the decree restricting the activities of the press.

The most excitable elements of the population, after the slaying of Casalini, prepared for catastrophic events, but fortunately the situation did not take the grave turn it might have assumed.

Friday's tragedy had even more painful consequences for the family of the victim than the murder of Matteotti. The latter was one of the wealthiest men in Italy, while Casalini left almost penniless his mother, his widow and five small children.

Arrangements have been made to hold a public funeral for Casalini to-day at the expense of the Fascist Party. The body lies in the hospital where the Deputy died, the room having been transferred into a chapelle ardente, which hundreds of persons, including a number of important Government officials, visited.

Dawes Plan Affairs in Berlin Going Well—To Meet Commission.

PERFECTING PLANS.

PARIS, Sept. 16—Owen D. Young temporary agent-general for reparation payments arrived here on Sunday from Berlin, ready for his first real talk with the Dawes plan officials, since the plan has been transposed from paper into a reality.

Mr. Young will spend to-day conferring with members of the reparation commission, and on Tuesday he and his associates will give the commission their views and suggest what is necessary to make the plan effective.

In the short time he was in Berlin, Mr. Yiung is said to have found it possible to get affairs running well. As far as is known he has no special problems to submit to the reparation commission, but is desirous of discussing the situation with the officials so that organization may be perfected in an operative basis is well in advance of any need for action by any of the officials.

The exact status of Henry M. Robinsin, who is to assist Mr. Young in his post of temporary agent-general, probably will be fixed by the reparation commission at a meeting in Tuesday.

$15,000 Farm Crop And Buildings Destroyed

CHATHAM, Sept. 15. — Fire Saturday afternoon destroyed three large barns containing the seasons' grain and hay crop, silo, implement shed and large quantity of farming machinery and large hen house on the farm of Martin McGregor, river road, Dover township.

Thrashing operations were being carried on when the roof of the barn adjoining caught fire. The flame spread so rapidly that the separator was considerably damaged before it could be hauled to safety. One calf and three hogs were burned to death. The loss it is estimated will reach $15,000 partly covered by insurance.

PRISON DEATH FOR TWO BOYS

Joliet Warden Says Average "Lifer" Dies Within Ten Years.

NO PRIVILEGES

JOLIET, Ill., September 15. — "If Leopold and Loeb are alive twenty years from now they will have accomplished the miraculous," said Warden Whitman of the Joliet penitentiary. "The average life of a 'lifer' is only ten years in prison. Perhaps Loeb and Leopold can expect fifteen years in prison.

They are young and if they behave themselves they will be transferred to the new prison the first of the year where the surroundings are much better. But twenty-three years will be surprising and thirty three years will be miraculous.

Warden Whitman is of the opinion that Justice Caverly's decision blocks any parole.

"I have read the verdict carefully, and I consider it likely that the boys will die in prison," he said.

Great care will be taken to select proper cell mates for Leopold and Loeb. The warden said he would choose men who were able to lead the youths to a healthier view of life.

In Prison Garb.

Leopold and Loeb looked grotesque in their second hand prison garments when they reported for work. Hitherto they had valets to select and care for their clothes. On Saturday they clumped about in shoes that did not fit and in jackets whose sleeves were so long they had to turn them back. They were aroused at 6.30 a.m. tumbled from their hard straw pallets, washed hurriedly in cold water, and had a breakafast of hamburger steak, bread, butter, syrup and coffee. At 7.40 they were taken to the chapel, where a motion picture was shown, and immediately afterwards were taken to the furniture factory, and put to work. Neither had done a tap of work before and they were awkward, but their teachers displayed patience.

Throngs flocked to the penitentiary, hoping for a glimpse of the Franks slayers, but signs have been posted everywhere: "No prisoners will be identified by the guards."

Franks Family Move.

On the day Leopold and Loeb be- their sentence in the penitentiary, Jacob Franks, his wife, daughter and surviving son moved away from the home which once rang with the merriment of their son Robert. Since his kidnapping and murder it had become a house of horror to them. They are living at a hotel miles distant and probably will build a new home in a different section of the city.

The bird collection of 1,200 specimens owned by Leopold has been accepted by the Audobon Socety of Elgin. Six specimens, the prizes of the collection will go to the Field Museum of Chicago. Much of the work of collecting the specimens was done by Leopold near Elgin, and he was yell known and liked by the Audobon Society there.

Justice Caverly's sentence was the theme for at least two sermons in Chicago churches. The general public continues bitter in its criticism.

Smoke at Night.

WAUKEGAN, Ill., September 15. —Tobacco during the day will be denied Nathan F. Leopold, Jr., and Richard A. Loeb, at the Joliet penitentiary, Elmer Green of Waukegan, State Superintendent of Prisons said to-day. At night when they were locked in their cells they could smoke, he said, the same as other prisoners.

"The wealth of their families will not enable Leopold and Loeb to have any privileges that are forbidden to others," he added.

WIPE EDGES.

Before pouring milk or cream from a bottle always wipe the edges of the top carefully.

2 TORONTO STUDENTS DROWNED AT RICE LAKE SATURDAY EVENING

Their Canoe Was Swamped Opposite Hiawatha By Huge Waves Running Before Forty-Mile Wind—Two Companions Land at Idyl Wyld.

WERE PADDLING TO KEENE.

Two Toronto young men were drowned in Rice Lake on Saturday evening when their canoe was caught and swamped in the worst storm in the memory of Hiawartha Indians. Waves five feet high towered over the frail craft as they scudded before a forty-mile-an-hour gale and carried the boys helpless on their crest or plunged them into the troughs in momentary danger of sinking. Two other boys, in a second canoe, reached land safely.

Gerald Wood, 20, and Alfred Davis, -19, had been holidaying with Edward Ridley and Arden Hill at Bobcaygeon. The party paddled from there, leaving Peterborough at 8 o'clock on Saturday morning, intending to spend the week-end with Thomas Wallace ,near Keene. At 6.30 in the evening, they were opposite Hiawatha when the storm came, lashing the water into tremendous waves and forcing the boys to run before it to avoid instant swamping. When about the middle of the lake, the canoe containing Wood and Davis suddenly filled and sank from under them. Ridley and Hill saw their plight as they held tight to the sinking canoe and shouted to ask if they could help. "Go on; we'll make it alright," Wood and Davis called back, and Ridley and Hill were carried quickly from the spot by the waves and wind. If they had attempted to turn they would have surely failed, for no canoe could have lived broadside on to the waves. When they looked back they saw nothing but white-topped water.

Planned to Return.

Wood, one of the missing boys, had completed two years in his study of medicine, and Davis was just starting on his study of architecture at Toronto University. They left Bobcaygeon on Tuseday and after their week-end at Keene intended portaging there to Chemong Lake, to avoid the hard paddle up the Otonabee. From Chemong they would have paddled back to Bobcaygeon.

When the canoe containing Ridley and Hill landed safely an alarm was quickly raised and boats sent out to seek the missing boys. Lunches searched until after mid-night and were out again at daybreak yesterday morning. At one time yesterday there were twenty boats searching one part of the lake.

When the news reached the Indian village at Hiawatha volunteers were quickly enlisted, and many Indians offered their services. In a matter of fact way, intimating that they were simply doing their bit to help, thirty or more from the Indian village searched throughout the day for the bodies. Up to last night no success had attended their efforts.

Canoe Floated Ashore.

The canoe from which the young men were washed to their death came ashore at Idyl Wyld on Saturday night and was found by Mr. Merriman. Later their dunnage bags and bedding washed ashore to be found by Mr. Young, and on Sunday their paddles and cushions were found.

The survivors say the waves were so high at times the canoe was lifted so that they could not reach the water with their paddles. An Indian guide who was out with a passenger said he held his canoe in one place twenty minutes during the height of the storm, unable to make any headway, and his passenger had to lie perfectly still in the water-swept bottom of the scene.

WORLD FLYERS REACH DAYTON

Welcomed In Birthplace of Airplane—Chicago Next Stop.

REST ON SATURDAY.

DAYTON, Ohio, Sept. 15. — (Canadian Press).—Lieut. Lowell H. Smith and his world-girdling flyers rested Sunday after a tumultuous welcome accorded them when they landed at McCook Field, after completing their 425 miles hop from Washington.

The first long lap of their transcontinental flight which will end in Seattle was made without incident. The flight time was three hours and forty minutes.

Dayton, "birthplace of the airplane," spared no pains to stage a real home-coming celebration for the six aviators, who were welcomed as the most famous representatives of that industry for which the city is most noted. It was a genuine home-coming for Lieutenants John Harding and Erik Nelson, for McCook Field is their home station. Lieutenant Leigh Wade also was stationed at the field two years ago, and all of the fliers have scores of personal friends at McCook and Wilbur Wright fields. McCook Field is the army aviation experiment station.

DECLARES INNOCENCE.

MONTREAL, Sept 15.— "I am wholly inflocent of the heinous crime," declared Leo Davis, one of the six condemned to be hanged on Oct. 24, for the murder of Henri Cleroux and the hold up of the Bank of Hochelaga collection automobile on April 1.

The denial is embodied in a sworn affidavit signed by Davis on Saturday at Bordeaux jail before John J. Lomax, senior court stenographer and commissioner of the superior court, and Oscar Gagnon, one of the lawyers for the defence.

Another affidavit completely exonerating Davis from any participation in the crime was also signed by ex-detective Louis Morel.

The affidavits which were obtained with the sanction of the attorney-general were produced in the court of apeals, which opened this morning. It is probable that the appeal proceedings in the case of the six condemned to death will be heard first.

SATURDAY MAKES NEW RECORD—ATTENDANCE '24 GREATEST IN HISTORY

Saturday was a history making occasion for the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition, and although the thirty thousand mark was not reached there were 696 more passed through the gates at the 1924 Exhibition in the four days than in 1923, the previous record year for attendance.

On Saturday, the attendance was 8885, the largest day in the history of the Show and by all means an exceptional number for the last day which generally falls below Friday. It was a heroic effort on the part of the people of Peterboro and district to retrieve the losses suffered as a result of the inclement weather on the opening day.

The total attendance for the four days was 27,040, an increase of 696 over 1922 and 890 over 1923. Here is the record.

Wednesday:

Thursday	5807	5373	5601

POULTRY BEST QUALITY YET

There were exactly 1,106 birds at this year's Exhibition and 1,004 at the last fall show and not 1,200 as reported. According to the previous report, this would mean a backward step for the Exhibition, and also to the members of the Peterborough Poultry Association to whose efforts the success of the show can be attributed. From the time that between 400 and 500 birds constituted the entire poultry exhibit, this department has steadily grown and 1924 shows a gain of 102 over 1923, a remarkable increase, considering the fact that it has been a very poor year for chicks because of the late spring and cool summer.

Mr. George Paxman, who was one of the first to promulgate the Peterborough Poultry Association, has watched every step and development of this end of the Exhibition and declares the exhibit this year to be of best quality yet.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

THE TWINS VISIT MISTER RHINO

"Here I am," and he appeared dripping wet.

"Let's go and see Mister Rhino," said Weeny, after they had left Aunt Hannah Hippo's house.

"All right," said Nick and Nancy. They were having a wonderful time on their vacation, and were willing to go any place at all that Weeny suggested.

"Who's there?" called Mister Rhino when Weeny knocked on his door with his trunk.

"Company," called Weeny.

"Well, I can't let you in. I'm taking a bath," said Mister Rhino.

"All right—we'll wait on your doorstep," said Weeny. "We're not in any hurry."

"Oh, I'm not in my house. My bath-tub's in my front yard," said Mister Rhino. "Here I am," and he appeared dripping wet right out of a big mud puddle.

"Goodness!" said Weeny. "Why, you're as muddy as a potato, Mister Rhino. That's a funny way to take a bath."

"Oh, but it feels so good," said Mister Rhino. "And it makes my back stop itching. It's as itchy as a mosquito bite all over."

"We'll scratch your back 40 times a day if you'll just let us stay a while," said Weeny eagerly.

"Make it 50 and I'll say it's a bargain," said Mister Rhino.

"All right," said Weeny. "Get down, Twins, and be careful of my satchel."

"Just hang it on my nose and I'll take it in for you," said Mister Rhino cordially.

So Nick hung the satchel on the horn on Mister Rhino's nose and they all went into the house.

"Do you play casino?" asked Mister Rhino when they got inside.

"We do," said Nancy and Nick, "and 'Old Maid,' too."

But before Weeny could say whether he played casino or not, Mister Rhino began to shake his shoulders and wiggle all over. "There! I'm itchy again. Will someone please take that brush and scratch my back."

"Certainly," said Weeny obligingly, reaching for the brush with his trunk and giving Mister Rhino's back a good hard rub or two.

"Me, oh my! That's grand!" smiled Mister Rhino. "Thank you! Did you say you played casino?"

"Just a little—not so very much," said Weeny.

So the game began.

Nick had just started to build on fives, when suddenly Mister Rhino began to shake and wiggle again. "There goes my back again!" he declared. "It's as itchy as a hundred mosquito bites. Will someone please scratch it for me?"

Nick scratched it this time and the game went on.

Nancy had just made a sweep and got big and little casino when Mister Rhino jumped up again. "Who'll scratch my back again?" he asked, wiggling harder than ever.

"Say, is this casino or a back-scratching party?" demanded Weeny.

"Why, that's only three times and you said fifty," said Mister Rhino.

"Did I?" exclaimed Weeny in surprise. "Well, I said too much, I guess. I forgot to tell you that the baby's sick and mother's away and the cook left. I think I'll have to be going home."

And that was the end of that visit.

NEWS OF COBOURG.

Quinte Conference Reports Increase In Missionary Givings.

COBOURG, Sept. 13 (Special).—A missionary conference held at Port Hope on Wednesday and attended by representations from all of the districts of the Bay of Quinte conference revealed the fact that the Quinte conference was the only one to report last year an increase in missionary givings. Delegates were present as follows: Peterborough District—Rev. C. S. Reddich, chairman; Rev. A. J. Langford. Campbellford District—Rev. C. W. Barrett, chairman; Rev. F. C. Joblin, Mr. W. Martin. Madoc District—Rev. L. S. Wight, chairman; Mr. W. Gordon. Lindsay District—Rev. W. A. Archer, chairman; Rev. W. A. Barraclough, Mr. J. L. Welsh. Cannington District—Rev. A. E. McCutcheon, chairman. Whitby District—Rev. R. C. Carruthers, chairman; Rev. H. J. Latimer, Rev. W. Higgs, Mr. S. Jeffrey. Bowmanville District—Rev. J. U. Robins, chairman; Rev. A. Whattam. Brighton District—Rev. J. S. I. Wilson, president of conference; Rev. S. C. Moore. Picton District—Rev. G. C. R. McQuade, Rev. J. D. P. Knox, Mr. R. W. Ireland. Belleville District—Rev. F. E. Mallott, chairman; Rev. Enos Farnsworth, Mr. H. C. Ackerman. Napanee District—Rev. A. J. Terrill, chairman; Rev. H. B. Neal, Rev. W. D. Harrison. Cobourg District—Rev. F. W. White, chairman; Rev. F. J. Horwood, Camborne; Rev. J. W. Baird, Port Hope; Rev. H. A. Bunt, Canton; Rev. J. F. Mears, Port Hope; Messrs. F. W. Galbraith, Port Hope; W. H. Hopper, Cobourg; A. Fulford, H. Fulford, W. A. Meadows, E. Brown, Port Hope.

About forty men assembled altogether in a noteworthy missionary convention. The forenoon session was spent in receiving reports. Ways and means were discussed of creating additional enthusiasm and missionary interest on circuits, especially any that had reported deficits. At the noon hour the Gleaners' Society served an excellent dinner.

Two splendid addresses marked the afternoon session, and they were listened to with much interest.

A most interesting feature was the address by Mr. Liu Dse Rhu, a Christian worker and renowned philanthropist of Chongking, China, who has recently come to Canada while making a tour of the world. The speaker was ably interpretated by Rev. W. Plewman. He gave an address that was replete with interest from his opening to his closing words, and which goes to show how large a part a native worker of wealth and influence may take in the regeneration of the Chinese.

Rev. Dr. Arnup, of Toronto, assistant secretary of foreign missions, also gave an able address. He briefly referred to the great work that had been accomplished by Methodism in Canada, which this year celebrates its centenary of missionary effort and achievement.

Mr. G. H. Ridout of the general missionary staff, Toronto, was present, and gave valued assistance to the convention.

Plans were discussed for holding centenary celebrations in all circuits in the conference next month.

GENERAL PERSHING IS THROUGH

By LUDWELL DENNY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (United Press)—General John J.Pershing locked up his desk in the War Department Saturday after the Defense Test returns are in, and officially ended the greatest career in American military history for several generations.

Sixty-four years old, today upstanding and apparently in the prime of life, ineptable army regulations which fix that age as the end of a man's active usefulness have crowded him into retirement.

"He'll leave a mighty big hole around here when he goes," said the old non-com. at the War Department.

When Pershing looks at you out of his steady blue eyes, you just naturally straighten up. Personality plus a leader whom men follow instinctively! There is tremendous fire and vigor in the man. He radiates will-power. His self-possession and poise are contagious.

Interested in Men.

"Black Jack" is interested in men, rather than ideas. Coupled with this interest in people is a native instinct for ordering their lives, for governing. Order is a passion with him. Wherever he has gone, whatever he has done, he has gravitated to the tasks of organization. In his early days as military instructor at the University of Nebraska, again in the Cuban campaign, as a provincial governor in the Philippines, in France, even in the post-war period—always he has stood out as a great administrator, one who brings order out of chaos.

Many men can tell others what to do. But Pershing can make them do it. The explanation? His rare combination of personal mastery and charm!

Was Not a Prodigy.

There are more brilliant officers in the Army. He was no prodigy at West Point. In academic learning he is surpassed by others. As a tactician he does not rank with the great generals of history or with Foch, the French leader. Nor is he exceptionally daring. He has never done foolhardy stunts to convince others of his bravery. Flashiness is alien to his nature. There is nothing reckless about him. He is steady—dependable in the sense that he has never failed when put to the test.

Fifteen years elapsed before he advanced from second lieutenant to captain. Then he vaulted seniority rules and jumped over his superior officers into the rank of brigadier general. As long as it was a question of routine service, Pershing was capable without the windowfront of superficial brilliance that secures advancement. But in each crisis he rose as a natural leader.

Discipline is the first word in his vocabulary. Training is the second. Preparedness rather than cleverness is his method.

Pershing's unusual achievement consists in being a severe disciplinarian and at the same time popular. Though a stickler for discipline, only once in his varied career has this severity cost him the affection of those under him. That was as an instructor at West Point. Even then the students respected his ability.

Always a Leader.

From the beginning he has been a leader. As a boy in a frontier town, he led. As a student at West Point he was chosen ranking officer and class president, even though his academic rank was only fair. He sophisticated Eastern classmates at the military academy followed the Missouri youth with the straight figure and dogged jaw.

Perhaps pioneer stock and early harsdips explain his self-mastery, the key to his mastery over others. He was born on the Missouri frontier, a region of strife between abolitionists and slave-holders even bfeore the Civil War. A shanty was the first home provided by his father, a section boss on the new railroad. After the panic of '73, John at 13 had to combine a man's work on the farm with attendance at school.

Teaching School.

Soon he was teaching school. First it was negro children, then the "regular" school at Prairie Mound, near his Laclede home. Meanwhile he sandwiched in courses at the state normal school.

This thirst for education, rather than the glamor of soldier life, led him at 22 to take the local examinations for West Point. He beat his competitor by one point. Even at the military academy it was the general cultural advantages that attracted him. Half way through West Point he was planning to start an immigration project in Oregon after his graduation.

Five years of Indian fighting as a cavalry lieutenant on the Mexican border and in the Northwest satisfied his love of adventure and outdoor life, but only intensified his desire for education. He landed an appointment as military instructor at the University of Nebraska. There he took a law course and upon graduation was admitted to the state bar.

Goes to West Point.

At Lincoln he formed friendships which later helped him in his rapid rise. He found the students and faculty pacifists and indifferent to military training. When he left, his student corps ranked next to West Point in efficiency. With this record and social charm developed in Lincoln society, he made a favorable impression upon General Miles, chief of staff. After his year at a Montana Indian post, Miles gave him the coveted appointment to the West Point faculty.

"Black Jack," the students named him because he was such a stern disciplinarian. First they called him "Nigger Jack"—his original outfit, the 10th Cavalry, was a negro regiment.

He was trying to get into the Judge Advocate General's corps where he could make use of his law training, when the Spanish-American war broke. Then he asked to be made colonel of Nebraskan Volunteers, but he was not so lucky as William Jennings Bryan who landed such a job. He went to Cuba as a quartermaster.

He helped the 10th Cavalry save Roosevelt's Rough Riders at Las Guasimas. General Wood recommended his advancement to the Staff Corps for "gallantry and efficiency" in action. As one of thousands of malarial victims due to inadequate sanitary provisions and mismanagement and graft in the supply service, "J. J. P." became an advocate of preparedness for the next war.

In Philippines.

After a few months as a desk officer at the War Department following the Cuban experience, he got himself transferred to active service again on "clean-up work" in the Philippines. He went to the Islands relatively unknown. Three and a half years later he returned as one of the most famous officers in the Army. With a combined policy of onciliation and force he had subdued a Moro revolt, learned some of the native language, made friends of the chief's who sconecrated him a "dato" or sultan, and established a reputation as a colonial administrator.

Captain Pershing's name was now in all the newspapers. Generals, including Wood, joined with statesmen in recommending his promotion to brigadier general. Roosevelt had him dine at the White House, and mentioned him by name in the presidential message to Congress as deserving brigadier rank despite seniority rules.

Pershing Marries.

On the wave of this popularity Pershing met and married the daughter of the wealthy Senator Warren of Wyoming, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs. The wedding was attended by the President, Cabinet, Army and Navy officers, and the Diplomatic Corps.

He and his bride left immediately for his new post as military observer attache at Tokio. The Russo-Jap war was on. He was an observer with the Japanese army throughout the Manchurian campaign.

Roosevelt promoted him from captain to brigadier general when he returned to Tokio. Though Wood, Bell, Crozier and others had been jumped over their seniors in similar manner, the howl went up that Pershing had "pull" through his father-in-law. Since then the unwarranted price Pershing has had to pay for rapid advancement and popularity has been the charge of favoritism.

After crossing Siberia to Paris as observer for an expected Balkan war, he asked to return to the Philippines as Military Governor of the Moro Province. He remained there until December 1913, having accomplished complete disarmament of the natives and established a record as a colonial administrator which has never been surpassed by a military man.

The Great Tragedy.

Returning to the States he received command of the 8th Brigade, which began patroling the Mexican border in January 1914. There sorrow met and almost conquered him. His wife and children were about to join him in El Paso when they were caught in the Presidio fire in San Francisco. Only his small son escaped. Fellow officers feared he would go insane. Since then his jaw has been even more firmly set, and the mark of loneliness has never left the Commander.

The Punitive Expedition into Mexico to catch Villa "dead or alive" was welcomed by Pershing. For almost a year he commanded the American troops under every conceivable handicap. The Villaistas were adepts at guerilla warfare. Then the Mexican federal army attacked him. The American government and the Army organization back in the States failed to give adequate support in supplies and equipment. He did not capture Villa. But as a recognition of leadership under supreme difficulties he was made major general.

Three months after his return from Mexico he was on the Atlantic bound for France as Commander-in-Chief of America's Expeditionary Forces, which were to number two million and a half.

The Great Organizer.

Pershing is the great organizer produced by the World War. He was a general without an army. It had to be created, equipped, trained. Even his staff had to be produced out of hand. No wonder the Allies thought the task impossible, that rather than attempt to build a separate American Army our soldiers should serve in scattered units as a part of the French and British armies under foreign commanders.

Pershing was dining with the king of England and receiving the ovations of Paris, but underneath was this conflict of ideas. The Allies under the pressure of battle were taking a short view, Pershing was looking ahead. He refused to be rushed. He told them they must hold the line another year—and cabled Washington he must have a million men within a year and munitions and supplies for three million. He established headquarters at Chaumont and began his long preparation for the Meuse-Argonne campaign.

"Black Jack" opposed the idea of a supreme war council and demanded a supreme commander. When Foch took over in April 1918, Pershing won two points: the American Army was recognized equally with the French and British with its individual command under Foch. Only July 4 the A. E. F. took over the Chateau-Thierry region, and in August the First American Army became responsible for the St. Mihiel sector.

He Makes Good.

While the Allies accepted the war-of-position tactics and trench fighting, Pershing prepared for a war-of-movement. They relied on the hand-grenade, he trained his men with the rifle. The Allies hoped for a successful drive in the spring of 1919. He reported he was ready to risk the entire American forces in a quick and supreme drive to end the war before snow-fall. In the Argonne drive he made good his promise, cut the German line of retreat, and hastened the armistice.

NEWS FROM MADOC.

Flower Show Was a Big Success—List of Prize Winners.

MADOC, Sept. 15.—Many expressions of admiration were heard on Saturday when the Horticultural Society held its annual flower show in the Public Library. Last year a comparatively small exhibition was held when the flowers were shown in the windows of Cross and Co.'s store. Much appreciation was expressed on that occasion, but this year enthusiasm ran high, and it was felt that great advances had been made. Both rooms at the Library were turned into bowers of beauty and fragrance, and many visitors were present during the afternoon and evening, pleased to greet the old familiar favorites among the flowers and to make the acquaintance of many new varieties.

Rev. R. A. Cranston, of Trenton, and Mr. P. W. Fairman, principal of the Trenton High School, were competent judges. Both men have had a good deal of experience in growing flowers, and made some valuable suggestions in regard to next year's exhibition.

The prizes were awarded as follows:

Best fern, potted—1, F. Dafoe; 2, Mrs. W. Wyper.

Best foliage, potted—1, Mrs. W. Wyper; 2, Mrs. Wm. Lahey.

Among the unlisted flowers brought only for display were some very fine double sunflowers and a potted plant of gloxinia. This latter had two blooms of a rich beautiful purple color, and was frequently the centre of attraction. It was owned by Mrs. Wyper. In some of the bouquets were some remarkably fine spikes of cock's comb and the dainty green and white snow on the mountain.

There were thirty-five exhibitors, and approximately two hundred entries. Thanks are due to the ladies of the association who arranged the flowers, and remained in charge while the exhibition was open. At the close of the evening each exhibitor was privileged to do as desired with the flowers, and it is safe to say that practically all were given to the sick and the churches.

The promoters of the flower show are well pleased with the results, and hope that another year will see double the number of exhibitors, with equal improvement in varieties and perfection of flowers grown.

District Meeting.

The Methodist District Conference was held on Friday. About thirty ministers and laymen were present. The Ladies' Aid served both dinner and tea in the basement of the church for the visitors. In the evening a very enjoyable open session was held.

The many friends of Mr. Malcolm Bristol will be pleased to learn that he is on the mend after having been confined to his home for several days.

Mrs. D. Haslip has returned from a pleasant visit in Toronto and Detroit.

Mr. J. Marcellus is improving in health, and hopes to be able to return to his school duties in another month.

Mrs. David Brown and Mrs. M. Brown spent last week in Trenton.

TALK SHOWS POWER OF PUBLIC OPINION

Story Is About Kentucky Orphan Girl.

By ABICE ROHE.

Seldom has the crushing power of those sand-bagging words, "they say", been illustrated in so relentless a manner as Emanie N. Sachs' novel, "Talk" (Harpers).

In spite of the fact or, rather, because of the fact, that the story is unfolded amid everyday people and revealed through everyday incidents the destructive power of this traditional fetish stalks through the book as grimly as Nemesis through an old Greek tragedy.

There is, however, plenty of subtle humor and even more subtle satire in this story of a small Kentucky town.

Indeed, Emanie Sachs in "Talk" has done more than write a gripping novel. She has reared a momnuent to the dead and wasted power of all the women whose natural abilities were sacrificed on the traditional altar called "woman's sphere".

The author has taken a period which is strangely significant and yet notably unspectacular for women. It is the period in which the mothers of the present generation and the grandmothers also have to do. It is no story such as our drama likes to unfold of the flapper daughter being brought to her senses by the out-flappering mother or grandmother. Instead it is a grim recital of the destruction of those pioneer women who, unfitted for a mere "kirche, kinder, kuche" existence were distorted into miserable semblances of the accepted type instead of becoming constructive elements in life.

The Story.

The story is told through the life of a Delia Morehouse, daughter of a well-to-do Kentucky family suddenly left an impoverished orphan. Delia is a wretched housekeeper but has an inherent sense for business. This she proves by her management of an inherent book store. But people think and people say it is unheard of for a lady to go into business. Woman's place is the noblest of all caring for her husband and children. Delia knowing her utter incapability for domesticity and realizing her aptitude for business, loathing housekeeping, adoring her little shop, falls before public opinion, marries, and becomes not only for herself but for her weak, selfish, handsome husband, a miserable futility. For with her sacrifice to public opinion, she is a misfit after all. Public opinion, against her for wanting to be a business woman, later arraigns her for what she has become, a woman absorbed in the details of housework. Other types of women are characterized with a fine discriminating realism. There is Eudora Dexter, who doesn't care a hang what people say. She marries a millionaire, divorces him and becomes a famous dancer. There is the narrow, self-indulgent mother-in-law, interfering, conventional and irritatingly true to type. There is Janice, the daughter, who snaps her fingers at public opinion, and goes—not to the devil—but to John Hopkins for higher mathematics.

Miss Sachs' talent for analysis and characterization are combined with the power of never losing the reader's interest for a moment.

BACK

International trade between nations is steadily increasing—getting back toward normal after the war-time upset. It's difficult to tell just how much, on account of the almost constant changes in foreign money values. But, in the first six months this year, the tonnage of exports from seven leading countries showed a gain over the corresponding period of 1923, and in imports five gained while only two dropped.

The ploughshares, beaten from swords, will soon be as busy as ever than friction tape for aerial work.

THE FRENCH BUDGET.

Premier Continues Task of Keeping Down Expenses.

PARIS, Sept. 15.—Canadian Press—The French budget for 1925 is to be kept down to 30,000 millions of France, all of which will be covered by revenue from permanent taxes, Premier Herriott, is resolved, according to Excelsior. The premier this week is continuing his task of pruning budget items down to the requisite proportions.

A total of $75 is awarded in prizes, the money being divided as follows: $20, $15, $12, $10, $8, $6 and $4.

School Convention

CHINESE FIGHT

for the fighting next week includes the use of new French Citroen armored trucks on the Hwangtu front, all being driven by Russians who campaigned in Siberia against the Reds. The Chinese are guaranteeing the Russians $100 a month, $500 if they are injured and $2,000 to their relatives if they are killed.

25,000 CHRISTIANS READY TO FIGHT.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—Chang Tso-lin can send 100,000 troops into Chihli without risking loss of control of Manchuria unless he is severely defeated in the field, it is estimated in Peking, according to a dispatch from Reuter's correspondent there.

The Chihli forces will also number about 100,000, including 25,000 Christians under General Feng Yuh-siang, who is earnestly preparing for war.

The recent visit to Peking of one of General Feng's new brigades, which arrived with old guns, rifles and other equipment, and their return to Tungchow the same day aroused local speculation until it was learned that the troops came to be baptized. On reaching Peking the old arms were exchanged for new ones, the men were baptized and the new weapons solemnly blessed, after which the brigade marched off, singing hymns.

These soldiers have been trained by Spartan methods and their discipline and efficiency is of the highest order. If Chang attacks Peking, General Feng's men will be in the forefront of the Chihli Army as they were in 1922.

SAFETY FIRST.

The shooting fatality near Janetville the other day and a similar accident on the same day in another part of the Province indicates the necessity of hunters exercising care in the handling of their weapons.

Experienced woodsmen and hunters, of course, are almost invariably careful and accidents among them are seldom reported.

It is the novice who gets hurt or hurts somebody else by his reckless manipulation of firearms.

In last week's cases the accidental discharge of a shotgun was responsible for two deaths.

Inexperienced people who go duck-shooting for a few days should take warning from these fatalities and learn something about safety first principles before they endanger their own life or that of some other member of their party through their carelessness.

A loaded shotgun is not the safest thing in the world to pull along the ground or to drag toward one through a fence or to be dropped carelessly into a canoe—yet novice duck-hunters do one or all these things unless they are told about them before their hunting trip commences.

There is in most folks an itching to get out somewhere and try to kill something with a gun.

It would be just as well if people learned something about the handling of firearms before embarking upon such expeditions.

THE FIGHT IS ON.

The plebiscite battle, with the form of the questions announced, is at last definitely under way.

Indications are that it will be a vigorous campaign, as both sides are well organized and both intend to use all avenues of publicity in reaching the electorate.

Let us hope that the fight will be as clean as it is strenuous.

Personalities should be kept out of the campaign—there is not the slightest need for personal attacks in discussing an issue of this kind.

On one side there is the tendency to regard everybody as a hypocrite or a puritanical busybody who supports the Ontario Temperance Act.

On the other, a habit of classing as a drinker and a sinner all persons who believe that some other system of dealing with the liquor problem is preferable to the Ontario Temperance Act.

Is it too much to hope that in this present fight the people of Ontario can show themselves broad-minded enough to realize that there is honesty of opinion on both sides of this question?

There is plenty of ammunition available in a discussion of the relative merits of the policies offered, and it should be possible to confine the argument to the issue itself.

THE PLEBISCITE QUESTIONS.

The questions to be voted on when the O. T. A. plebiscite is taken on October 23rd have been announced.

There are two, instead of the four first hinted at by newspapers friendly to the Ontario administration, and they are clear and simple enough to be understood by every voter.

The first simply seeks to find out whether or not the majority of the people of Ontario favour the present Ontario Temperance Act.

If the answer to this question is affirmative, the Act, of course, will remain in force.

If the majority votes "no" then the alternative offered is the sale of liquor and beer in sealed packages under Government control—not, the Premier explains, the system in force in British Columbia and Quebec, but the sale of liquor by the Government "under strict regulations."

No clause in regard to the sale of liquor in licensed premises or to the sale of wines and beers in licensed premises will be submitted.

For the extreme wets this will be a disappointment, but the decision to omit any reference to these two systems from the ballots seems a wise one.

There does not seem the slightest likelihood of either proposal being carried.

By far the greater proportion of the population of Ontario is utterly opposed to the return of the open bar, and had these two clauses been added to the ballot the proposals would have been buried under a pile of votes.

They could not carry, and their addition would have complicated the ballot and rendered it less easy to get an accurate expression of opinion.

The questions are accepted by Prohibition leaders without much complaint, and by Moderation League officials as satisfactory.

The former regret the fact that Premier Ferguson did not see fit to include in his announcement a statement to the effect that should the Ontario Temperance Act be sustained the Government would further strengthen the measure and enforce it effectively, but they accept the issue as laid down and are commencing the fight.

The questions have the merit of clearness, and there does not seem any chance of electors failing to understand just what is being asked of them.

The campaign, fortunately, will be short, but it promises to be decidedly brisk.

LABOR'S RIGHTS AND DUTIES.

No one will acuse Mr. J. Ramsay MacDonald, England's great Labor Premier, of antagonism to labor, says the Ottawa Journal. When, therefore, Mr. MacDonald declares, as he has just declared in a new preface to his notable book on Socialism, that "in the legitimate struggle to remedy their hard and unjust condition the workers are being tempted to force .... and consequently only injure themselves," sensible workers should take pause.

"The trade unionist," says Mr. MacDonald, "has the same limitation imposed upon him in this respect as the capitalist—he cannot advance his interest at the expense of society."

That is good, sound and true doctrine.

The Journal has consistently fought selfish, unsympathetic, greedy employers who look upon labor as a commodity to be bought in the cheapest market, and who know not the meaning of co-operation nor the justice of a right reward. It will continue to wage that fight. But it holds, and will continue to hold, just as strongly, that labor, too, has its obligations and its duties—duties and obligations which do not embrace unreasonable demands, force to compel their acceptance, and, above all, violation of the sanctity of agreements.

Fortunately, the overwhelming bulk of Labor leaders, men who are realists first and theorists afterwards, are well alive to such truths.

CHIEF JUSTICE MARTIN AND THE PRESS.

Chief Justice Martin raised a very interesting point in his opening address yesterday when he proposed that restrictions should be placed by law upon the measure and character of publicity that the press may give in criminal cases prior to the open trial. This law, if the advice of the Chief Justice is taken, would restrict the newspapers to the publication of official statements by the police and the Crown Attorney.

Of course, in practice—as the Chief Justice probably does not know—the newspapers in Canada now get practically all their information regarding crimes from the police. The police constitute not only the natural source of news in such cases, but usually the only source. It is the police who arrest the suspects and who know the reasons for the arrests. If they did not take the press into their confidence, the press would as a rule be absolutely in the dark. The press employs reporters, not detectives—in spite of lurid "movies" and frantic fiction to the contrary.

There are cases, of course, where the press does not wait for the police; but we imagine that in these cases the Chief Justice himself, having a healthy interest in events that profoundly affect the public, would no more want us to wait than would anybody else. Take the case of the Hochelaga Bank bandits. The crime occurred early in the afternoon. The newspapers got their first news from the police. But, being enterprising journalists, we did not sit down at the end of a telephone and wait for the police to furnish the details. We had only an hour or two to gather all the information possible for our eager readers; so we covered the district with an army of reporters, saw everybody in a position to know anything, interviewed the affected bank, and generally got together as full and reliable a story as was possible for the convenience of the greatly stirred people of Montreal that evening.

The press has a real duty to its readers in such a case. They practically pay us to find out what we can for them about so vitally interesting an event happening in their very midst. We are as bound to "deliver the goods"—provided we do not hinder justice—as is any other merchant. And we try to do so. In a sense, we estand for the whole public. That is why the free admission of the press to a trial is regarded as making that trial "public," even if only the smallest number of the general public can get in.

Of course, no responsible journalist would knowingly publish anything calculated to defeat or deflect the ends of justice. The Chief Justice will find the Canadian press as a whole entirely willing to co-operate with him to this end. We do not want to be pharisaical about it, but our fellow journalists to the South enjoy a license in the treatment and discussion of criminal cases that is wholly contrary to British practice and is not imitated in Canada. For instance, the press comment all through the United States on the Loeb-Leopold case, while it was still sub-judice, would have brought any editor in the British Empire before the bar of justice.

We assume the Chief Justice is not thinking of the American press in his fear of pre-trial publicity. The Canadian press is already restricted by law. That is, when we publish a statement affecting any citizen, be he prisoner or not, we are amenable to the law of libel; and any editor will tell the Chief Justice, if he is in doubt, that the law of libel in Quebec is a Draconian statute which the press regards as altogether unfair and by no means altogether in the public interest.

We are all especially watchful of this law in a criminal case. To hint that a man has anything to do with a shocking crime is about as savage a libel as can be perpetrated, if the man is innocent. It is hardly necessary to assure the Bench that we are exceedingly careful precisely on this point. In fact, newspapers have before now had to pay heavy damages for printing a report that they got in perfect good faith from the police when it so happened that somewhere along the line a mistake was made.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The old phrase of the circus bills is the only fitting description of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition—"Bigger, better and grander than ever."

Now that they know what the questions are to be, the dry and wet forces can unlimber all their artillery. The battle is on.

Chinese soldiers have upset tradition by fighting during a rain storm. Probably somebody started to sign "Taint Gonna Rain No More" and aroused the fighting spirit of everybody.

The Flower Show is the next big local event that should be liberally patronized. It promises to produce some wonderful exhibits.

The latest political rumour suggests that Sir Arthur Currie is being groomed as successor to Mr. Meighen as leader of the Conservative Party. It comes from Montreal.

Is it true, as the Toronto Star puts it, that nobody need fear hanging in Chicago so long as he has a dollar left.

The Wild Bull, judging from the reports of the Wills-Firpo fight, seems to have been thoroughly tamed.

With the Exhibition over, Peterborough people will begin to realize that the time for Christmas shopping is not so very far away.

A THOUGHT

A VALUABLE TIP

If you are about to marry, marry the one that can manage you right.

The thoughts that you constantly entertain are as plain to other people as the illuminated billboard. No man can continue to think crooked and make folks think he is straight. No man can think discouraged thoughts and get any good out of them. Sometime ago this magazine said: "What you think, you are." Now get this straight in your think-tank: What you think you are, you may not be.

The individual without imagination is without a sense of humor, devoid of an appreciation of the beautiful and good, lacks the power of comparison, is uninteresting, unattractive, positively nil—so why let's bother with him?—The Silent Partner.

WASP-WAIST

The wasp-waist is returning to torture women and injure the next generation of babies, corset makers claim. Already the wasp waist is appearing here and there in Europe.

They predicted the same thing about hoop skirts. Bobbed hair has been doomed times over. High French heels have started our way innumerable times, and never arrived. Women no longer ape crazy fashions willingly.

They increasingly dress for health and comfort, possibly intuitively sensing that men are more attracted by natural feminine beauty than by caricatures of it.

GOOD SANDWICH FILLING.

Pineapple cut into small portions and combined with cream cheese makes a delicious sandwich filling.

HEMORRHOIDS

Do not suffer another day with Itching, Bleeding, or Protruding Piles or Hemorrhoids. No surgical operation required. Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you at once and afford lasting benefit. 60c a box; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Sample box free.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Sept. 15.—(Canadian Press).—A fair amount of business was done here Saturday in grain for export account, there being a steady demand in both the United Kingdom and the Continent for supplies. Prices were steady. The inquiry from local and American exporters for all lines of grain were fair. In the spot supplies of oats the feeling was firm, with a moderate demand for odd car lots for domestic requirements.

There was no further change in the condition of the local market for spring wheat, grain and flour, prices being well maintained. The demand from foreign buyers was brisk. The tone of the market for winter wheat flour was very firm and prices were unchanged.

The demand from United States buyers for mill feed was reported fairly brisk and prices were firm. There was also an improved demand for supplies on country account.

There was no change in the local egg situation, the market on the whole being active and prices were well maintained.

The feature of the butter market was the easier feeling that prevailed in the market, and prices closed 1-2c per pound lower than a week ago. Trade was quiet.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—(Canadian Press).—Sharp breaks in the price of every grain resulted Saturday from a statement by the Kansas State Board of Agriculture that wheat and corn advances of late have apparently discounted all known bullish conditions. The statement was at first ascribed to the United States Department of Agriculture. Closing quotations on wheat were steady, but 1 3-4 to 2 cents lower. December 1.31 7-2 and 1.32 and May 1.38 3-8 to 1.38 1-2. Corn finished 1 1-4 to 2 cents down, oats 3-8 to 1 1-8 off and provisions varying from 10 decline to 12 gain.

QUEBEC BUTTER.

MONTREAL, Sept. 15.—(Canadian Press).—At the Quebec Agricultural Co-operative Society's auction sale held here last week, the total offerings were 5,250 packages, as compared with 6,050 packages for the previous week. Of the above quantities offered only 1,650 packages of No. 1 creamery were sold under the hammer at 34 1-8c per pound and 350 packages No. 2 creamery at 33 1-8c per pound, the balance being special and No. 1 pasteurized creamery, for which the prices bid were considered too low.

STERLING RATES.

MONTREAL, Sept. 15.—(Canadian Press).—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here Saturday as follows: Sterling demand, 4.47; sterling cables, 4.47 3-8.

HERE AND THERE

STOLEN

Financial crimes cost the public 3000 million dollars a year, reports American Institute of Accountants. The figure has been broadcast before. But it's worth repeating. Fake stocks take a third of the total. Credit frauds get away with 400 millions, emblezzlements and forgeries 200 millions. The rest comes under various other classifications of theft.

It's a big total. Such losses are buttered out over the entire public, so about 6 cents out of every $1 an American earns is taken from him as toll to crookedness. That's one item of cost of living.

CROOKED

Three billion dollars a year are stolen from Americans in financial crimes alone. More billions of theft of property. Still more that are lost by petty dishonesty—short-weight, short-service and other forms of giving less than one is paid for.

It requires no Einsten mathematical genius to demonstrate on paper that a fifth of the American people's income is absorbed by dishonesty. Why not teach, in the schools, honesty as an exact science, more profitable than crookedness?

NEWSPAPERS

Fewer but better newspapers are semi-military collar that stands up University School of Journalism.

What is meant by a "better" paper? Fifty and more years ago, journalism was better than today—in fancy writing, looks or the printed product and other forms of technique. But modern papers conspicuously excel the old-timers in politics. The old-timers were usually one-sided, unfair and unscrupulously partisan.

ARKANSAS

Arkansas furnished better physical specimens than any other state, reports the War Department, reviewing the 1923 civilian military training camps. Kansas and Arizona close behind.

The east wears tortoise-rim specs and gradually inclines toward effeminacy. The virile west, a younger civilization, is a go-getter. There's as much difference between the people east and west of the Mississippi as at the two sides of the Rhine.

SPOILED.

More than 12,000 seizures and prosecutions, for adulterating and misbranding foods and medicines, have been made under the national pure food and drugs law. Offenses range all the way from putting an olive oil label on cottonseed oil, to marketing impure medicinal drugs.

This is a start in the right direction, but only a start. Foods should be safeguarded all the way until they reach consumers' mouths in a pure state. Cities, for instance, should have ordinances compelling sterilization of spoons and forks used at soda fountains and eating places.

OPPORTUNITY

While other farmers were discouraged by a "grasshopper plague," Victor Niles of Indiana began catching the hoppers to sell to fishermen for bait. He found his market unlimited, selling 800 a day at a cent apiece.

Opportunity is not found, it is made. And trouble sometimes is opportunity in disguise.

INCREMENT.

Land bought by his father 55 years ago for $65 an acre is sold in Chicago by Julius Hohlfelder for $63,000 an acre.

The land itself has not changed in those 55 years. The increase in value is due to the productive activities of the swarms of people who have made the land a center of congestion. Julius gets the reward, quite proper as long as we have the present "unearned increment" system.

Later the public may claim for itself all values created by the public's activities. If the airplane breaks up the cities, city land values will crash.

SERVICE.

The existence of a transportation company is only justified by its de[illegible] to the public. Who says so? A "radical." No. The [illegible] Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railways.

Applying his theory: The primary function of a railroad is service to the public, not just money-making.

Thornton properly suggests that the principle applies to individuals in their relation to the public, quite as much as to railroads.

TELEPATHY

If man ever communicates with people on Mars, it will be by telepathy, not radio or airplane. Flammarion, the great French astronomer, voiced that prediction last December.

If two radio machines can transmit a message between each other, there's no reason why two human brains can't do the same. The brain is infinitely superior to its products, of which radio is just one. Telepathy—thought transference—may be the eventual worldwide language, not spoken Esperanto. Genius already gets "inspiration" from some far-off unknowa source—telepathy, "brain radio."

BEER

More beer is drunk by the average person in Bavaria than any other county—67 gallons a year for every man, woman and child. That's about a pint and a half a day apiece. It seems rather temperate to a nation whose national drink for generations was corn or rye whiskey.

Farm Book-keeping

More and more the experienced farmer realizes the importance of accurate book-keeping.

The farmer who opens a Chequing Account with the Bank of Montreal is enabled to keep an exact record of receipts and expenditure and to have the helpful advice of an experienced banker whenever he needs it.

We shall be pleased to supply you with a Farmer's Account Book free of charge.

EARLY DAYS AROUND KIRKFIELD

The little village of Kirkfield is siruated about twenty-six miles from Lindsay in the northern part of Eldon Township, and may be reached by water, rail or motor. One hundred years ago there was no Kirkfield. About the year 1830 a number of families moved into the northern part of the township and took up land, among whom were the Campbells, Mackenzies, McCredies, McReas, Merrys and Munros. Alexander Munro was the first settler on the site of Kirkfield. Later came the McLaughlins and Rays. Alexander Ray was the first township clerk.

The earliest roads were blazed trails, and it took a whole day to travel with an ox-cart from Lorneville to Beaverton. It became a question among the settlers whether they would buy their supplies from Cameron's store at Beaverton or at Purdy's Mills, now the town of Lindsay. In 1871, the old Midland Railway was completed as far as Beaverton, and the next year the Toronto-Nipissing, running from Toronto to Coboconk, in Bexley, was built, and this gave Kirkfield railway communication with the outside world. Eldon Township gave a bonus of $44,000, which was considerably beyond their means at that time.

If there was no Kirkfield one hundred years ago, the Kirkfield of today is vastly different to that of even forty years ago.

Situated at the juncture of the colonization road, built by the Government in the early forties, known as the Portage Road, with the main road running up from Hartley through Palestine, Kirkfield for many years was a very busy centre of industry and commerce.

While the Mackenzies have ways been identified with the development and growth of Kirkfield there are other names, well known to some of the present generation. Forty years ago there were general stores conducted by A. C. Mackenzie, M. Perry, J. W. Shields and M. O'Neill, wagon shops by Alex. Munro and William King, as well as other lines of business by W. A. McCrae, A. Hodfield, R. G. Wright, Robt. Boynton. Everyone will remember Hector Campbell and Andy Gusty who kept the two hotels which flourished over forty years ago. Alexander Fraser conducted a blacksmith shop for many years.

But things have changed. The late Lady Mackenzie purchased the two hotel properties and erected on the site of the Campbell House a beautiful summer hotel known as the Kirkfield Inn, which is kept as an ideal place for the accommodation of the travelling public, all the year round and nearby is the beautiful summer home of the late Sir William and Lady Mackenzie. In fact, the beautiful roads and avenues, with parks and trees and shrubbery has made Kirkfield famous with many of the prominent people from the larger centres who often spend their holidays or week-ends in this quiet, home-like hostelry, where there is an atmosphere of culture and refinement, combined with comfort, and the excellent service rendered is appreciated by the better class of American and Canadian tourist.

One of the oldest business men in Kirkfield today is Mr. John McKay, who came to Kirkfield in 1886 and opened up a woollen mill in company with Mr. Wm. Robinson, which was carried on for twenty years, and afterwards Mr. McKay kept a general store. Mr. Rod McKay is now keeping a restaurant and confectionery store. He is also clerk for the township of Eldon. Another well-known business man in Kirkfield is Mr. J. J. Faed, son of the late Wm. Faed, of Cannington. Mr. Faed has been in business for seventeen years and keeps a large and splendid stock of drugs, stationery, fancy goods and also keeps a restaurant for the serving of ice cream and soft drinks.

The Sterling Bank, which established a branch in Kirkfield over fifteen years ago, and the branch is now in charge of Mr. Richard Nevison, son of the late Joseph Nevison of Fenelon Falls. Mr. Nevison has been manager in Kirkfield for three years and is well known among the business men of Kirkfield and surrounding district.

Dr. Ross, well known throughout Eldon and Carden Townships, is one of Kirkfield's leading citizens, having been practicing there for over thirty years. Dr. Ross's grandfather, the late Sergt. Ross, received the homestead as a grant, or reward from the Government for his services in the early days of the settlement.

The leading general store in Kirkfield today is that conducted by Mr. D. McEachern, who took over the business from the late Hugh Wilson, of Cannington, who had a branch store in Kirkfield some years ago.

Mr. J. O. McGinnis conducts the only hardware store in Kirkfield and deals not only in hardware, but in stoves, tinware, gasoline, paints and oils, and is also well known through the district.

Everyone knows Mr. N. B. Connors, who has been doing a tailoring business in Kirkfield for sixteen years, and also carries on a pressing and cleaning business in connection with his tailoring.

There are two barber shops in Kirkfield. Mr. W. J. Wright has a barber shop and al carries on a harness making and shoe repairing business. Mr. Wright came from Victoria Road about two years ago. Mr. D. Fraser, an old Eldon boy, has a barber shop on the second floor in the Mackenzie block and has been in business for over ten years.

Mr. G. V. Dunn has conducted a garage for about five years and is agent for cars. Mr. Dunn has everything that is required in the line of automobile accessories and is doing an excellent business.

Mr. E. H. Fox took over the butcher business of Mr. W. W. Finney about the 20th of May. Mr. Fox is a native of Carden Township and is prepared to serve the residents of Kirkfield and surrounding country.

At one time Kirkfield boasted of having flour and woollen mills, a sash and door factory and a planing mill, but after the forests were denuded, the prosperity of Kirkfield depended on the agricultural development of the northern part of Eldon and Carden Townships.

Biddy Young kept tavern on the Portage Road near Bolsover and whiskey flowed freely up to the early years of this century. It was the object of changing these conditions that led Lady Mackenzie to erect the present commodious, comfortable and up-to-date hostelry that is now one of the chief attractions of Kirkfield. The "Inn" is under the capable management of Mrs. Wm. Mitchell, a sister of Lady Mackenzie, and is still a part of the Mackenzie estate.

The Lift Lock is one of the attractions near Kirkfield and many excursions are made by water and motor to see this wonderful invention of hydraulic engineering which connects the waters of Lake Simcoe with those of the Kawartha Lakes on the Trent Valley Canal System.

GIRL MECHANIC.

Helen Bullis In Overalls Repairs Airplanes.

SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 15 — The only girl in the field division of the United States Aerial Mail Service is Miss Helen Bullis, formerly of Omaha, Neb., stationed at Elko, Nevada.

Miss Bullis, bobbed hair, young and pretty, decided three years ago that teaching at a Chicago institute for the deaf and dumb was not a very exciting position, and cast her lot with the mail-men of the sky.

At Elko, attired in overalls, she works as any other member of the field staff and, according to her own admission, is just a little bit envious of the men pilots, for only men can fly.

"I never fail to get a thrill when I see an airplane come swooping down from the sky and hear its motor humming and throbbing," Miss Bullis said when in Salt Lake recently. "I think of the glorious adventure it must be to go skimming through the clouds, and how fortunate men are to be able to do those things. As it is, I have to content myself with asking the pilots how the weather was, and to listen to their interesting experiences."

Miss Bullis, learning daily from the men employes, hopes before long to know more about airplanes and airplane engines than any other girl in the world.

ALFALFA USED IN OLD WORLD CENTURIES AGO

Merit as Fodder, Only Recently Seen Here, Gave It Its Name.

MANY VALUES

Enriches Soil and is Benefit To All The Animals.

By M. O. MALTE, Ph.D.

Long before the Christian era the merits of alfalfa were recognized by those people in the Old World who had to rely for their prosperity or even their existence on success in animal husbandry. In Central and Southern Asia, the home of alfalfa, no other plant was more highly esteemed as a foreign plant. That this is true is indicated in its name, "Alfalfa," being derived from the Arabic "Alfalfacah," which means "The Best Kind of Fodder."

Alfalfa has been cultivated for at least two thousand five hundred years, always holding its place as one of the best of fodder plants ever known.

In Canada it has been grown for at least fifty years, but it is only of late that its superior qualities have been fully realized and that, as a consequence, its growing has become more general.

All kinds of farm animals like alfalfa and thrive upon it. It furnishes an exceedingly nutritious wholesome and much relished food, be it given to the animals in the green state or as hay.

For dairy cows alfalfa is particularly valuable. For mik production, al falfa pasture is worth more than any pasture composed of clover and grasses. As a soiling crop it cannot be surpassed, and well cured alfalfa hay has no equal as a dry fodder.

For sheep, lambs, and hogs alfalfa is also exceedingly valuable, its fattening and flesh producing qualities being universally recognized.

Horses are very fond of it and thrive remarkably well on it.

Like all other legumes, ncluding clovers, peas and vetches, alfalfa has the property of enriching the soil with nitrogen ganed from the air It also adds large quantities of humus to the soil through dead leaves and decaying roots. Thus alfalfa not only improves the mechanical condition of the soil, but also increases its fertility.

Soils.

Alfalfa is a perennial plant with a vigorous root system which penetrates the soil to a great depth in search of food. Thus a fair proportion of the food needed for the growth of the plant is taken from the subsoil.

To ensure the best results, i.e., to ensure vigorous growth and heavy crops for many consecutive years, alfalfa should therefore be grown on land with a deep, rich, open and porous subsoil, easily penetrable to the roots to a depth of at least two or three feet.

Hardpan or impenetrable clay near the surface will prevent the roots from developing properly and, as a result, seriously check the growth and yielding capacity of the crop.

Water standing near the surface has the same effect. As a matter of fact, alfalfa is very sensitive to an excess of water in the ground. It does exceedingly well in a moderately moist and at the same time well aerated soil but is unable to thrive in water clogged soil where free circulation of the air has been made impossible or difficult.

It should therefore be sown only on well drained land where excessive water can be promptly and rapidly carried off.

On poorly drained land or low land subject to be flooded for even a short time, alfalfa is likely to be a complete failure.

Sour soil also should be avoided. It is quite unsuitable to alfalfa, unless the acidity can be neutralized by a liberal application of lime.

As an alfalfa field, when once well established, continues to produce crops for many consecutive years, it follows that alfalfa has no place in a short rotation. It is therefore advisable to choose for alfalfa, a convenient sized field which does not form part of the regular farm rotation, preferably close to the farm buildings.

Soil Preparation.

To insure a good stand the land selected for alfalfa should be:

1. Stored with an abundance of plant food.
2. Free from weeds.
3. In excellent physical condition or tilth.

These conditions can be secured in different ways, depending on the nature of the previous crop.

If the land selected for alfalfa is in clover sod or meadow it should be ploughed shallow and rolled immediately after the hay crop is harvested. A short time later it should be thoroughly disced and harrowed, and then cultivated at frequent intervals to keep down all growth. The cultivating should be continued until late autumn. In October, the land should be ploughed again with a subsoiler attached to the plough, or ploughed with two ploughs, one without a mould board following the track of the other and stirring the subsoil as deeply as possible.

Instead of the land being ploughed and subsoiled as advised above, it may be cultivated deeply lengthwise, crosswise and angling with a strong stiff-toothed cultivator, to be follow by a double mould-board plough, leaving the whole field in ridges about 7 inches high and 22 inches apart.

In the spring following, the ridges should be split with the double mould-board plough, then thoroughly harrowed and rolled before sowing, making a perfectly fine and at the same time firm seed bed.

If the land selected for alfalfa is in hoed crop, it would be advisable to plough, when the crop has been harvested, as deep as the humus and the plant food in the soil will allow, or, still better, to plough shallow and sub soil as deeply as possible, leaving the furrows well set up to the winter frosts.

In spring, when the land is in fit condition, it should be harrowed at intervals and thus kept free from weeds. After the last harrowing, i.e., just before sowing, a heavy land roller should be run over the land to insure a firm seed bed.

Should any growth of weeds appear at the seeding time it would be advisable to plough the land shallow, roll and harrow just before seeding.

Inoculation.

For a healthy, vigorous and lasting growth of alfalfa, it is necessary that a certain kind of bacteria is plentiful in the soil. The bacteria in question live in a kind of association with the alfalfa plant and act as collectors of nitrogen, which in some way, not yet fully understood, is utilized by the alfalfa plant.

Wherever there is a good stand of alfalfa, there is also an abundance of the alfalfa bacteria in the soil

In soil which has not grown alfalfa before, the bacteria may either be wholly absent or present in too small a number to insure a vigorous growth of alfalfa from the start. In this case the bacteria should be introduced into the soil artificially.

This can be done in the following two ways:—

1. Soil from an old alfalfa field is scattered on the land, when the seed bed is prepared and harrowed in. The soil used should be scraped from the surface foot of an old alfalfa field, and still scattered over the land, prepared for alfalfa, at a rate of 150 to 300 pound to the acre.

It must not be allowed to dry up in the sun, before being scattered and harrowed in, as then its inoculating power may be destroyed.

Should old alfalfa soil not be cheaply available, then soil from a sweet clover field, if accessible, can be used with the same effect.

2. When soil inoculation, as described above, is impracticable the bacteria can be incorporated with the soil through the medium of the alfalfa seed sown. In this case the seed is treated, immediately before sowing, by an artificial culture, called nitro-culture.

This can be obtained free, with directions as to its use, upon application to the Division of Botany, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. When asking to be supplied with nitro-culture, the applicant should state how many pounds of seed are to be inoculated.

Seed and Seeding.

For the best results with alfalfa, the quality of the seed is of the greatest importance.

Not only is it necessary to use well filled plump seed of strong vitality and free from impurities, but still more so to use seed of a variety adapted to the Canadian climate.

It is absolutely necessary to use seed of a variety able to withstand the winter without being partly or wholly killed.

The safest varieties, available commercially at present, are Grimm's alfalfa and Ontario Variegated alfalfa. Still better is home-grown seed, i.e., seed produced in the home district, because such seed has been produced by plants which, by reason of their very existence, have proven themselves able to survive and thrive.

Alfalfa can be sown with a nurse crop or without. Whether it should be sown with a nurse crop or not depends largely on the state of fertility of the land and the climatic conditions. As a rule, a nurse crop should be used only when the soil is rich in plant food and humus, and the climatic conditions known to be in favor of alfalfa growing. In districts or on soil where some difficulty in starting alfalfa has been experienced, no nurse crop should be used.

In Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec and Eastern Ontario, it would be advisable to sow without a nurse crop on land of average fertility.

If sown with a nurse crop, the seed should be sown in the spring with not more than one bushel of early maturing barley or spring wheat.

If no nurse crop is used, the seed can be sown any time from the spring to the beginning of August, depending upon conditions. Sowing too early in the spring when the ground is still wet and cold, is not advisable.

When sown with a nurse crop, the seed is sown from the grass seed attachment of the grain drill.

When sown without a nurse crop, the seed can be sown broadcast either by hand or from the grass seed attachment to the grain drill. It can also be sown in drills from the grain tubes of the ordinary seeder. In the latter case, the seed should be mixed with some coarser material to prevent too thick seeding. For this purpose, ground wheat crushed as coarsely as possible is generally used. The alfalfa seed is mixed with the crushed wheat and the drill set to put on the amount wanted. For instance, 20 pounds of alfalfa mixed with 40 pounds of crushed wheat, and the drill sowing one bushel per acre will mean 20 pounds of alfalfa sown to the acre.

Whatever method used, the ground should be harrowed and rolled immediately after sowing and then the surface of the rolling lightly broken with a brush harrow, a weeder or a tilting harrow.

If the land is deficient in plant food, alfalfa may be sown in rows about eighteen inches apart. By this method however, a crop is obtained which, though it may be satisfactory as to quantity, is somewhat inferior in quality to the crop obtained when the seed is sown broadcast or in drills from the seeder.

How deeply the seed should be covered, depends on the soil conditions. On average soils the depth should be about one inch or a little less. On light sandy soils with a dry surface, the seed should be covered about an inch and a half.

When sown broadcast or in drills with the ordinary seeder, about 20 pounds of good seed of strong vitality should be used to the acre. If sown in rows eighteen inches apart, a third of this quantity will be ample.

"Wales" Styles

Well, fellows, you've been threatened with an epidemic of "Wales" styles this fall, so lamp what His Nibs is wearing in his latest picture.

This photo was taken when Mr. Guelph visited the Olympic in France. Since most of his public appearances in the United States were at the international polo matches it is likely that he will be outfitted much the same way when you see photos of him here. He wears a gray felt hat, with black band. The rim is piped with white. Soft color, same material as the shirt, with solid black tie. His coat is double breasted, three buttons each side and squares off. The pockets are not patch pockets, but they have no flaps. The suit is of gray with a pronounced white stripe. Note that the cane has no handle to hook over the arm. And I say, boys, take a pike at them shoes! They look to be gray suede. Would not that freeze yuh?

CHAMOIS SKIN.

Gloves of chamois skin that are wrinkled very carelessly about the wrist are seen with the tailleur or the coat dress.

BADGER FRINGE.

Badger fringe is one of the novelties in trimming that is exploited by some of the leading French couturiers.

LARGE POCKETS.

Very large pockets that are sometimes pouched or heavily embroidered are feautred on street gowns and suits.

NARROW BANDINGS.

Very narrow bandings of fur are seen on suits and gowns this year, and the number of bands is greater than before.

Garlands for Canadian Athletes

A PRETTY ceremony took place on the Canadian Pacific Liner "Montlaurier" on the occasion of the sailing of the Canadian Athletes to Canada. These men played a distinguished part in the Olympic Games in Paris, also in Scotland and Ireland. Sir Malcolm Campbell, who is much interested in Canada and Canadians, sent beautiful laurel garlands, decorated with white heather and tied with Stuart tartan bows. The presentation of these garlands was made by Lady Clelland (wife of Sir Charles Clelland), who complimented the Athletes on their good work at the Games, and said how pleased she was to meet such handsome representatives of Canadian youth. Major Barnett, of the Land Settlement Branch of the Canadian Government was also included in the ceremony.

Gum Chewing Aids the Teeth

You have the authority of doctors and dentists for this statement. Your own experience will prove it, if you will use WRIGLEY'S after every meal.

The following quotations from a recent work on teeth and health are worth remembering:

"Dentists have found that the exercise of gum chewing brings about a better nutrition of the teeth . . . ."

"The cleansing action of the gum between the teeth helps to keep them free from the particles which lodge in the crevices and cause decay."

The busy man—or woman either—rarely has time to clean the teeth after eating. Yet they should be cleaned, and

MODERN LOVE MUCH CHANGED

Woman of To-day Desires Real Companion—Still Needs Affection.

PARISIAN'S VIEW.

PARIS, Sept. 15—"Love is dead—at least in France," says M. Gaston Rageot in "Le Temps."

That is to say, the writer goes on, love is fast disappearing and even now there is little question of it in the matter of marriage and none at all otherwise. When a woman marries these days it is for reasons that are essentially economic, he thinks, or perhaps moral or religious. If love enters in, it is only by chance and it does not last long. Love was the weapon adopted by women for social conquest. As long as she had need of it, she made use of love.

"But, no; love is not dead," replies Madame Marie Verone, President of the Woman's Suffrage League in France. "It has only changed to something different. First a simple instinct, love became a sensation, then gradually a sentiment more and more delicate and complex. Love now means the union of souls.

"Far from rejecting love, the woman of to-day is aspiring to a sentiment higher and much more complete than that of her grandmother or great-grandmother. She has learned to know her own worth and refuses to play in the love comedy simply to satisfy the man who will give her a daily pittance. She no longer fears hard work, which will give her all that she needs—her independence and her freedom—and she knows that her beloved, be he lover or husband, will not grant her much affection, tenderness or protection the moment she fails to recognize his masculine superiority. And she has too much dignity to accept such a situation.

"Voila this is what the men must now learn to understand and admit. No, Monsieur Rageot, love is not dead at all—it has simply changed form, like everything else. The woman of 1924, as well as her grandmother, needs affection and love, but she is more sensitive to the manner in which it is dealt out to her. She no longer knows how to bend before the proud and tryannical will of man. She desires a real companion to-day—a man who will respect her liberty and whose freedom of mind she can regard with honor."

SYNOPSIS

Sir Oliver Tressilian is betrothed to Rosamund Godolphin, but the marriage is opposed by Rosamund's brother, Peter, and her guardian, Sir John Killigrew. When Oliver's young half-brother, Lionel, kills Peter in a quarrel suspicion falls on Oliver. A trail of blood is found leading from the body to his doorway. Even Rosamund believes him guilty. Desiring to protedt Lionel, Oliver can only protest his innocence; but he obtains from the justices a document, to be produced in case of trial, attesting to the fact that he bears no mark of recent wound; that therefore the trail of blood, obviously that of the murderer, is not his. A few weeks later trial threatens; and Lionel, crazed with fear that Oliver will reveal the truth, hires a pirate sea-captain, Jasper Leigh, to abduct him and sell him as a galley-slave. With Oliver's disappearance it is assumed he has fled to escape trial. Out at sea Leigh offers, for a price, to take Oliver back to England, and is about to turn back when a great Spanish ship bears down upon them, her guns in action. The Swallow, unarmed, is sunk.

From ambush Sakr-el-Bahr, the Hawk of the Sea, directs his own two galleys in an attack on a Spanish ship which has drifted into a haven on the northern coast of Africa. The Spaniard, unprepared, surrenders after a brief engagement.

Of the others Sakr-el-Bahr made short work. He offered the privilege of ransom himself to any who might claim it, and the privilege was claimed by three. The rest he consigned to the care of Biskaine, who acted as his kayia, or lieutenant. But before doing so he bade the ship's bo'sun stand forward, and demanded to know what slaves there might be aboard. There were, he learned, but a dozen, employed upon menial duties on the ship—three Jews, seven Moslems, and two heretics—and they had been driven under the hatches when the peril threatened.

By Sakr-el-Bahr's orders these were dragged forth from the blackness into which they had been flung. The Moslems, upon discovering that they had fallen into the hands of their own people and that their slavery was at an end, broke into cries of delight and fervent praise of Allah, than whom they swore there was no other God. The three Jews, lithe, stalwart young men in black tunics that fell to their knees and black skull-caps upon their curly black locks, smiled ingratiatingly, hoping for the best since they were fallen into the hands of people who were nearer akin to them than Christians and allied to them, at least, by the bond of common enmity to Spain and common suffering at the hands of Spaniards.

The two heretics stood in stolid apathy, realizing that with them it was but a case of passing from Charybdis to Scylla, and that they had as little to hope for from heathem as from Christian. One of these was a sturdy, bow-legged fellow, whose garments were little better than rags; his weather-beaten face was of the color of mahogany and his eyes of a dark blue under tufted eyebrows that once had been red—like his hair and beard—but were now thickly intermingled with grey. He was spotted dark brown freckles.

Of the entire dozen he was the only one that drew the attention of Sakr-el-Bahr. He stood despondently before the corsair, with bowed head and his eyes upon the deck, a weary, dejected, spiritless slave who would as soon die as lie. Thus some few moments during which the stalwart Moslem stood regarding him; then as if drawn by that persistent scrutiny he raised his dull, weary eyes. At once they quickened, the dullness passed out of them; they were bright and keen as of old. He thrust his head forward, staring in his turn; then in a bewildered way he looked about him at the ocean of swarthy faces under turbans of all colors, and back again at Sakr-el-Bahr.

"God's light!" he said at last, in English, to vent his infinite amazement. Then reverting to the cynical manner that he had ever affected and effacing all surprise:

"Good day to you, Sir Oliver," said he. "I suppose ye'll give yourself the pleasure of hanging me."

"Allah is great!" said Sakr-el-Bahr impressively.

CHAPTER X

THE RENEGADE

How it came to happen that Sakr-el-Bahr, the Hawk of the Sea, the Moslem rover, the scourge of the mediterranean, the terror of Christians and the beloved of Asad-ed-Din, Basha of Angiers, would be one and the same as Sir Oliver Tressilian, the Cornish gentleman of Penarrow is at long length set forth in the chronicles of Lord Henry Coade.

Sir Oliver was one of a score of men who were rescued from the sea by the crew of the Spanish vessel that had sunk the Swallow; another was Jasper Leigh, the skipper. All of them were carried to Lisbon, and there handed over to the Court of the Holy Office. Since they were heretics all—or nearly all—it was fit and proper that the Brethren of St. Dominic should undertake their conversion in the first place.

Sir Oliver came of a family that never had been famed for rigidity in religious matters, and he was certainly not going to burn alive if the adoption of other men's opinions upon an extremely hypothetical future state would suffice to save him from the stake. He accepted Catholic baptism with an almost contemptuous indifference. As for Jasper Leigh, it will be conceived that the elasticity of the skipper's conscience was no less than Sir Oliver's, and he was certainly not the man to be roasted for a trifle of faith.

No doubt there would be great rejoicings in the Holy House over the rescue of these two unfortunate souls from the certain perdition that had awaited them. It followed that as converts to the Faith they were warmly cherished, and tears of thanksgiving were profusely shed over them. So much for their heresy. They were completely purged of it, having done penance in proper form at an Auto held on the Rocio at Lisbon, candle in hand and sanbenito on their shoulders. The Church dismissed them with her blessing and an injunction to persevere in the ways of salvation.

Now this dismissal amounted to a rejection. They were, as a consequence, thrown back upon the secular authorities, and the secular authorities had yet to punish them for their offense upon the seas. No offense could be proved, it is true. But the courts were satisfied that this lack of offense was but the natural result of a lack of opportunity. Conversely, they reasoned, it was not to be doubted that with the opportunity the offense would have been forthcoming. Their assurance of this was based upon ths fact that when the Spaniard fired across the bows of the Swallow as an invitation to heave to. she had kept upon her couree. Thus, with uganswerable Castilian logic was the evil conscience of hei skipper proven.

Captain Leigh protested on the other hand that his action had been dictated by his lack of faith in Spaniard s and his firm belief that all Spaniard s were pirates to be avoided by every honest seaman who was conscious of inferior strength of armaments. It was a plea that won him no favor with his narrow-minded judges.

Sir Oliver fervently urged that he was no member of the crew of the Swallow, that he was a gentleman who found 'self aboard her very much against—his will, being the victim of a villainous piece of trepanning executed by her venal captain. The court heard his plea with respect, and asked to know his name and rank. He was so very indiscreet as to answer truthfully. The result was extremely educative to Sir Oliver; it showed him how systematically conducted was the keeping of the Spanish archives. The court produced documents enabling his judges to recite to him most of that portion of his life that had been spent upon the seas, and many an awkward little circumstance which had slipped his memory long since, which he now recalled, and which certainly was not calculated to make his sentence lighter.

Had he not been in the Barbados in such a year, and had he not there the galleon Maria de la Dolores? What was that but an act of villainous pir acy? Had he not scuttled a Spanish ca rack four years ago in the bay of Funchal? Had he not been with that pirate Hawkins in the affair at San Juan de Ulloa? And so on. Questions poured upon him and engulfed him.

He almost regretted that he had given himself the trouble to accept conversion and all that it entailed at the hands of the Brethren of St. Dominic. It began to appear to him that he had but wasted time and escaped the clerical fire to be dangled on a secular rope as an offering to the vengeful gods of outraged Spain.

So much, however, was not done. The galleys in the Mediterranean were in urgent need of men at the time, and to this circumstance Sir Oliver, Captain Leigh, and some others of the luckless crew of the Swallow owed their lives, though it is to be doubted whether any of them found the matter one for congratulation. Chained each man to fellow, ankle to ankle, with but a short length of links between, they formed part of a considerable herd of unfortunates who were driven across Portugal into Spain and then southward to Cadiz.

The last that Sir Oliver saw of Captain Leigh was on the morning on which they set out from the reeking Lisbon gaol. Thereafter throughout that weary march each knew the other to be somewhere in that wretched regiment of galley-slaves; but they never came face to face again.

In Cadiz Sir Oliver spent a month in a vast enclosed space that was open to the sky, but nevertheless of an indescribable foulness, a place of filth, disease, and suffering beyond human conception.

At the end of that month he was one of those picked out by an officer who was manning a galley that was to convey the Infanta to Naples. He owed this to his vigorous constitution which had successfully withstood the infections of that mephitic place of torments, and to the fine thews which the officer pummeled and felt as though he were acquiring a beast of burden—which, indeed, is precisely what he was doing.

The galley to which our gentleman was dispatched was a vessel of fifty oars, each manned by seven men. They were seated upon a sort of staircase that followed the slope of the oar, running from the gangway in the vessel's middle down to the shallow bulwarks.

The place allotted to Sir Oliver was that next the gangway. Here, stark naked as when he was born, he was chained to the bench, and in those chains he remained without a single moment's intermission for six whole months.

Between himself and the hard timbers of his seat there was naught but a flimsy and dirty sheepskin. From end to end the bench was not more than ten feet in length, whilst the distance separating it from the next one was a bare four feet. In that cramped space of ten feet by four, Sir Oliver and his six oarmates had their miserable existence, waking and sleeping—for they slept in their chains at the oar without sufficient room in which to lie at stretch.

Anon Sir Oliver became hardened and inured to that unspeakable existence, that living death of the galley-slave. But that first long voyage to Naples was ever to remain the most terrible experience of his life. For spells of six or eight endless hours at a time and on one occasion for no less than ten hours did he pull at his oar without a single moment's pause. With one foot on the stretcher, the other on the bench in front of him, grasping his part of that appallingly heavy fifteen-foot oar, he would bend his back to thrust forward—and upward so to clear the shoulders of the groaning, sweating slaves in front of him—then he would lift the end so as to bring the blade down to the water, and having gripped he would rise from his seat to throw his full weight into the pull, and so fall back with clank of chain upon the groaning bench to swing forward once more, and so on until his senses reeled, his sight became blurred, his mouth parched, and his whole body a living, straining ache. Then would come the sharp, fierce cut of the boatswain's whip to revive energies that flagged however little, and sometimes to leave a bleeding stripe upon his naked back.

Thus day in day out, now broiled and blistered by the pitiless southern sun, now chilled by the night dews whilst he took his cramped and unrefreshing rest, indescribably filthy and dishevelled, his hair and beard matted with endless sweat, unwashed save by the rains which in that season were all too rare, choked almost by the stench of his miserable comrades and infested by filthy crawling things begotten of decaying sheepskins and Heaven alone knows what other foulness of that floating hell.

He was sparingly fed upon weevilled biscuit and vile messes of tallowy rice, and to drink he was given lukewarm water that was often stale, saving that sometimes when the spell of rowing was more than usually protracted the boatswains would thrust of bread sodden in wine into the mouths of the toiling slaves to sustain them.

The scurvy broke out on that voyage, and there were other diseases among the rowers, to say nothing of the festering sores begotten of the friction of the bench which were common to all, and which each must endure as best he could. With the slave whose disease conquered him or who, reaching the limit of his endurance, permitted himself to swoon, the boatswain had a short way. The diseased were flung overboard; the swooning were dragged out upon the gangway or bridge and flogged there to revive them; if they did not revive they were flogged on until they were a horrid bleeding pulp which was then heaved into the sea.

Once or twice when they stood to windward the smell of the slaves being wafted abaft and reaching the fine gilded poop where the Infanta and her attendants traveled, the helmsmen were ordered to put about, and for long weary hours the slaves would hold the galley in position, backing her up gently against the wind so as not to lose way.

The number that died in the first week of that voyage amounted to close upon a quarter of the total. But there were reserves in the prow, and these were drawn upon to fill the empty places. None but the fittest could survive this terrible ordeal.

Of these was Sir Oliver, and of these, too, was his immediate neighbor at the oar, a stalwart, powerful, massive, uncomplaining young Moor, who accepted his fate with a stoicism that aroused Sir Oliver's admiration. For days they exchanged no single word together, their religions marking them out, they thought, for enemies despite the fact that they were fellows in misfortune. But one evening when an aged Jew who had collapsed in merciful unconsciousness was dragged out and flogged in the usual manner, Sir Oliver was filled with such a passion at all this inhumanity and at the cold pitilessness of it all that aloud he cursed all Christians in general and Spaniards in particular.

He turned to the Moor beside him, and addressing him in Spanish:

"Hell," he said, "was surely made for Christians, which may be why they seek to make earth like it."

Fortunately for him the creak and dip of the oars, the clank of the chains, and the lashes beating sharply upon that wretched Jew were sufficient to muffle his voice. But the Moor heard him, and his dark eyes gleamed.

"There is a furnace seven times heated awaiting them, O my brother," he replied, with a confidence which seemed to be the source of his present stoicism. "But art thou, then, not a Christian?"

He spoke in that queer language of the North African seaboard, that lingua franca, which sounded like some French dialect interspersed with Arabic words. But Sir Oliver made out his meaning almost by intuition. He answered him in Spanish again, since although the Moor did not appear to speak it, yet it was plain he understood it.

"I renounce from this hour," he answered in his passion. "I will acknowledge no religion in whose name such things are done.

He growled an obscene oath as he heaved the great oar forward.

"A Christian, I?" he cried, and laughed for the first time since he had been chained to that bench of agony. "I am done with Christians and Christianity."

"Verily we are God's, and to Him shall we return," said the Moor.

That was the beginning of a friendship between Sir Oliver and this mane whose name was Yusuf-ben-Moktar., The Moslem conceived that in Sir Oliver he saw one upon whom the grace of Allah had descended, one who was ripe to receive the Prophet's message. Yusuf was devout, and he applied himself to the conversion of his fellow-slave. Sir Oliver listened to him, however, with indifference. Having discarded one creed, he would need a deal of satisfying on the score of another before he adopted it, and it seemed to him that all the glorious things urged by Yusuf in praise of Islam he had heard before in praise of Christianity. But he kept his counsel on that score, and meanwhile his intercourse with the Moslem had the effect of teaching him the lingua franca, so that at the end of six months he found himself speaking it like a Mauretanian with all the Moslem's imagery and with more than the ordinary seasoning of Arabic.

It was toward the end of that six months that the event took place which was to restore Sir Oliver to liberty. In the meanwhile those limbs of his which had ever been vigorous beyond the common wont had acquired an elephantine strength. It was ever thus at the oar. Either you died under the strain, or your thews and sinews grew to be equal to their relentless task. Sir Oliver in those six months was become a man of steel and iron, impervious to fatigue, superhuman almost in his endurance.

They were returning home from a trip to Genoa when one evening as they were standing off Minorca in the Balearic Isles they were surprised by a fleet of four Moslem galleys which came skimming round a promontory to surround and engage them.

Aboard the Spanish vessel there broke a terrible cry of "Asad-ed-Din"—the name of the most redoubtable Moslem corsair since the Italian renegade Ochiali—the Ali Pasha who had been killed at Lepanto. Trumpets blared and drums beat on the poop, and the Spaniards in morion and corslet, armed with calivers and pikes, stood to defend their lives and liberty. The gunners sprang to the culverins.

But fire had to be kindled and linstocks ignited, and in the confusion much time was lost—so much that not a single cannon shot was fired before the grappling-irons of the first galley clanked upon and gripped the Spaniard's bulwarks. The shock of the impact was terrific. The armoured prow of the Moslem galley—Asad-ed-Din's own—smote the Spaniard a slanting blow amidships that smashed fifteen of the oars as if they had been so many withered twigs.

There was a shriek from the slaves, followed by such piteous groans as the damned in hell may emit. Fully two score of them had been struck by the shafts of their oars as these were hurled back against them. Some had been killed outright, others lay in limp and crushed, some with broken backs, others with shattered limbs and ribs.

Sir Oliver would assuredly have been of these but for the warning, advice, and example of Yusuf, who was well versed in galley-fighting, and who foresaw clearly what must happen. He thrust the oar upward and forward as far as it would go, compelling the others at his bench to accompany his movement. Then he slipped down upon his knees, released his hold of the timber, and crouched down until his shoulders were on a level with the bench.

He had shouted to Sir Oliver to follow his example, and Sir Oliver, without even knowing what the manœuver should portend, but gathered its importance from the other's urgency of tone, promptly obeyed. The oar was struck an instant later, and ere it snapped off it was flung back, braining one of the slaves at the bench and mortally injuring the others, but passing clean over the heads of Sir Oliver and Yusuf. A moment later the bodies of the oarsmen of the bench immediat ly in front were flung back atop of them with yells and curses.

When Sir Oliver staggered to his feet he found the battle joined. The Spaniards had fired a volley from their valivers and a dense cloud of smoke hung above the bulwarks; through this surged now the corsairs, led by a tall, lean, elderly man with a flowing white beard and a swarthy eagle face. A crescent of emeralds flashed from his snowy turban; above it rose the peak of a steel cap, and his body was cased in chain mail. He swung a great scimitar, before which the Spaniards went down like wheat to the reaper's sickle. He fought like ten men, and to support him poured a never-ending stream of Moslems to the cry of:

"Din, Din! Allah, Y'Allah!"

Back and yet back went the Spaniards before that irresistible onslaught.

Sir Oliver found Yusuf struggling in vain to rid himself of his chain, and went to his assistance. He stooped, seized it in both hands, set his feet against the bench, exerted all his strength, and tore the staple from the wood. Yusuf was free, save, fo course, that a length of heavy chair was dangling from his steel anklet. In his turn he did a like service by Sir Oliver, though not quite as speedily, for strong man though he was, either his strength was not equal to the Cornishman's or else the latter's staple had been driven into sounder timber. In the end, however, it yielded, and Sir Oliver, too, was free. Then he set the foot that was hampered by the chain upon the bench, and with the staple that still hung from the end of it pried open the link that attached it to his anklet.

That done, he took his revenge. Crying "Din!" as loudly as any of the Moslems, he flung himself upon the rear of the Spaniards, brandishing his chain. In his hands it became a terrific weapon. He used it as a scourge, lashing it to right and left of him, splitting here a head and crushing there a face, until he had hacked a way clean through the Spanish press, which, bewildered by his sudden rear attack, made but little attempt to retaliate upon the escaped galley-slave. After him, whirling the remaining ten feet of the broken oar, came Yusuf.

Sir Oliver confessed afterward to knowing very little of what happened in thess moments. He came to a full possession of his senses to find the fight at an end, a cloud of turbaned corsairs standing guard over a huddle of Spaniards, others breaking open the cabin and dragging thence the chests that it contained, others again armed with chisels and mallets passing along the benches liberating the surviving slaves, of whom the great majority were children of Islam.

Sir Oliver found himself face to face with the white-bearded leader of the corsairs, who was leaning upon his scimitar and regarding him with eyes at once amused and amazed. Our gentleman's naked body was splashed from head to foot with blood, and in his right hand he still clutched that yard of iron links with which he had wrought such ghastly execution. Yusuf was standing at the corsair leader's elbow speaking rapidly.

"By Allah, was ever such a lusty fighter seen!" cried the latter. "The strength of the Prophet is within him thus to smite the unbelieving pigs."

Sir Oliver grinned savagely.

"I was returning them some of their whip-lashes—with interest," said he.

And those were the circumstances under which he came to meet the formidable Asad-ed-Din, Basha of Algiers; those the first words that passed between them.

Anon, when aboard Asad's own galley he was being carried to Barbary, he was washed and his head was shaved, all but the forelock, by which the Prophet should lift him to Heaven when his earthly destiny should come to be fulfilled. He made no protest. They washed and fed him and gave him ease and so that they did these things to him they might do what else they pleased. At last, arrayed in flowing garments that were strange to him, and with turban wound around his head, he was conducted to the poop, where Asad sat with Yusuf under an awning, and he came to understand that it was in compliance with the orders of Yusuf that he had been treated as if he were a True-Believer.

Yusuf-ben-Moktar was discovered as a person of great consequence, the nephew of Asad-ed-Din, and a favorite with that Exalted of Allah the Sublime Portal himself, a man whose capture by Christians had been a thing profoundly deplored. Accordingly his delivery from that thraldom was a matter for rejoicing. Being delivered, he bethought him of his oar-mate, concerning whom Asad-ed-Din manifested the greatest curiosity, for in all this world there was nothing the old corsair loved so much as a fighter, and in all his days, he vowed, never had he seen the equal of that stalwart galley-slave, never the like of his performinces with that murderous chain. Yusuf had informed him that the man was a fruit ripe for the Prophet's plucking, that the grace of Allah was upon him, and in spirit already he must be accounted a good Moslem.

When Sir Oliver, washed, perfumed, and arrayed in white caftan and turban, which gave him the air of being even taller than he was, came into the presence of Asad-ed-Din, it was conveyed to him that if he would enter the ranks of the Faithful of the Prophet's House and devote his strength and courage with which Allah the One had endowed him to the upholding of the True Faith and to the chastening of the enemies of Islam, great honor, wealth and dignity were in store for him.

Of all that proposla, made at prodigious length and with great wealth of Eastern circumlocution, the only phrase that took root in his rather bewildered mind was that which concerned the chastening of the enemies of Islam. The enemies of Islam, he conceived, were his enemies; and he further conceived that they stood in great need of chastening, and that to take a hand in that chastening would be a singularly grateful task. So he considered the proposals made him. He considered, too, that the alternative—in the event of his refusing to make the protestations of Faith required of him—was that he must return to the oar of a galley, of a Moslem galley now.

Now, that was an occupation of which he had had more than his fill, and since he had been washed and restored to the normal sensations of a clean human being he found that whatever might be within the scope of his courage he could not envisage returning to the oar. We have seen the ease with which he had abandoned the religion in which he was reared for the Roman faith, and how utterly deluded he had found himself. With the same degree of ease did he now go over to Islam, and with much greater profit. Moreover, he embraced the religion of Mahomet with a measure of fierce conviction that had been entirely lacking from his earlier apostasy.

He had arrived at the conclusion whilst aboard the galley of Spain, as we have seen, that Christianity as practised in his day was a grim mockery of which the world were better rid. It is not to be supposed that his convictions that Christianity was at fault went the length of making him suppose that Islam was right, or that his conversion to the faith of Mahomet was anything more than superficial. But forced as he was to choose between the rower's bench and the poop-deck, the oar and the scimitar, he boldly and resolutely made the only choice that in his case could lead to liberty and life.

Thus he was received into the ranks of the Faithful whose pavilions await them in Paradise set in an orchard of never-failing fruit, among rivers of milk, of wine, and of clarified honey. He became the Kayia or lieutenant to Yusuf on the galley of that corsair's command, and seconded him in half a score of engagements with an ability and a conspicuity that made him swiftly famous throughout the ranks of the Mediterranean rovers.

Some six months later, in a fight off the coast of Sicily with one of the galleys of the Religion—as the vessels of the Knights of Malta were called—Yusuf was mortally wounded in the very moment of victory. He died an hour later in the arms of Sir Oliver, naming the latter his successor in the command of the galley and enjoining upon all implicit obedience to him until they should be returned to Algiers and the Basha should make known his further will in the matter.

The Basha's will was to confirm his nephew's dying appointment of a successor, and Sir Oliver found himself in full command of a galley. From that hour he became Oliver-Reis, but very soon his valor and fury earned him the by-name of Sakr-el-Bahr, the Hawk of the Sea. His fame grew rapidly, and it spread across the tideless sea to the very shores of Christendom. Soon he became Asad's lieutenant, the second in command of all the Algerine galleys, which meant in fact that he was the commander-in-chief, for Asad was growing old and took the sea more and more rarely now. Sakr-el-Bahr sallied forth in his name and his stead, and such was his courage, his address, and his good furtune that never did he go forth to return empty-handed.

It was clear to all that the favor of Allah was upon him, that he had been singled out by Allah to be the very glory of Islam. Asad, who had ever esteemed him, grew to love him. An intensely devout man, could he have done less in the case of one for whom the Pitying the Pitiful showed so marked a predilection? It was freely accepted that when the destiny of Asad-ed-Din should come to be fulfilled Sakr-el-Bahr must succeed him in the Bashalik of Algiers, and that thus Oliver-Reis would follow in the footsteps of Barbarossa, Ochiali, and other Christian renegades who had become corsair-princes of Islam.

In spite of certain hostilities which his rapid advancement begot, and of which we shall hear more presently, once only did his power stand in danger of suffering a check. Coming one morning into the reeking bagnio at Algiers, some six months after he had been raised to his captaincy, he found there a score of countrymen of his own, and he gave orders that their fetters should instantly be struck off and their liberty restored them.

Called to account by the Basha for this action he took a high-handed way, since no other was possible. He swore by the beard of the Prophet that if he were to draw the sword of Mahomet and to serve Islam upon the seas, he would serve in his own way, and one of his ways was that his own countrymen were to have immunity from the edge of that same sword. Islam, he swore, should not be the loser, since for every Englishman he restored to liberty he would bring two Spaniards, Frenchmen, Greeks, or Italians into bondage.

He prevailed, but only upon condition that since captured slaves were the property of the state, if he desired to abstract them from the state he must first purchase them for himself. Since they would then be his own property he could dispose of them at his good pleasure. Thus did the wise and just Asad resolve the difficulty which had arisen, and Oliver-Reis bowed wisely to that decision.

Thereafter what English slaves were brought to Algiers he purchased, manumitted, and found means to send home again. True, it cost him a fine price yearly, but he was fast amassing such a wealth as could easily support this tax.

He found one day among some English seamen brought captive to Algiers by Biskaine-el-Borak—who was become his own second in command—a young Cornish lad from Helston, named Pitt, whose father he had known.

He took the lad home with him to the fine palace which he inhabited near the Bab-el-Oueb, treated him as an honored guest, and sat through a whole summer night in talk with him, questioning him upon this person and that person, and thus gradually drawing from him all the little history of his native place during the two years that were sped since he had left it. In this we gather an impression of the wistful longings, the fierce nostalgia that must have overcome the renegade and his endeavors to allay it by his endless questions. The Cornish lad had brought him up sharply and agonizingly with that past of his upon which he had closed the door when he became a Moslem and a corsair.

The only possible iaference is that in those hours of that summer's night repentance stirred in him, and a wild longing to return. Rosamund should reopen for him that door which, hard-driven by misfortune, he had slammed. That she would do so when once she knew the truth he had not faintest doubt. And there was now no reason why he sould conceal the truth, why he should continue to shield that dastardly half-brother of his, whom he had come to hate as fiercely as he had erstwhile loved him.

In secret he composed a long letter, giving the history of all that had happened to him since he was kidnapped, and setting forth the entire truth of that and of the deed that had led to it. And, moreover, it was not a mere matter of passionate protestations of innocence, or of unsupported accusation of his brother. It told her of the existence of proofs that must dispel all doubt. It told her of that parchment indited by Master Baine and witnessed by the parson, which document was to be delivered to her together with the letter. Further, it bade her seek confirmation of that document's genuineness, did she doubt it, at the hands of Master Baine himself.

LONE TRAILS OF THE ARCTIC

Where Northern Trappers Work Alone For Seven Months Each Year Lead To Milady's Dainty Furs at a Cost For Greater Than Money

By BOB DORMAN.

RIGOLET, Labrador, Sept. 13.—This is the month that sees the gathering of the fur trappers of the north; those men who bring out of the frozen lands of the Arctic the soft, warm furs that adorn the beauty of the women of more favored places.

What is the life that these men lead in their pursuit of the wild animals whose pelts they seek?

Let Walter Baikia, 28, tell you.

Ever since he was 14 he has followed the trackless paths of Labrador in pursuit of fur.

"Generally we leave Rigolet on the 25th of September," he narrates.

"We go by water in canoes and motor boats up Hamilton Inlet to Lake Melville, then up the Naskaupi River to where it is joined by the Northwest River, up which we proceed, each man to his own particular hunting ground.

"Each man picks out his own place and returns to it year after year. His right to it is not questioned by others. It is the unwritten code of the Northland.

"Far up the Northwest River, some 200 miles from Rigolet, I have my main camp.

"When I arrive I cache my winter supplies. If you don't, roving bands of Indians or Eskimo are apt to steal them, which might mean starvation.

"Then I set out on my trap lines.

"For 27 miles on the river front, 14 one way and 13 the other, I put out 106 fox traps, as it is along the river that one is most apt to find foxes.

"Then I go 30 miles north of the river, setting out 250 traps.

"Then 15 miles to the south of the river, where I place 150 traps.

"This makes 72 miles of traps that I must cover.

"Then begins my regular routine of winter work.

"Usually by the 15th of October the ground is covered by snow.

"I make the round of the river traps first. This takes five days.

"Then I cover the ground to the north of the river, taking up four days. The trip to the south occupies two days, making 11 days in all necessary for a round of all the traps.

"Each evening is spent in skinning and pegging out the day's take.

"The skins are then pegged out and left to dry in the tilts (the name of the little camps established as night camps along the line of traps).

"In January we usually come in for supplies to Rigolet, and to bring in the fur already taken.

"The final return to Rigolet is made April 15.

"The traps must be covered in all kinds of weather. Usually there is at least one blizzard a week, but one must go ahead. Sometimes though you have to lay in shelter for several days because of the impossibility of finding the way in the thick snow storm. Then, too, the loneliness is appalling. For seven months one hardly ever sees another human.

"If you get sick, you either get well or die.

"Last year, Willie Montagu staggered into my camp. By the next day he was helpless with paralysis. I gathered 13 other trappers and we fashioned a sled, on which we dragged him into the hospital at Rigolet.

"It took us 14 days travelling 16 hours a day.

"Each of us took half-hour spells at pulling the sled, which not only carried Montagu, but all our provisions for the journey.

"And then Willie was burned alive in a fire which destroyed the hospital the week after we got him there.

"The average earnings of a season are $1,000. The most I have ever taken in in 14 years is $1,800 in a season.

"This means that I have to work with the fishing schooners in the summer, as the cost of supplies is so high. I have paid as high as $50 a barrel for flour, with other supplies in proportion.

"But I like the life. I am free and independent. No man is my boss. I can come and go as I please.

"It is healthy, too. Some day I suppose, I will pass out. But that doesn't bother the trapper of the north."

RE-ITERATE POLICY

CANTON, China, Sept. 15. — The Kuomintang, the party of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, president of the south China republic, took advantage of the recent strike of house boys at Shameen, the foreign settlement of Canton, to reiterate the party's pro-foreign policy. In a statement given out by Dr. C. C. Wu, son of the late Wu Ting-fang, one time minister to Washington, the Kuomintang refuses to entertain an alleged proposal of certain Shanghai members of the party to rescind the party's order refraining from anti-foreignism.

A new and stronger order was in fact issued. This reads: "It is the duty of this party to make China a really independent and sovereign state on the basis of the party's three principles. It regards all narrow and violent anti-foreign sentiments as harmful to society and the world at large, and detrimental to the complete independence and equality of the Chinese state and race. For this reason the party has always strongly exerted itself in suppressing such tendencies."

The pronouncement asserts that even during the Boxer uprising of 1900, when the Manchus were encouraging the Boxers in their "insane movement to destroy the foreigner" the Kuomintang, which had started a revolution at Waichow, accorded protection to foreign life and property. Since then the revolutionaries, whenever they took up arms, never failed to take special care to give adequate protection to foreigners.

The northern militarists on the other hand, Dr. Wu's statement continues, "having usurped the Peking government, have not hesitated to work in league with the imperialistic powers, and to sell the country in order to further their selfish aims. Our people have often denounced their slavishness towards foreign powers, but the minds of the militarists and reactionaries are really suffused with mediæval and monarchial notions and superstitions which are closely associated with anti-foreign sentiments. While in their conduct they are servile, in their mentality they are really hostile to foreigners.

HARVEY CREW NOW TUG-OF-WAR CHAMPIONS

Captured the Roland Denne Trophy With Ease In Match With Board of Works

NINE STRONG MEN.

Picked By Fred Jopling, Who Issues Challenge To Former Title Holder's Anchor Man.

No longer can the Board of Works tug-of-war team call themselves the undisputed champions of this district. The title now rests with an aggregation from Harvey and points thereabouts, and incidentally they are also holders of the Roland Denne Trophy, held for the last two years by the Board of Works team, emblematic of the county championship.

Fred Jopling was called out of the grand stand on Saturday to get together a team so that the cup holders would have a pull. There was up to that time no opposition and the Board were anxious to allow the champions to demonstrate their ability before the record crowd that filled the grand stand to capacity.

From somewhere Fred Jopling gathered up nine strong men, perhaps from the circus or from Borneo for all the spectators knew. At any rate, they were no match for the Board of Works team, and captured President Denne's cup with ease.

Charlie Stapleton was amazed at the performance of his crew, while Fred Jopling, with folded arms watched his nine heruculean built men pull the handkerchief over the mark.

The uninue part of the victory was the fact that four of the winning team are brothers, sons of Allen Irwin, Peterboro. The others hail from that community and evidently the northern part of the county is particularly suited for men with the Dempse punch and the Firpo strentgh.

Those on the winning team were Alfred Irwin, Bob Irwin, Will Irwin, Morris Irwin, Sid. Armstrong, Levi Morrison, Will Shearer, Will Northey Stanley Barcroft and Bob McCullough (anchor.)

Fred Jopling has one strong man in the above aggregation, whose name he would not disclose, that he wishes to match against Jack Murphy, the anchor man of the Board of Works team. He feels that he has in this one man a bigger surprise for the public than any the large crowd of spectators received on Saturday.

Speaking to the Board of Works manager to-day, the Examiner was informed that the former title holders lost because they had not the regular team in Saturday's match.

PRY ACCOUNTS OF ACCUSED DIRECTORS

Liability Clerk Makes Important Disclosures At To-day's Hearing Former Accountant.

TORONTO, Sept. 15.—A step in the direction in probing for the Home Bank of Canada, Manufacturers' liability into assets for which dividends were paid, was made this morning at the trial of Ocean T. Smith, former Chief Accountant of the defunct institution by Miss Gladys Love, liability clerk who continued her evidence before His Honour Judge Coatsworth on examination of Crown Prosecutor, R. L. McCarthy K.C.

Miss Love testified that interest was sometimes added to loans and at other times to current account, which in all but ones instance showed a large overdraft.

In this instance the King Shoe Company there were two accounts, one a credit balance of $1,000.00 and the other an overdraft of $7,000 in H. G. Daly's own account, the interest on the overdraft was added to the overdraft.

The name of Darcy K. Ridout who is stated to have made considerable money in the Provincial Bond deal was mentioned in connection with the first account of Ridout. The names of Dyment and Mason which in connection with all other accused directors to-day were overdrawn, this one to the extent of $4,863.49. K. F. N. Stewart and O. S. Wood only of the accused directors were in Court when the hearing of Smith was resumed.

Carl A. Bernard joined them in order to hear the evidence concerning Pellatt's overdraft, who left the court before Mrs. Entwhistle, former bookkeeper of the bank, had testified concerning the overdraft of $100,000.00 in the account of the Dominion Holding and Investment Co., in which he was interested.

RUSSIA

Russia's harvest of leading grain crops this year will be about the same as last year, claims the Soviet government in an official report. Last year's crops were sufficient for home needs and in addition furnished considerable for export. There'll still be famine districts, just as India exports wheat and China ships out eggs during the worst famines. There is very little patriotism in commerce, though a lot of oratory about it.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Mr. W. H. Merrill, of Peterboro, I believe, says that Agnes McPhail, M.P., is his ideal, and let me tell you, sir, she is the ideal of all the old women in Canada. Her opinion on railways, finance, political relations, defence, the post office and turnips is the best I ever saw.

GRANDMA.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I was so busily engaged last week trying to make the Fair a success that I had not time to reply to Mr Gordon's personal abusive letter which appeared in your issue last Thursday regarding the parcelling up of East Peterboro under the recent distribution.

The electors of city and county of Peterboro are not so much concerned with attitude taken by Mr. King and Mr. Meighen on this question, but they are very much concerned in the cause that was taken by Mr. Gordon.

Mr. Gordon, as the representative of this riding, and supporter of the Government, should have been chiefly concerned in unity, welfare and general benefit of city and county as a whole. He should have realized that it was against the future welfare of this city and county to have all the influence of the eastern section of the county directed toward the future development of Hastings County and its urban centres by the expenditure of public moneys in railways and public works which will certainly be done by the representative of Hastings, to which an important part of this county has been added. All our county offices are located here. The County Council meet here, and their interests should be centred here. The members from the eastern section of the county are now deprived of the advantage of having the influence of their united council brought to bear upon the Dominion Government because the eastern part is divorced and cast off from the west, and its councils will have to look to the members of Hastings to advance their claims, which will certainly be to the disadvantage of this city and to the advantage of Hastings. Why, may I ask, did not Mr. Gordon listen to the advice that was given him by the Liberals of East Peterboro?

Why did Mr. Gordon ignore them and not listen to what they had to say?

Why did he not seek their advice? Why did he not consult the Liberals of this riding who are concerned in the unity and prosperity of the city and county? Was it not because Mr. Gordon thought that Lakefield, Douro and Otonabee would likely give a Liberal majority and that would help Gordon? The fact is that future growth and prosperity of this city and county had to be sacrificed for Gordon. His own selfish ends had to be served at the expense of city and county.

Mr. Gordon thinks he has the farmers of Douro and Otonabee in his vest pocket, and that they will vote to serve his selfish ends, regardless of their own best interests. He seems to think he can treat the electors of East Peterboro like carcases of beef — take choice cuts for himself and throw the balance away.

The Liberals in the past have always stood for redistribution on the principle of preserving county boundaries. But apparently principles do not count with Mr. Gordon when they stand in the way of his own selfish ends. With what feelings of pride the Liberal mothers of West Peterboro can tell their sons and daughters to vote for Gordon because he never lets political principles stand in his way when his own selfish ends can be served. He never lets unity and welfare of his riding stand in his way when he is working all the time for Gordon.—Yours truly,

ROLAND DENNE.

Two Showmen Appear In Police Court Charged With Theft.

Not since two years ago, when the local police corralled a number of visiting midway men for conducting lotteries and illegal gambling devices has a group of showmen provided an interesting police court case.

This morning Edward Carrol, Hamilton, and Samuel Rogers, Toronto, appeared before Magistrate Langley, charged with the theft of $25.00 worth of beads, the property of William Mitchell, who conducted the bead stand just inside the main gate of the Exhibition.

Provincial Officer Norman Maker instituted a search for the missing beads and found the two prisoners presumably selling the stolen property at their side show, where the public were invited to throw baseballs through a racket in consideration of kewpies, etc.

His Worship remanded the two to appear at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

BAR BOBBED HAIR.

Regulation Will Be Enforced In Ottawa Civic Hospital.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 15. — The ban on bobbed hair has spread in Ottawa. The latest to place the lid down securely and firmly are the authorities who have charge of the new three million dollar civic hospital, which may open next month. Across the foot of the forms on which young ladies will make applications for positions on the nursing staff is a note stating specifically that applicants having their hair bobbed will not be admitted.

Most of the city hospitals now have a similar regulation, but in very many instances they have not been strictly enforced, or else the nurses have been allowed to make use of various devices to make the bob less apparent. Of course, the shingle and other extreme forms of the bob have been altogether taboo. The civic hospital authorities have decided not to tolerate any kind of a bob, and are understood to be determined to enforce the rule.

NUDITY SHOCKS MOSCOW.

Athletes of Both Sexes, Almost Naked, Seek Police Protection.

MOSCOW, Sept. 15. — Moscow was shocked Friday when several young athletes of both sexes appeared almost nude in the streets, their sole covering being diminutive aprons and red ribbons over their shoulders bearing the inscription: "Down With Shame!"

The crowds on the streets were much incensed and in some cases the athletes were forced to seek the protection of the police. The sporting societies have been warned by the authorities that a repetition of the incident will subject the offenders to imprisonment.

LEAGUE MEETING.

At a regular monthly meeting of the Catholic Women's League, held in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum, a discussion took place regarding arrangements for a Diocesan convention of the League, to be held in the Lyceum on October 1st, when members of the League from the diocese are expected to be present. Mrs. C. J. Snider, president of the local society, will act as general convenor.

Arrangements were also made to hold a tea at the Lyceum on Friday afternoon, for which Mrs. J. J. Doris will be convenor. The League will also conduct a hot drink and refreshment booth in connection with the Flower Show at the Armouries on Thursday and Friday of this week. Ladies in charge of the booth on Thursday will be Mesdames D. O. Legendre, F. J. McFadden, Jas. Fitzgerald, F. H. Hickey, J. P. Finn. On Friday, those in charge will be Mesdames H. Owen, E. G. Hiland, J. Daley, and Miss Margaret Heffernan.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read by Mrs. F. A. Hodgson, and Mrs. Snider read the message received from Mrs. Lovering, of Hamilton, once again elected National President of the League, which will hold its 1925 convention in Hamilton in June.

FRACTURED SKULL.

OTTAWA, September 15. — While picking butternuts off a tree at his summer cottage at Tenaga, Quebec., about 15 miles from here yesterday afternoon Edward J. Whitaker, aged 32, palaeontologist at Victoria memorial Museum, fractured his skull when he lost his balance and fell 20 feet, aligting on rocky ground underneath the tree. Mr. Whitaker, who has resided here for ten years, was born at Seaforth, Ont.

IMPROVES FLAVOR.

Ham and corned beef are greatly improved in flavor if they are partially cooled in the water in which they were boiled.

ALCOHOLISM.

Deaths from alcoholism are increasing steadily, medical statistics show. At least twice as many are being killed by liquor as in 1920. And not all by poison booze, by any means. Chronic alcoholism still leads. Maybe the deaths are jumping because 1924 hooch kills earlier in life than the old-time "aged in the wood."

Green whisky is an assassin, not so much on account of the alcohol, but because medicinal compound high ethers haven't been developed by aging in the cask.

AMERICANS' DOLLARS LEAVE WITH DOROTHY

DOROTHY DIXON (ABOVE) WAS IN HER OFFICE LONG ENOUGH EACH DAY TO COLLECT THE MONEY THAT WAS COMING IN THROUGH THE MAILS. AN ALLIANCE MEMBERSHIP COUPON IS SEEN BELOW.

MONTREAL, Sept. 12.—Perhaps you were one of the thousands that received a letter from the Co-Operative Alliance of Montreal.

The letter outlined a most alluring proposition. For from $20 to $1000 you would share in the profits of the most romantic business since the days of piracy—yet it was to be within the law.

The Co-Operative Alliance was to export liquor from Canada. Not to the United States, but to the 12 miles limit. There it was to be sold.

The alliance took no risk. Your money would be repaid 200 per cent within a short time.

William Matheson and Captain Archer were the organizers of this legal project, according to the literature.

Perhaps you—or some of your acquaintances—are wondering what happened to the money invested in this lucrative plan.

Dorothy Dixon knows. But Canadian postal inspectors haven't been able to find her.

Big Eyes.

For this slip of a maid, with big black and seductive eyes, was the William Matheson, the Captain Archer and figuratively, the captain and whole crew of the venture, which didn't even own a ship.

Miss Dixon noticed one morning that mail she had expected had not arrived. Into her every-ready black grip, she threw the funds, supposedly intended for the "purchase and assembling of shipments of beers, wines and liquor," which were to be "forwarded in registered bottoms for disposal outside the 'territorial waters' limit'," according to the circulars.

Money Goes.

With her grip in hand and her long black coat muffling her form, passers-by say her step into her expensive automobile and depart.

How much money this lone-handed confidence worker escaped with is not known, but it is known that thousands upon thousands of letters were sent to Americans, offering an "opportunity" to subscribe to the alliance.

Postal inspectors, although they now hunt the girl in the underworlds of southern cities—her soft southern accent giving them that clue—admit she has a good working knowledge of psychology.

Dodges Checks.

"For your protection," her circular read, "We have provided that all moneys must be forwarded in cash only. By handling matters in this way there is no possibility of your bank or friends knowing about your arrangements with us."

Her lists of names were carefully selected. It was gently hinted that members of the alliance might be able to buy the liquor from bootlegger's ("agents," she called them) at reduced prices.

The lure of illicit gains is psychologically strong and Miss Dixon knew it.

She probably yas not a college graduate, but she gained certificates of her knowledge of men—nice crinkley certificates, engraved by the U.S. Treasury Department.

GIRL OF 9 MONTHS IN JAIL.

Child Is Arrested to Care For It When Parents Are Accused.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Sept. 15. — Minnehaha County had in custody Saturday the youngest prisoner in its history. It is a nine-month-old baby girl, arrested on the order of the Juvenile Court.

The court, upon complaint that the child was not being properly cared for by its parents, issued a warrant naming the baby as a defendant and calling for its arrest when it was determined that the service on the child would be ineffectual because of its age.

The baby is being cared for by the police matron pending issuance of summons to the parents and disposition of the case.

NEWS OF BETHANY.

Rural School Fair of South Manvers Was a Big Success.

BETHANY, September 15.—The rural school pupils of South Manvers held their annual field day on Friday when the school fair was held on the grounds adjacent to Galloway's school. The fair was well patronized by the ratepayers from the different sections and a larger number would have been in attendance but some were unable to be present on account of harvest operations.

The fair was under the supervision of Mr. E. E. Snider, public school inspector, and Mr. [illegible] Patterson, Agricultural Representative.

The showing made at the fair is proof that the pupils of the rural school are under no disadvantage on educational lines.

There were live stock, poultry, swine, flowers, cooking, grain, vegetables, fruit, manual training, nature collection and drawing, on exhibition.

The cooking was not all the art of the girls as several different specimens of culinary were the work of boys, but the girls got the honors as to prizes. The boys are deserving of credit for the manufacture of bird houses and trap nests which were on hand; some of them were really as good as an expert carpenter could turn out.

The flower section of the tent was a beautiful display of the different varieties of seeds supplied by the Department of Agriculture.

Mr McLauchlin was the judge of the parade and those who took part in these evolutions went through with military precision, and when finished gave their class yell.

The pupils from S. S. 15 were dressed in blue and white, with silver caps; S. S. No. 14, red and white with white paper caps; S. S. No. 4, white and pale blue. The other schools while not dressed in any one feature were neat and clean. They all carried their different banners, some of which were very artistic in design and color. The following schools were represented as follows:

S. S. No. 3, Miss Nesbitt, teacher.
S. S. No 4, Miss Sanderson, teacher
S. S. No. 9, Miss Nicholls, teacher.
S. S. No. 4, Mr Beggs, teacher.
S. S. No. 5, Mrs Carscadden, teacher.

Personals.

Miss Annie Bray and Miss Lizzie Meines, were visitors at Peterboro exhibition on Saturday.

Mr. F. McCarthy of Hamilton, is spending a few days under the parental roof.

Miss Nelson of Mono Road, has been engaged as teacher for the junior room in our local school.

Mr. and Mrs. George Price of Orono, spent Sunday the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. Byers.

EARLY PRODUCTION.

WOODSTOCK, September 15. — What is believed to be a record for early production of eggs, has been made by a barred rock pullet on the farm of Miss M. M. Lindsay, near Wolverton. This bird started to lay eggs at the age of four months and four days.

THE PRIZE WINNERS.

Children's Sports Attracted a Large List of Entrants.

The children's sports at the Exhibition grounds on Saturday were one of the best events of the kind ever held here. Some of the events had over 50 entries.

To-morrow afternoon between four and five-thirty o'clock the prizes will be awarded to the following prize-winners:

Bays' balloon race—1 George McCarthy, 2 Harry Marsh, 3 Jack Gardner.

50 yards and under—1 Harry Westbrooke, 2 Edward Dormer, 3 Vernon Beavis.

Girls, 25 yards, 12 years and under—1 Marjorie Bowler, 2 Ivy McGovarin, 3 Minnie Ebbs.

50 yards, 16 and under—1 Marion Moore, 2 Ethel Muir, 3 Edna Curran.

Sack race—1 Vernon Beavis, 2, Melville Hunter, 3 Willie Cripps.

½ mile relay, Central school — M. Baker, T. Graham, W. Sharpe, H. Hutchinson. Time 1 minute. 58 sec.

Potato race—1 Alice Grierson, 2 Viola Harvey, 3 Vera White.

Nail driving, schools, Queen Mary—Isabel Thirnbeck, Ethel Muir, Vera White, Lenore Rattley, Ena Geoslin, Marion Moore.

RESPONSIBLE.

Nervous or malicious auto drivers curse confused walkers who get in their way. They forget that the pedestrian has other cars to dodge every day—hundreds of them.

The pedestrian must be cautious, as well as the driver, that's common sense. But the driver has the lion's share of responsibility, the same as the hunter. The man with the instrument of injury or death—a hunting rifle—should be many times as careful as the outsider wearing a red hat so he won't be shot for a deer. So with autos.

The great enemy of teeth

Film is the great enemy of tooth beauty. And a chief cause, according to world's dental authorities, of pyorrhea and most tooth troubles. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. Germs by the millions breed in it. It holds food in contact with teeth, inviting the acid that causes decay.

You can't have prettier, whiter teeth; you can't have healthier teeth unless you combat that film.

Mail the coupon now. Don't expect the same results from old type dentifrices. Begin beautifying your teeth today.

CAPTAIN LASCELLES WOULDN'T MISS MEAL

Makes Unique Excuse For Failure To Report Prince's Movements.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—When reproached by reporters because the Prince of Wales evaded them on his trip through New York on Friday, Captain Lascelles made a reply that will become historical in newspaper annals in America.

The Prince's aide had promised the reporters that he would keep them informed of the Prince's movements. He told them, after His Royal Highness had galivanted around the big city all day, that the trip had not been decided upon until half an hour before he started.

Captain Lascelles explained that he had had to hustle, and that if he had waited to inform the newspaper men he would have had to go without food. "And I wouldn't go without food," he exclaimed, "for comparative strangers."

ALL SAINTS' CHURCH HELD RALLY SUNDAY.

Yesterday was Rally Sunday at All Saints' Church, and there was a large attendance at all services. Rev. G. H. Williams, of St. Patrick's Church, Winnipeg, was the special preacher at the morning and evening services, and also gave the address at the children's service in the afternoon.

The text for the children's address was "Here am I; send me," and the speaker reminded his hearers that those words referred to each and every one, and that no matter how small or unimportant each one was, there was a place for them in God's work.

The recently organized Sunday School orchestra made its first public appearance and assisted greatly in the singing, and made a very favorable impression on all who heard it.

PROHIBITION.

Uncle Sam's rum sleuths are arresting liquor law violators at the rate of 50,000 a year. And convicting 35 out of every 41. Fifty thousand arrests in a population of about 112 millions! This is number eight to be added to the list of seven original jokes. How many violators escape entirely? Hundreds of thousands or millions? The nets still are spread too much for minnows, not enough for whales.

EXPLORERS DISCOVER TRIBE OF INDIANS WHO SPEAK ENGLISH

Inhabitants of Panama Forest Speak Elizabethan Style Perfectly, Says Leader of Expedition

Traces of a tribe in the forests of Panama speaking Elizabethan English, hordes that have guarded for generations the treasure of buccaneers, and an island rich in the relics of a lost civilisation, are claimed to have been discovered by the Scientific Research Association, which left Dartmouth last April in the St. George.

The story of the discoveries has been brought to London by Lieut. Keeley, R.N., who with Commander Blair had charge of the expedition. Lieut. Keeley arrived in England some weeks ago from Panama, where he left the St. George. It was here that he discovered what he claims to be authentic evidence of the existence of descendants of the old English buccaneers who plundered Panama in the sea-dog days.

ELIZABETHAN WORDS.

"I met an explorer, an American ethnologist," said Lieut. Keeley in an interview with a "Daily Express" representative yesterday. "He had come from the jungle which encircles Panama, where he had been befriended by a tribe of Indians who spoke to him in perfect Elizabethan English.

"He thinks, and so do I, that these savages are descendants of old sea-robbers who had ventured inland, and finding a luxurious paradise after much pirating, stayed there.

"One hundred miles from the Panama Canal there exists a tribe of fierce savages, who guard some unknown treasure hidden in their primeval forests. I believe there is a vast hoard of gold there. I know that any white men who have attempted to get past them have been captured, and the soles of their feet cut off.

MUTILATED EXPLORERS.

"They have been forced to walk back on the stumps of their legs. I intend to conduct an expedition later to investigate these tribes.

"I have rereceived from Commander Blair information about an uninhabited island off the coast of Colombia. Beneath the matted growth he has unearthed relics of some forgotten civilisation that none of the scientists with him have ever heard of.

"There are sculptures, monuments to long dead kings and strange hieroglyphs. These relics are being shipped over and are on the way now. They should be here in a few weeks. I believe that we have discovered the key, perhaps, to some of the problems of civilisation that have puzzled us for years."

When The King Goes Shooting

His Majesty no longer rides to hounds but is still devoted to the sport of grouse and pheasant shooting. At this sport King George excels being one of the finest wing shots in the United Kingdom. The picture shows His Majesty mounting his shooting pony on the way to the butts during his recent visit to the Duke of Devonshire.

PRINCE HENRY MAY WED LADY MARY SCOTT, SAYS LATEST LONDON RUMOR

The rumor persists in London that the engagement of Prince Henry, who is twenty-four years old and the third son of King George and Queen Mary, to Lady Mary Theresa Scott, who is twenty and the fourth daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch, will be announced before long.

This is the second successive season Prince Henry has been spending partly at the Buccleuchs' Scottish seat, and his stays there have been more in the nature of private visits to friends than of the formal visits of a Prince. In the normal course of events it is considered here that Prince Henry probably will marry at no distant date.

Leaving aside the Prince of Wales—the question of whose marriage seems now to have become unsolved—Prince Henry is next in line to wed now that his other older brother, the Duke of York, is married. The King and Queen are said still to consider Prince George too young to end his single state.

BROTHER IN SAME REGIMENT.

Lady Mary, who like her sisters, is extremely good looking, was one of the prominent debutantes of the past season.

This is not the first time the name of one of the Buccleuch daughters has been connected with British royalty. For some time previous to her marriage to Lieut. Charles Phipps in 1919 it was strongly rumored that his wife, formerly Lady Sybil Scott, second daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch, would become engaged to the Prince of Wales. But that report shared the fate of all previous and subsequent rumors of that kind.

Lady Mary's brother, Lord William Scott, is in the same regiment, the 10th Hussars, with Prince Henry, and, a great personal friendship exists between them.

Market House, Ross

The tercentenary, this year, of John Kyrle, "the Man of Ross," as immortalized in Pope's verse, draws attention to this Herefordshire town and neighborhood. The old Market Hall, on the foundations of a more ancient Booth Hall, was built in the reign of Charles II. Kyrle made it into a monument of the Restoration by placing a bust of the King upon it at a point opposite to his own house. He lived to be 88, and the Kyrle Society perpetuates his memory to this day.

OFFICER'S SUICIDE RECALLS FAMOUS PEARL FRAUD

Pardoned D.S.O. Found Shot in Barracks at Sheffield

SHIELDED WIFE

After Prison Life Deceased Won High Honors in Battle

Major Cyril Aylmer Cameron, C.B.E., D.S.O., who in 1911 was one of the central figures in a famous pearl necklace prosecution, was found shot through the head at Hillsborough Barracks, Sheffield. He commanded the 46th Battery, Royal Field Artillery.

Thirteen years ago in Edinburgh, Lieutenant Cameron a(s he then was) and his wife were each sentenced to three years' penal servitude on a charge of attempting to defraud Lloyd's underwriters of £6,500. This sum had been claimed as insurance for the loss of a pearl necklace which Mrs. Cameron said was snatched from her in the street. It was proved at the trial that she never had such a necklace. An appeal against the sentence was dismissed.

Then came an extraordinary sequel. Lieutenant Cameron, a convict dismissed from the Army, his career apparently ruined, was cleared by his wife, who, when dangerously ill, confessed that she alone was guilty, and established the fact that her husband had deliberately refrained from entering the witness-box in order not to prejudice her case.

Mrs. Cameron was released from prison after a few weeks, owing to her ill-health, but the then Secretary for Scotland declined to have the case reheard, to enable Lieutenant Cameron to vindicate himself, despite a petition signed by 4,000 people, including two archbishops, and seven bishops, nine judges, twenty members of the Privy Council, 126 generals, and some of the most distinguished members of the peerage.

Lieutenant Cameron eventually left prison, and took part in the war. In 1917 it was announced that in consequence of his valuable services the King, on the advice of his Army Council, had granted him a free pardon. His army rank was restored, and the records of his conviction and his dismissal from the Army were erased.

He served on the General Staff in France from 1914 until July 1918, when he was recalled to the War Office to take charge of the Russian Department.

He came to Sheffield as Major Cameron in 1923. He had hoped this year to take up an appointment as military attache at Riga. This appointment was cancelled, and he was to have gone instead to Newcastle to take up a command. His wife was already in that city with their eleven-year-old son, preparing for his arrival.

Major Cameron left the mess about nine o'clock in the best of spirits. After midnight two other officers heard a moan, and found Major Cameron dying in an armchair in his room with a revolver at his feet.

Major Cameron was the son of Colonel Aylmer Cameron, V.C., and beside his war honors he held a number of foreign decorations.

DUKE OF RICHMOND SELLS BIG ESTATE

The Duke of Richmond and Gordon has sold 7,000 acres of his Huntly estates, including Huntly Lodge, to L. F. W. Davidson, one of the pioneers in the tea and rubber trades in Ceylon, who is the present tenant.

The sale follows the Duke's decision in 1922 to sell the whole of the Huntly property owing to the increased rates and taxes and other burdens on landowners. In the latter part of last year the Duke disposed of his extensive deer forest of Glenmore, on the borders of Inverneasshire and Morayshire.

Huntly Lodge is the ducal seat at Huntly, and was built largely from material taken from the ruins of Strathbogie Castle, which had not been occupied by the family since the middle of the eighteenth century.

V.C. Lies in State In Bristol Cathedral; Given Imposing Funeral

"In memory of a comrade who did good service to his country," was the inscription on a wreath from Field-Marshal Lord Methuen, which was one of many placed beside the bier in Bristol Cathedral on which the remains of Sergeant H. Blanshard Wood, V.C., lay in state for one night. Four sergeants of the Scots Guards—Wood's old regiment—were on guard in full uniform.

Thousands of people attended the funeral, including the Lord Mayor, representatives of the Corps of Commissionaires, of which Wood was a member, and local units of the Territorial Army.

Pipers and drummers of the Scots Guards playing a lament headed the procession to the "Soldiers' Corner" of Arnos Vale cemetery.

Sergeant Wood was awarded the V.C. for bravery at St. Python, France, on October 18, 1918, when the command of his platoon devolved on him. He also gained the Military Medal.

ELEPHANT RAIDS LARDER OF HOTEL

Hid Her Head When the Keeper Arrived—Had Good Meal

While on a visit to Gainsborough, Lincolnshire, with a travelling menagerie, an elephant made a substantial breakfast, unknown to her keeper, through the window of an inn larder.

The animal, a female, aged 33, was billetted with several camels in a stable at the Tiger Inn, her attendant also sleeping in the stable on a low bed stretched across the doorway.

At dawn the elephant, Simie by name, snapped the hobbles by which she was chained, stepped over her keeper without disturbing him, pushed open the door and found her way to the larder of the inn.

Breaking a sheet of wire gauze over the window, she proceeded to consume a

Plum pie,
Dish of custard,
Cheese cakes,
Currant loaves,
Half a bag of flour,
Half a sack of potatoes,
Peck of peas,
Four cabbages,
Bag of onions, and
Several loaves of white and brown bread.

As a vegetarian, she disdained a joint of meat. She did not break a single article of crockery, and even carefully lifted off the lid of the bread bowl and placed it on the floor.

When her keeper arrived, Simie hid her head in a corner.

SERVICE IN TOMB TO FULFIL WILL

By an annual custom dating back 151 years, the rector of Sutton, Surrey, has opened and held a service in the tomb of Miss Mary Gibson, under the provisions of her will. He received £5 for the duty, the poor of the parish £5, the churchwardens £4 and the clerk £1.

Miss Gibson left £5,000 in 3 per cent. bank stock to Christ's Hospital on the condition that the governors make these payments.

Local tradition states that the tomb is to be permanently closed when the last member of the Gibson family has been buried there and the key taken to Palestine and thrown into the River Jordan, but this is not mentioned in the will.

FEAR FOR SAFETY OF ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL

Further Shaking May Lead to Catastrophe, Say Architects

Fears for the safety of St. Paul's Cathedral, if the City authorities persist—against the advice of experts and the wishes of architects, traffic authorities, and Londoners generally—with their proposal to build a "St. Paul's Bridge" across the Thames, are expressed in the report of the Royal Arts Commission just issued.

The Commission was instructed "to inquire into the aesthetic problems connected with the proposed St. Paul's Bridge."

The report says:—

"Heavy motor traffic is increasing. There is a serious risk from the transmission of its vibration through the London clay, the chief effect of which is now confined to the southern end of the cathedral. Until the fabric is secure any further risk should be avoided."

To intensify existing dangers by adding a fresh source of vibration at the eastern end of St. Paul's, with inevitable reactions upon the perilous thrust of the dome on the piers at the crossing and upon the southern wall, causes us such grave apprehension that we earnestly beg that immediate attention may be given to this serious aspect of the problem.

Further shaking of the Cathedral fabric may lead to a catastrophe.

The report is signed by every member of the Commission except Sir Aston Webb, the famous architect, who is ill. Sir Aston, however, concurs with its general principles. The other members are:—

Earl of Crawford (chairman), an art expert of world-wide fame;

Marquess Curzon, statesman and man of letters;

Sir Reginald Blomfield, R.A., Fellow of the Royal Institue of British architects;

Sir George Frampton, R.A., the eminent sculptor;

Sir Edwin Lutyens, R.A., designer of the Cenotaph;

D. Y. Cameron, R.A., painter;

J. A. Gotch, president of the Royal Institute of British Architects;

Wireless Aerial, Struck by Lightning, Damages 3 Houses

During a thunderstorm at Kings Heath, Birmingham, a wireless aerial was struck by lightning.

The three-valve wireless set in the house was smashed.

The chimney-pot was also thrown down and the curtains fired, while windows were broken and the electric wires fused.

Two other houses adjoining were also struck.

Part of the roof of one was broken off and fell in the bedroom, electric wires were fused, and the telephone dislocated.

In the other house the ceiling was cracked, the windows broken and the telephone put out of order.

During a gale at Dover yesterday the sea swept over the mile-long breakwater in cataracts.

STILL HUNT FOR SCIENTIST'S SECRET

The secret, revealed practically on his death-bed, of the process discovered by the late Professor H. T. Buris for the elimination of sulphur from shale oil is to remain in England.

After his death in London last May offers were received from foreign firms and the representative of one Government, but the formula has been transferred to a British firm.

After his death, Professor Buri's rooms were found to have been ransacked, presumably by someone searching for the papers of the scientist, but the intruder was disappointed.

KILLED BY FALL FROM TRAP.

Mrs. Raynes, wife of a butcher of Wirksworth, was being driven in a trap to visit her sister, when at Idridgehay, Derbyshire, the horse stumbled. Mrs. Raynes was thrown into the road and killed.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S JAZZ ORCHESTRA

Dr. George Dyson, lecturing at the Oxford summer course in music, described the "flute, cornet, sackbut, psaltery and dulcimer," referred to in the Bible history of Nebuchadnezzar, as "Nebuchadnezzar's Orchestra."

The translators of the Bible, he said, had no knowledge of the instruments named in the Hebrew. In 1600 the flute was a primitive affair, the cornet a reed instrument, the sackbut the father of the trombone, capable only of particularly raucous sounds, while the psaltery was a kind of harp.

CHARGE OF TANKS EXCITING AFFAIR

Field Guns Stop Charge at Twenty-four Miles An Hour

A mass attack by tanks was the feature of a short and decisive battle in the Army manoeuvres at Aldershot this year.

The 1st Guards Brigade, supplemented by field batteries and part batteries of artillery, had as opponents eight of the latest pattern light tanks, which were aided in the attack by a squadron of the 10th Hussars and the Border Regiment. Aeroplanes reconnoitred for both sides.

The Guards Brigade had early information of the whereabouts of their mechanical enemies. This enabled Lt.-Col. Price, Welsh Guards, to dispose some of his field batteries in positions that would give the tanks a warm reception.

The tank commander decided to attack the centre of the brigade. Each firing six guns, the tanks, their exhausts roaring, charged straight through a thin line of skirmishers at the infantry supports at about 24 miles an hour.

For two minutes there was a glorious prospect of speedy victory. Then the 18-pounders, firing through bushes at point-blank range, deluged the tanks with shell. Actually they fired blank, but the umpires recognised that the tanks were accounted for and stopped the battle.

ADMIRAL DE POBECK'S 50 YEARS AT SEA

Fifty years of service at sea was completed by Admiral Sir John de Robeck when he hauled down his flag in the battleship Queen Elizabeth at Portsmouth as Commander-in-Chief of the Atlantic Fleet.

He was in command of the Allied Fleets at the Dardanelles during the war, and of the ships at the Naval Review at Spithead last month.

CHINA BIG BUYER OF ENGLISH WOOL

Demand Quadrupled in Last Three Years—Japan Interested

Taste in clothing in the Far East is changing—to the profit of Yorkshire. China and Japan are no longer mainly content with cotton materials, and in the course of a few years have become easily the largest purchasers of British woollen cloth.

In three years the Chinese demand has practically quadrupled, while the Japanese have been buying so hard lately that the price of serge has risen.

In 1913 China (including Hongkong) imported from the United Kingdom 6,576,000 linear yards of woollen cloths, but in the first seven months only of the present year the imports amounted to 14,028,000 square yards.

Japan, which eleven years ago took 7,661,000 linear yards, has in the past seven months taken no fewer than 17,683,000 square yards.

Between them the two countries have purchased this year nearly a third of our shipments of woollen piece goods to all overseas destinations. There is also a great increase in their buying of worsted cloths, totalling 7,892,000 square yards, or nearly a quarter of our total exports.

In view of the shortage in the world's wool clip, the enormous expansion of demand from the Far East is a factor of considerable importance, so far as China, with its many millions, is concerned, there can be no telling how immense the trade may become, provided prices do not rise too high and stifle the demand.

The saying that an inch added to a Chinaman's raiment spells prosperity to Manchester needs little modification to hold good of the new conditions that are arising.

BABOON'S TRIP TO POLICE COURT

A baboon which escaped from premises at Barnet belonging to Messrs. Chapman, the animal dealers, entered Barnet Police Court when the magistrates were not sitting, and after visiting the court room took refuge below in a cell.

Here it climbed to the ventilating grating near the roof, and for some time defied capture.

Finally two keepers caught it in a net and carried it back to its cage.

EXPERT WOMAN BURGLAR'S RECORD

"Splendid Servant" Who Bolted With Employer's Jewels

USED FALSE KEYS

Photograph in Rogues' Gallery Provided Means of Identification

A woman who holds the unenviable distinction of being one of the most frequently convicted criminals of her age appeared at Tower Bridge Police Court.

At the age of 38 Mary Elizabeth Robson has received sentences totalling 24 years, and she now receives another 15 months' hard labor.

Housebreaking is one of her specialities. Robson has never been known to use burglar's tools, but usually gains an entrance by means of a duplicate key.

Her favourite method is to obtain a situation as a domestic servant by means of forged references and to seize an opportunity during her brief residence in the house to take an impression of the front door key.

"SPLENDID SERVANT."

"She seemed a splendid servant, and worked so hard," said her last victim, Mrs. Llorence Arnold, of Waterloo road, S. E. Robson relieved herself of the necessity of breaking into her employer's house by decamping one Sunday night in April with £66 worth of notes and jewellery.

She was arrested in Newcastle by Det-Sergt. Ellis, of Kennington road, the police having got on her track through Mrs. Arnold picking out the woman's photograph from among those of notorious criminals kept at Scotland Yard.

All Robson's previous offences have been committed in the North of England, where she is well-known to nearly every police authority.

Her convictions total 30, and she has twice been sent to penal servitude.

Canadian Officer is Sentenced by Court To Dismissal from Navy

A Naval Court-martial, at which Captain C. N. Reyne was president, sat at Portsmouth for the trial of Paymaster Sub-Lieutenant (acting) John Edward Ellis, belonging to the Canadian Navy, who was charged with having deserted from H.M.S. Malaya on July 5, and with fraudulently converting to his own use £62 17s. 4d., moneys belonging to the gun-room mess of the Malaya. The circumstantial letter stated that while the Malaya was at Weymouth on Saturday, July 5, the accused went ashore and did not return. A quarterly audit of mess accounts held after his disappearance showed a deficit of £62 17s. 4d. in the gun-room wine fund account. On July 28 Ellis gave himself up to the police at Plumstead, and he was taken back to his ship. He was destitute when he surrendered.

The accused pleaded "Guilty," and made a statement in which he said he joined the Naval College in Canada and was sent for training to the Royal Navy and had served in various ships. He was 21 years of age, and since his admission to the Navy in 1921 he had given satisfaction both in conduct and ability. He asked the Court to give him an opportunity to make a fresh start in life.

The Court ordered him to be dismissed from His Majesty's service.

Took 15 Years to Make Ship Model To Help Animals

A remarkable model of a battleship which took Nurse Bridges, of Sevenoaks, 15 years of her spare time to complete is to be exhibited to raise funds for various animal societies.

The model measures nine feet long, and is a marvel of ingenuity.

All the fittings, from the guns to the luminous life-belt, which is fitted with a calcium tube and a brandy flask, are built to scale, and the ship is fitted with electric light.

ST. KILDA MAN SEES HIS FIRST TRAIN

Wonders of Modern Life Surprise Letter Carrier from Lonely Isle

The postman from the lonely island of St. Kilda has just visited Fleetwood and had the surprise of his life, for he has seen, for the first time in his life:—

A railway train.
A motor-car.
An electric tramway.
A cinema show.

His experiences alternately caused him surprise, delight and terror.

When he first caught sight of a tram-car he thought it was a train, and asked where was the engine, which he had read always drew a train.

A motor-car speeding along the street and sounding its horn filled him with terror, and he bolted for safety into a shop doorwey.

It was a cinema, however, which caused him greatest surprise.

So alarmed was he at first that he was inclined to leave, but he was persuaded to stay and see the film, which proved to be one of the naval review at Spithead. He was astounded to see the ships move across the screen.

He was taken to Blackpool, where he was amazed at the number of people, and he has now left for home.

He would have liked to prolong his stay on the mainland, but he might have had to wait six months before another steamer would call at St. Kilda.

He delivers the letters when they arrive there, which is every six or eight months.

Woman Exhibited In Iron Cage in Jersey Royal Court

A young woman named Daisy Southard, a native of Exeter, after being sentenced at the Jersey Royal Court, was placed in an iron cage in a corner of the court, in accordance with an ancient practice, and subjected to the gaze of the crowd of visitors who had come to watch the proceedings.

The woman had been fined £2 and sent to gaol for a month for making a false declaration of the birth of her child. When she was put in the cage after sentence for all to see she became hysterical and had to be removed.

SIXTY-CENT CHEQUE FOR 139 BAGS PEAS

Farmers and peagrowers in the Selby district of Yorkshire have had good crops of peas, but they are in a state of indignation at the prices they are getting for them.

One local farmer, Thomas Atkinson, of Cliffe, sent 139 five-peck bags of peas to a northern market, and in return received a cheque for a half-crown, which he intends to frame as a momento of the transaction.

Another farmer sent 200 bags of peas to a neighboring market, and has received a balance sheet showing that he owes 30s. on the deal.

WOMEN THE WORST GERM-CARRIERS?

Are women more dangerous as disease carriers than men? The problem is raised by the annual report of the Board of Control for Scotland, which states that there are now in Scotland asylums thirteen female carriers and one male carrier of enteric, and one female carrier of paratyphoid B fever.

Professor Browning, of Glasgow University, is making researches to solve the problem, and has obtained much new information on the mystery of germ-carrying by certain people.

INHERITS FORTUNE; DIES IN POVERTY

Nixon Gray, formerly a mining engineer, who was left $300,000 by his father, a lieutenant-colonel, 24 years ago, died in poverty and dependent on relatives at Cardiff Royal Infirmary recently.

He was said to have spent between $100,000 and $150,000 on blood stock and large sums on various sports, and it was reputed that he disposed of the bulk of the fortune in 15 months.

He was a grand-nephew of the late John Gray, a pioneer of the Welsh coal export trade.

WEDGED IN BATH HEAD DOWNWARDS

A man of over 20 stone, William Thomas Butler, licensee of the Old Tiger's Head, Lee Green, was found wedged in his bath, head downwards.

At the inquest it was stated that the bathroom floor was polished and the bath mat appeared to have slipped away from the side of the bath.

Dr. Bevan said that death was due to drowning. Mr. Butler was an enormous man, and the bath was none too big for an ordinary man.

If Mr. Butler had fallen, as appeared probable, into the bath head first, he would have jammed right in.

A verdict of death from accidental causes was recorded.

MADE HIS WILL THEN FELT BETTER

A visitor to Wembley hurried into the Exhibition Post Office, said he felt ill and was afraid he was going to die, and told the Postmaster that he wanted to make his will.

He drew up his last testament, which was duly witnessed by the Postmaster and an assistant, and then said he felt better. He explained that he came from Cricklewood and said he swallowed a bullet two years ago.

GERMAN PROFESSOR FOOTBALL PLAYER

Professor Otto Nertz, a lecturer on sport at Berlin University, is training with the West Ham United football team at Upton Park.

He is thirty-five years of age, about 5 ft. 10 in. in height, has a close-cropped head, wears spectacles, and is as brown as a berry.

Herr Nertz is an expert tennis player and he speaks eight languages.

He is a teetotaler, a fruitarian, and a non-smoker.

GIRL SLEEPWALKER SPEEDS ALONG ROAD

Walking home at midnight along the Southampton road, Winchester, two men saw a figure in white running at top speed towards them.

It was a young woman, wearing a nightdress, bare-footed, and fast asleep.

A motor-lorry was approaching, and when pulled aside the girl awoke. Her piercing shrieks aroused people in the neighborhood.

She was taken to the infirmary suffering from shock. Later she was identified as a housemaid.

WHOLE TOWN IDLE IN SOUTH WALES

The whole of the colliery town of Clydach Vale, near Pontypridd, Glamorganshire, has been rendered idle. Notices served upon the 4,000 workmen because of the un-remunerative working of the Cambrian pits at Clydach expired yesterday and by to-night all labor will have been withdrawn.

The stoppage will cause widespread distress and poverty among the population of Clydach, estimated at about 12,000.

The Cambrian pits are one of three important groups of steam coal collieries owned by the Cambrian Combine in the Rhondda Valley.

GIRL GUIDE IS AWARDED CROSS

Brownie Lizzie Davies, of the 7th Merionethshire Co. Girl Guides, aged 11, has been presented with the silver cross for saving life.

She is the first Brownie to be awarded this honor in Great Britain.

She jumped into the sea at Aberdovey and rescued Ronnie Stevens, aged 9, who had fallen under the harbor jetty.

BARONET WHO WON BET OF $150,000

Sir Alexander Beaumont Churchill Dixie, Bart., of Market Bosworth, Leicester, who has died at Scarborough, was a friend of the late King Edward, when Prince of Wales, in his younger days.

Some years back he offered to provide the inmates of Scarborough Workhouse with beer at Christmas, but the Guardians would not agree to this.

Sir Alexander took great interest in horse racing, and is said, on one occasion, to have won a bet of over $150,000.

MOVING MOUNTAIN IN RHYMNEY VALLEY

Consequent upon torrential rains, the mountain at Tcoedyrhiwfuwch, near Bargoed, South Wales, is again on the move, and is playing havoc with the public services.

The bursting of a water main cut off the supply to 100,000 inhabitants of the Rhymney Valley.

The authorities are working strenuously to preserve the services.

DETECTIVE TAKES TIME BY MISTAKE

Folkestone detective, hurrying up High street, which was crowded with people, collided with one of a party of four young men going down. When he had passed, he heard the man shout: "He's got my watch."

The watch and chain were found hanging on a button of the detective's coat, and the incident ended in laughter.

Evan Evans was buried under a fall of roof for four hours at Caeran Colliery, and was almost free when another fall crushed him to death. Stanley Chard, at Black Vein Colliery, Pontypool, was struck off a journey by a low girder, and died from his injuries.

COUNTESS WHO HAD 3 LOTS OF TEETH

Portrait of Oldest Woman Presented to National Gallery

DIED AT 140

Bacon Cites Her as Example of Irish Longevity

A portrait of one of the most remarkable women of the sixteenth century has been presented to the National Portrait Gallery, and has now been hung there. The picture is of the wonderful old Countess of Desmond, of whom Tom Moore sang in his "Fudge" pasquinades—

"That she lived to much more than a hundred and ten
And was killed by a fall from a cherry tree then."

Though she did not meet her death in this tragic fashion, she certainly lived to an extremely ripe old age. How old she really was when she died in 1604 has never been satisfactorily determined. Most authorities state 140, assuming that she married Thomas Fitz-Thomas, twelfth Earl of Desmond, as his second wife in 1505.

She was the daughter of John Fitzgerald, and granddaughter of the famous "White Knight," John Fitz-Gibbon. Lord Bacon adduces her as an instance of the longevity of the Irish people, and in his "Natural History" mentions that she lost her teeth twice or thrice, others coming in their place. She was sufficiently memorable to be alluded to by Sir Walter Raleigh in his "World History."

Her principal residence was at Inchiquin, in Munster, but she outlived so many sovereigns and owners that the day came when her Irish possessions passed into the hands of the "great and grasping Earl of Cork." She was evicted and came to London to crave for subsistence, walking all the way from Bristol. Her daughter, however, was so decrepit that she was brought in a little cart, their poverty not allowing of any other means.

Only two persons in the Christian era are known to have lived longer than the countess—Henry Jenkins, who was 169 when he died in 1670, and "Old Parr," who died in 1635, aged 152 years.

WRIST MAGIC BY FAMOUS SURGEON

Sir Herbert Barker has just completed the cure of a displaced wrist which has caused Mr. Waterman, the custodian of Stanhope Gate, Hyde Park, pain and discomfort for a long time.

One morning he saw Sir Herbert crossing the road, and while he held up the traffic near the "island" he asked the specialist if he would have a look at his wrist. Sir Herbert assented, and with one wrench put the wrist right.

MARCHIONESS AS DIRECTOR OF SPA

Strathpeffer is About 20 Miles from Inverness, Scotland

The beautiful Marchioness of Carisbrooke, whose husband is a cousin of King George, has become a director of Strathpeffer Spa, which is about twenty miles out of Inverness and nearly 600 miles from London.

In becoming an hotel director, the marchioness is only following the precedent of the marquis, who after his war service in the Grenadier Guards went into the City as a director in the shipping firm of Lamport and Holt.

The marquis, when the marchioness was still Lady Irene Denison (only daughter of the Earl and Countess of Londesborough), was known as Prince Alexander of Battenberg. Just before their war-time marriage in the Chapel Royal the prince's surname was changed to Mountbatten, and the marquisate of Carisbrooke was conferred on him.

DIES AFTER 48 DOSES IN 2 DAYS

In two days, George Samual Joyce, aged 70, a clay pipe-maker, of Felton street, Haggerston, took 48 doses of medicine, of one tablespoonful each.

Joyce died in the local infirmary after walking from his home for treatment there. A 30-ounce bottle, containing the remains of the mixture, was produced at an inquest.

The coroner, Dr. Edwin Smith, said the medicine, a cough mixture, should have been taken in doses of one tablespoonful three times a day. Joyce had been taking it in very plentiful fashion, but as it consisted only of ammonia and vinegar it was quite harmless.

Medical evidence was that death was due to syncope arising from fatty degeneration of the heart, and a verdict of death from natural causes was recorded.

BIG FOREST SCHEME IN EAST ANGLIA

The largest forest planted in this country in modern times is springing up in East Anglia.

The purchase by the Forestry Commission of about 6,000 acres of the Lynford Estate, near Thetford, gives the Commissioners 20,000 acres in this district for forestry operations.

Planting has already begun.

The site of the new forest runs from Thetford, on the south-east, towards Lakenheath, and thence north for five miles over the Suffolk border into Norfolk.

The Commissioners intend to create workers' holdings. At the fewest, five holdings will be provided for every thousand acres planted, and, as each holding will not be less than 10 acres, a hundred families will be settled on the land in addition to the Commissioners' staff.

Apart from his allotment, each man is guaranteed 150 days' work in each year.

The principal plantings will be Scottish, Corsican, and maritime pines.

The land to be planted is to a large extent a sandy rabbit-haunted waste, and its use for afforestation will actually increase food production. Men will be able to work half the year in the forst, and will be able to devote the other half to tilling land which would otherwise go uncultivated.

BRITAIN'S INCOME IS HUGE FIGURE

Income tax paid in the United Kingdom during the year ended March 31, 1923, amounted to £314,374,524.

This figure is given in the annual report of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue just issued.

The gross income of the United Kingdom (including Ireland) in 1922-23 was estimated at £2,000,000,000. The total number of income tax payers for the succeeding year is put at 4,700,000.

The following net receipts for that year 1922-23 are given.

Super-tax	£63,910,221
Excess Profits Duty	£1,122,546

Gross receipts for excess profits amounted to £55,869,203, but of this £54,746,657 was repaid.

Net receipts of death duties amounted to £56,494,667, compared with £51,263,696 for the previous year.

SPELL OF BAGPIPES IN LONDON STREET

Five ex-service men, who paraded Victoria street, London, with two drums, two bagpipes and a collecting box, were charged at Westminster with obstruction.

They were given in a very short space of time 386 pennies and five sixpences by the public.

It was stated that the men impeded the traffic, and they were ordered to pay a fine of 10s. each.

WOMAN POUNDED IN HER BED BY INHUMAN THIEF

Mother of Five Children Was Beaten Until Insensible.

ASSAILANT ESCAPES.

Eight Year Old Child Finds Mother Lying in Pool of Blood.

ST. THOMAS, Sept. 15.—Some time between the hours of midnight and early morning on Saturday an unknown man entered the bedchamber of Mrs. Albert Couse, who resides with her five small children, a mile and a half east of St. Thomas on the Highway, and beat her into unconsciousness when he was interrupted while searching her room for valuables. The plight of Mrs. Couse was not discovered until six o'clock in the morning, when her 8-year-old daughter went to wake her and screamed with fright when she found her mother lying in a pool of blood, apparently dead. The injured woman was removed to the hospital, where it was necessary to put 30 stitches in the wounds which had been inflicted in her head by some sharp instrument. It was reported at the hospital this morning that the woman would recover. A purse containing between $15 and $20 was found to be missing from the bureau drawer in Mrs. Couse's room. Although Mrs. Couse was unable to identify her assailant in any way, the police are searching for John Hammer, a 16-year-old farm laborer who had been in the employ of the Couses since March of this year. The boy had been working at a nearby farm for the past two weeks, but returned to the Couse farm on Thursday and stayed that night and Friday night. He was missing on Saturday morning and a warrant has been issued for his arrest.

Albert Couse, the owner of the farm, was not at home when the assault was committed. He had gone to Toronto a number of days previous on business, leaving his wife and five children all under the age of 8 years.

Mrs. Couse told her husband that she was struck the first time while still asleep. She cried out, and a voice told her roughly to "shut up." Then more blows were rained on her head until she lost consciousness.

LARKIN MAY ACT IN ULSTER ISSUE

Canada's High Commissioner Likely For Appointment —Question Looms Big

LONDON, Sept. 15. — (British United Press, by Crandall). — The Right Hon. P. C. Larkin, High Commissioner for Canada, or else the High Commissioner for Australia, will probably be asked to represent Ulster on the Boundary Commission. Since the meeting is scheduled for to-morrow, the Ulster Cabinet is expected to refuse to commit itself by making an appointment of its own representative.

Britain seems anxious to leave the decision largely to the Dominions and South Africa is expected to act as judge after the refusal of Sir Robert Borden to accept the post.

Following the meeting of the Ulster Cabinet, the House of Commons expected to re-assemble on September 30th, and it will rush the Irish bill through, and then adjourn again for a recess for a short time before the Russian treaty is taken up. The Irish bill will probably be opposed in the House of Lords, but it is hardly likely that the Opposition will go so far as positive rejection, for such a step would inevitably mean the holding of the general election on the Irish issue. The Opposition is endeavoring to concentrate all its forces on the Russian treaty issue. A split among the British Liberals seems probable as a result of the steps which Lloyd George is taking. Lord Grey, who remains the Liberal leader in the Lords, is said to be strongly in favor of a treaty.

COAL DROPS $2 IN FORT WILLIAM

Peterboro Dealers Attribute Market Deflation to Local Conditions.

NO DECREASE HERE.

FORT WILLIAM, Sept. 15.—Residents of Fort William will save about $50,000 in cold cash this winter owing to a drop in price of anthracite and domestic soft coal. This saving to the pockets of householders does not include the great saving that will be made in the heating of places of business and public offices of various kinds. It is probable that the saving will run close to $1,000,000 in Fort William when every angle is taken into consideration. Dealers in Fort William announced that a drop of $1.50 a ton had been effected in various sizes of anthracite. The drop affects domestic soft coal to the extent of $2 per ton.

LOCAL CONDITIONS.

According to the tone of local dealers, the price of coal is more apt to advance than drop. The wholesale price of coal has increased 50c since April 1, at the rate of 10c per month.

The sudden deflation in the Fort William market is attributed to local conditions. Probably, said one prominent Peterboro coal merchant, some large company has launched a coal war, or else prices have been at such high level, the Fort William dealers are merely lowering the price to normality. At any rate, in the opinion of local dealers, the drop in the market is not due to any fundamental condition in the coal market.

The suggestion that an influx of western coal caused the present condition could not be entertained as there was not sufficient of this for Winnipeg, and it is very improbable that any shipments reached as far east as Fort William.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

THE "CUP OF LIFE"

Thrilling Romance of Two Worlds. "Fast Steppers," and Two Comedies at Royal Tonight.

"The Cup of Life," Thomas H. Ince's latest special production for the Associated Producers, which will be featured at the Royal Theatre today, is both a colorful romance of Singapore and the East Indies and a tense, stirring drama which evolves around the racial dividing line between Oriental and Occidental.

From both an artistic and a dramatic standpoint, "The Cup of Life" satisfies the most critical demands. Of three, it is difficult to decide which is its outstanding feature, the excellent character portrayals of the all-star cast, which includes Hobart Bosworth, Madge Bellamy, Niles Welch, and Tully Marshall; the Oriental splendor and beauty of the settings and costumes, or the powerful and gripping dramatic situations and sequences which command the interest of the spectator.

The original story, by Carey Wilson, was adapted to the screen by Joseph Franklin Poland. Rowland V. Lee directed the feature, under the personal supervision of Thomas H. Ince.

"FAST STEPPERS"

Another of the popular "Fast Stepper" series, starring Billy Sullivan, is scheduled for presentation at the Royal tonight. These entertaining stories of the race track are very popular with Royal patrons. "Getaway O'Day" is the last of the series. Next week the same star will be featured in a new series of the famous "Leather Pushers."

CUMMINGS MAKES NEW PRODUCTION AT RACE TRACK

When "Riders Up," Universal all star picture to be shown in the Royal theater commencing Thursday was pronounced ready for distribution, Irving Cummings, the director, completed his fourth straight production for Universal.

This picture was made with all star cast. Creighton Hale, George Cooper, Robert Brower, Ethel Shannon and Kate Price have principal roles; and Edith Yorke, Charlotte Stevens and Harry Mann have parts of vital but of lesser importance.

The screen story was adapted from the Red Book Magazine story, "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," by Gerald Beaumont, acclaimed one of the best fiction writers dealing with sport. It is a story of race track life and was filmed in Tia Juana the horses, jockeys and many others being actually employed in the capacities shown on the screen.

The race track tout's experiences are the basis of the story and he is pictured as the majority of them really are; hard-working, honest, according to their code and ever ready to do a good turn to the brother who is down on his luck. They give advice according to their knowledge and convictions, except when superstition impels them to abandon reason for a "hunch."

AT THE REGENT.

We do not pretend to be able to describe 'Judgmement of the Storm," and there is no other photoplay to which it can be compared. We can only tell you that it is one of the most gripping and thrilling films ever presented in Peterboro and that you should see it while it is at the Regent Theatre.

The story has to do with John Trevor, a college boy, and his love for Mary Heath, the daughter of a farmer's widow. Of course, there is the second suitor and villain, Martin Freeland, 'a city chap' and rounder.

The complications come fast for John Trevor's mother, known in the underworld as "Helene," runs a gambling house unknown to John who thinks his mother is wealthy. Dave Heath, the brother of the girl he loves, is killed in this gambling house when Freeland brings him to the city to "see the sights." John Trevor, to atone, volunteers to work without pay on the Heath farm in place of the murdered Dave for whose death he holds his own mother responsible.

From the fury of a big blizzard John rescues Bob Heath, Dave's young brother, the Heath twins and his own mother who has come from the city to see him at Christmas, and the judgment of the storm replaces misery in many hearts with great happiness.

The scenes for the big blizzard were filmed in the high Sierras and are undoubtedly the greatest snowstorm scenes ever screened, not even excepting the great snow scenes in "Way Down East."

The story was written by Ethel Styles Middleton, a Pittsburgh housewife. It is a story that is written in the fertile soil of everyday life and should bring this heretofore unknown writer great fame.

The adaptation and direction were both done by Del Andrews, who made "The Hottentot," among other great pictures. In "Judgment of the Storm," he has far excelled any of his previous efforts.

The cast is really all star. Each individual in it is a star in his or her own name. Lloyd Hughes as John Trevor, does excellent work. Lucille Nicksen as Mary Heath plays her role in a delightful manner. Myrtle Stedman gives a fine performance in the role of "Helene" Trevor, the mother of John and the owner of a gamblin- den. Georges Hackathorn, Clarie McDowell and Phil McCullough, all show great histronic ability.

AT THE CAPITOL.

GLORIA SWANSON FROM HALL ROOM TO A BALL ROOM

Gloria Swanson, in the brief period it takes to make two pictures, has bridged the gap between the bourgeoisie and royalty.

In "Manhandled," shown at the Capitol but a short time ago, Gloria was plain Tessie McGuire. Now she is Her Royal Highness Princess Marie Louise Tavatrina Sagoia (we'll call her the Princess for short), only daughter of the ruling Archduke of Vlatavia, for her new Paramount picture, "Her Love Story," which will be shown at the Capitol to-day, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mary Roberts Rinehart, America's foremost woman novelist, wrote the story, a Balkan tale of kings and nobles who are real human beings. Ian Keith, a welcome newcomer to the screen, has the leading male role in support of the star. George Fawcett and Mario Majeroni head the strong cast, which includes, among others, Echlin Gayer, Sidney Herbert, Donald Hall, Baroness de Hedemann, Jane Auburn, little Berty Wales and Gen. Lodijensky.

"Her Love Story" is a pleasing romance in a colorful setting, with Gloria wearing more beautiful gowns than ever before. Gowns and Gloria are spoken of in the same breath, when the women folk see the delightful creations in this picture!

If you thought Gloria was good in "Manhandled," you surely can't afford to miss her in "Her Love Story." Everyone who has seen it declares it's away out and beyond any of her other productions. And to say a picture is better than "Manhandled" is saying something.

"THE COVERED WAGON" A PICTURE OF LIFE ON THE PRAIRIES.

The old days, so famous for adventure and down in history as the days of the birth of the American nation, have been turned back and are with us again in "The Covered Wagon," James Cruze's latest Paramount production which will be shown at the Capitol next Thursday, Friday, Saturday. The great stretch of the western plains forms a most magnificent background, and five hundred or more covered wagons, or "prairie schooners," add greatness to this colossal picture. True, it is a love story, but this one is different. It is a love tale of the desert wastes, long and enduring with its thrilling climax, leading to the reunion of the young couple, played by Lois Wilson and J. Warren Kerrigan, in a frontier homestead in Oregon. "The Covered Wagon" eclipses anything in pictures.

AT THE GRAND.

"THE CAT AND THE CANARY."

"The Cat and the Canary," the super-mystery thriller, is, without a bit of doubt, the outstanding popular favorite of all plays produced in the last twenty years.

Those who follow the doings of the theatrical world know how this play, written by a then unknown author and presented by a then unknown producer, proceeded to make stage history.

It found a lodging at the National Theatre, New York, and was a sensation overnight. It stayed there for two solid years, never playing to an empty seat, and last year was brought back for another return engagement, so great was the demand for it.

"The Cat and the Canary" was written by John Willard, an American soldier of fortune, actor and World War hero. It was produced by Kilbourn Gordon, Inc., and it brought both these young men into the limelight of fame in the short space of twenty-four hours.

Further than that, it conferred the mantle of stardom upon several players. Among these was Sylvia Field, the diminutive ingenue, and Henry Hull, not to overlook clever Blanche Friderici.

"The Cat and the Canary" became so popular that a dozen touring companies were organized and went all over the country for two years. Productions in England, Australia, and other countries followed, and each recorded a new triumph for this weird, and yet highly amusing, success.

"THE FIRST YEAR."

It is easy to understand why "The First Year," written by Frank Craven, and which is the first production of the Theatrical Enterprises Limited in conjunction with John Golden, has attained such a popularity it has played to capacity audiences everywhere, and people go to see this comedy again and again.

"The First Year" is described as a comic tragedy of married life at the start, it is all of that and is a slice of real life. The audience will be looking upon intimate scenes in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Everybody. Surely Frank Craven had an inspiration when he wrote such a simple and laugh-provoking play.

Possibly "The First Year" is not the most amusing play ever written. Possibly it is not the most realistic comedy yet written, but a more amusing writing—take it either way you will—has not found its way before the footlights in many a day. It is, on the whole, astonishing how little of our theatrical humor is gained through the simple method of letting natural people act naturally. And it is, by the same token, astonishing how much of "The First Year's" humor is gained through just that method.

High comedy is a form of writing which is largely based on the assumption that a group of people are endowed with miraculous and supernatural smartness of speech. Most theatregoers wink at the fundamental falsity of high comedy—its compromise with naturalness—because they believe that naturalness is a sterile field for comedy. The significant point about "The First Year" is that it shows that naturalness could be the richest kind of high comedy.

"The First Year" will be the attraction at the Grand on Friday evening.

HARD ON BOXER.

Carpentier Emerged Second Best From Encounter With Garage Man.

PARIS, Sept. 15.—Georges Carpentier immediately upon his recent return to France lost another battle concerning which there was absolutely no publicity beforehand, and as to the result of which strenuous attempts have been made to preserve secrecy. Georges' opponent was a garage attendant and the fight was a combination of Marquis of Queensbury rules and catch-as-catch can wrestling. The boxer entered the garage in a great hurry and ordered the attendant to take his machine to the second floor in the elevator. Such work not being a part of his particular duties the free-born French citizen refused. Carpentier renewed his instructions somewhat sharply, and when the attendant persisted in his refusal and made some remark about 'fresh war profiteers' Georges swung his famous right. It didn't land, for the garage man nimbly dodged, made a dive for Carpentier's legs, brought the boxer down and literally wiped the oily, begrimmed floor with Georges' latest natty suit.

WOULD STOP JOHNSON FROM TAKING PULPIT

But the Pugilist's Backers Say He Is Good Enough To Preach Anywhere.

HAMILTON, Ohio, Sept. 15. — Jack Johnson's proposal to make his debut as an evangelist by preaching from the pulpit of a negro church here late this month, threatened to split the congregation into two opposing factions.

Mrs. Eugene Evans, wife of the pastor, who is out of town, said Johnson had been invited to take the pulpit by "the sporting element" in the congregation. She said that her husband would never sanction it 'until Johnson reforms.' The invitation was given by an element which wants to "put Johnson 'in good' with church people, so they won't try to stop him if he wants to put on a fight with Tut Jackson here later," said Mrs. Evans.

The members of the church who offered the negro fighter the pulpit declared Johnson "has given up his old ways and is plenty good enough to preach in any pulpit."

LACK OF RECRUITS LOST GERMAN WAR

Ludendorff Has a New and Unique Theory of "War Guilt."

BERLIN, Sept. 15—United Press—General Von Ludendorff, leader of the Fascisti party in Germany to day presented a new version of Germany's "war guilt" in a speech at Muenster, where thousands of nationalists were gathered.

"The German people as a whole were not guilty of starting the war" said Ludendorff, "but there are men here who share in the guilt."

"They are those leaders who in 1912 failed to provide recruits called for by the army. Had these men been forthcoming the war at least would have been of shorter duration. We would have been victorious in from four to six weeks.

Fascisti attacked a democratic election assembly in the town of Hindenburg. A bombardment of stones broke up the meeting and injured many of the participants including women. Republicans and monarchists clashed at Desau, several being wounded on either side.

WHEAT STRONGER.

Corn Underwent a Decided Setback—Oats Held Steady.

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—(Canadian Press). — Wheat took an upward swing in prices early to-day, as a result of active buying, based more or less on previous quotations higher than had been looked for. The market was also strengthened by the fact that the latest estimates of yield in Saskatchewan were much below any heretofore current. Indications of new export business tend further to lift values. The opening was followed by slight additional gains and then something of a reaction. Increased selling pressure from large commission houses weakened the corn market. Despite pessimistic corn reports and notwithstanding rallies due to wheat strength after opening, corn underwent a decided setback all round. Oats held steady within narrow limits, starting unchanged to 1-8 cent higher, December 32 7-8 to 43 cents. Prices showed but little change. Higher quotations on hogs showed firmness in provisions.

FASHION PARADE AT THE FAIR

The fashion parade held at the fair in connection with Richard Hall and Son's exhibit proved to be one of the most interesting attractions in the main building. Men and women alike enjoyed watching the three graceful mannequins who displayed the big store's stock of latest up-to-date models, against a background of a handsome living room interior.

Coats, hats and dresses were shown. The prevailing influence in coats, as well as in the costumes, seems to be the tube silhouette, that slim effect that usually appears without a belt, though many of the dresses show the string belts with side or back tie. Browns are everywhere and of every shade, in all the variations of tan and sand and camel and bronze. And there is much beading on sheer material frocks. A lovely poudre blue georgette had an elongated V in front and back, formed of steel beads in circles, while silver thread edged the tiny ruffles that formed the skirt. Steel beads formed an all-over pattern on a black repe gown that was worn wth a long sable-trimmed black caracul coat and small black panne velvet hat with feather mount, while black bugle beads ornamented the entire front of a black georgette with loose sleeves and low, wide sash caught with a large steel cabochon, worn with a wide silk velvet hat, trimmed with large bow of moire silk ribbon. Another beaded creation was of white georgette, the entire surface being covered with large circles of black and crystal beads.

A pretty frock of jade green georgette had a long front panel of linen lace, and there was Valenciennes lace on the collar and short sleeve cuffs of a black outfit of silk crepe and georgette, with pleated front panel, and pearl button trimming, worn with a large hat whose underbrim was painted with a design of red roses. There were buterflies also, evidently a favorite adornment for this season, on a fetching gown of brown corded silk with collar of orange colored flat crepe, and military braid on the long sleeves. Military and soutche braid were on many of the costumes, and another note was the metallic trimming, emphasized in front panels of silver tissue that made a striking effect on the black canton dress, its tight sleeves puffed at the wrist and caught into a tiny band, silver lace edging the narrow collar.

A dress of nigre-colored falt crepe had a wide simulated yoke, finely tucked, while the lower half of the top and the entire skirt was a mass of eyelet embroidery. With this was worn a brown velvet hat and long coat of brown broadcloth, its hem flaring in circular fashion, collar and cuffs of brown fitch fur. Several frocks in trim hair line gabardine were shown.

Coats of the new brown and mottled, mouse-grey, camelline were worn, and several wraps were developed in lustrous silk marvella, one with brown kolinsky collor and cuffs, another with Russian wolf trimming. Bias bands of self materia made effective deep hems on several wraps. Grey squirrel appeared on another coat of black marvella, and one long model was in sand blanket velour, with coon collar.

CANADIAN GENERALS WIN GREAT THIRTEEN-INNING BATTLE FROM DELORO IN FIRST GAME OF ROUND

Tied It Up With Two All in the Ninth and Squeezed Winning Run in 13th.

FULL OF THRILLS

Hardill and Ada Fought Long Pitching Duel—Deloro Often Threatened.

TIGHT DEFENSE

Infielders Had Big Day and Handled Many Chances Smartly.

DELORO, Sept. 15.—Thirteen innings, chock full of fast baseball, was the offering to the Deloro ball fans on Saturday. In the thirteenth inning Canadian Generals managed to squeeze over the necessary counter to enable them to win 3-2.

The game was by a long shot the best Intermediate game played in these parts in many a year. The fans were aquiver with excitement from start to finish and when what looked like sure runs were cut off by spectacular fielding or good pitching the uproar was deafening.

It was almost entirely an infielder's game. The first defense of the two teams had forty assists and there were forty-one put outs at first base. Very few balls went through the infield as both teams seemed to be in the most unexpected places ready to scoop up the sphere and toss the runner out. The few errors had no effect on the score.

Quinn and Barrie were most conspicuous and covered acres of ground. Rose and Johnston were always prominent. Ranger saved the game in the thirteenth when he pulled down Bodreau's line drive on the right field foul line which was ticketed for three bases. A. Quinn was on second at the time and was nearly doubled up as he had a long start for third when the ball was caught. Leal in centre field robbed McCarney of a hit when he made a fine running catch off his shoetops. Wolfe provided another great play when he threw out Boudreau at the plate trying to score from second on J. Quinn's long single.

Wolfe was the heay hitter with a single and a double to his credit. A. Quinn and Dugan with two singles were the only other players to get an extra hit.

Pitchers Went Route.

Hardill and Ada were the pitching selections and both went the route. The pitchers were about evenly matched. Ada allowed one more hit and struck out one more batsman. Both were able to strike out their opponents when hits meant runs.

The visitors got away to a good start in the first inning. Wolfe beat out a hit in the first inning. Wolfe beat out a hit to Quinn and was sacrificed to second by McCarney. Ross flied to Schultz. Rose singled to right scoring Wolfe.

The Smelters evened the count in their half. With two down A. Quinn walked. He stole second and third and scored on Johnston's single.

The next three innings rang up a row of goose eggs. Both teams had men on, some of them getting as far as third, but none were able to cross the plate. In the fifth Deloro got one. Brown singled to centre and advanced to third when Leal and Schultz rolled to the box. Ada helped his own game by dropping a single into left to score Brown. A. Quinn rolled to Barrie for the final out leaving Deloro with a one run lead. And that single counter looked mighty big as the game progressed and nobody came near the scoring station. In the ninth the Electricians staged an old time rally. Dugan led off with a double to left and moved up on Barrie's tap to the box. Ranger lifted a high foul back of third which Regan took. Regan fell backward as he caught it but held tight to the horsehide and before Johnston could get the ball from him Dugan had brought in the tying run.

Threatened in Ninth.

The Deloro gang nearly clinched it in their half. Boudreau was safe when his bounder got away from Rose. J. Quinn forced him. Regan came up and swung lustily. There was a crash and the ball shot out to the distant regions of left field with Jack McCarney in hot pursuit. A smart pickup and a long throw to Hardill held Quinn at third but there were runners on second and third and only one out. Hardill proved equal to the occasion. Brown rolled to Rose who held the runners and then tossed the batter out and Leal was unable to get more than a foul tip.

Then came the nerve wracking overtime periods. The Generals could not get started in the tenth, eleventh and twelfth. The Smelters started twice but the finishing touch was lacking.

Won in Thirteenth.

The thirteenth was the big inning. Hardill rolled to the box. Wolfe doubled to deep left. McCarney dropped a single back of the box. Quinn nearly made a shoestring catch. Ross hit to Johnston who threw to Regan for a forceout but Wolfe beat the third baseman to the sack. Ada tightened up and fanned Rose. Dugan hit a slow roller to Johnston and while he was considering where to throw it all hands were safe, Wolfe carrying the winning run over. Barrie hit a long fly to Boudreau to end the inning.

A. Quinn restored hope to the Deloro fans when he started their inning with a single to right. Johnston rolled to Hardill, Quinn going to second. Ranger pulled off a circus catch of Boudreaus' liner and Quinn was nearly double up. Quinn third but tried to bump MacPherson as he caught the ball and came up a yard from the bag with Scotty holding the ball tightly against his back. Shaughnessy's good right hand waved him out and the game was over.

MASSEYS BEAT NORTH DUMMER

Edgar's Work in Goal for Winners Was Feature—Dick Evans Shines.

SCORE WAS 3 TO 2

The Masseys journeyed to North Dummer on Saturday, and after an excellent game, were winners by 3 goals to 2. Dick Evans, for the Masseys, and H. Munro for the Township men, scored two goals each. The feature of the game was the magnificent goalkeeping of John Edgar for the Masseys.

Fowler went away and centered. Dick Evans fastened on to the ball and sent past Bryan like a rocket. Pulley sent well down the field. Laughlin trapped the ball and sent nicely to Dick Evans, who again beat Bryan with a shot well out of his reach.

The Township, not long daunted, went at it with a will. H. Jory sent to Darling, whose centre was well met by Bell, who sent a terrific shot at short range, Edgar falling full length to save, pushing the sphere just round the post. Half time arrived, with the score standing 2 to none in favour of the Masseys.

Second Half.

With the wind and the slope in their favour, the Township men were soon testing Edgar. The left wing, Darling and Munro, brought great pressure upon the Massey goal. Naish, Pulley and the lively Edgar had their hands full. It was at this period that Edgar showed what a great goal-keeper he is, tipping a splendid drive from R. Payne over the bar when it seemed a certain goal from the corner which Darling placed. Munro shot a beautiful goal. This put new life in the township men. From one of H. Jory's timely passes to Munro he raced away, and beating all opposition, made the game equal with a shot that Edgar had no chance with. The game now became very exciting. Both teams were on tip-toe, first one goal and then the other was the order. Billings passed to Laughlin, who again put the Masseys ahead.

The game was now fast and exciting. The Township men went at it with renewed vigor and it was Edgar's brilliant goalkeeping that saved the situation.

Edgar and his backs kept the Dummer men at bay and time was called, leaving the Masseys winners of a well contested game by 3 goals to 2.

As usual, the visitors were entertained to supper.

The teams:

The Masseys— I. Edgar, Pulley, Naish, Taylor, Ashmore, Westlake, Slaughter, Loughlin, Dick, Evans, Billingsley, Fowler.

North Dummer—Bryan, A. Jory, W. Garveth, Taylor, H. Jory, G. Little, R. Payne, F. Bell, W. Bell, H. Munro, H. Darling.

CIRCLE SIX TIE JUNIOR SERIES

Kingston Team Jumped Into Lead on Lakeviews and Win Third Game.

FINE FIELDING

The Circle Six of Kingston earned another chance at the Eastern Ontario honors in Junior O.B.A.A. series, when they defeated the local Lakeview squad 3 to 0 in the Limestone City on Saturday. These two evenly matched teams, who have already played three games, will likely decided the issue as to which will enter the O.B.A.A. finals in a game at Trenton in the middle of the week.

Brilliant and flawless fielding gave the Kingston team the well-earned verdict. While the Peterboro boys were hitting the ball long and often few of the clouts went for hits against the fielding stunts that the Circle Six were turning in. The winners didn't have an error nor a sign of a misplay during the nine innings and everything they did seemed to be the right thing at the right moment, and from past games it was apparent that with the crowd cheering their every move they were playing away above their heads. Lovett at short, perhaps turned in the biggest sensation of the game when he leaped in the air to pull down with his gloved hand "Red" Whitlow's hard drive which was surely ticketed for a hit. Reid in the middle garden also spoiled a couple of drives.

Errors Hurt Lakeviews

The Lakeviews misplays were all minor but in each case proved costly for two of the Kingston runs matured from errors. It was in the first two innings that Lew Lebarr's boys pulled their boots. After that they steadied down and played ball that matched the Kingston gang's showing.

Using a curve ball after the first three innings Frank Whitehouse had the Circle Six youths standing on their heads. He struck out nine and allowed four hits. Seven of his strike outs came in the last five innings and during these innings when the Circle Six did connect they rolled out to slow ones to the box or the infield.

Smith twirled steady ball for Kingston but at no time was he a mystery to the Lakeviews and it was only his sensational support that saved him from giving more than four hits.

Of the four safeties collected by the Peterboro team "Dink" Cameron got the major position of three hits in four appearances.

Started Badly

Luck figured in the Kingston run in getting first off. Lovett was called safe at first after he had struck out and been touched out by Halliday, but the umpire called him safe when in the practice throw to first Halliday over threw the bag. MacPherson reached first when Cameron threw Lovett out at third. C. Smith was safe on Johnston error. With two down Reid hit a clean single and both runs came in. Hartley flied to first.

In the second Buck got a safety on Cameron's error reached third on a neat worked out play when Zetro sacrificed down the third base line. The run came in Lovett's hit.

The Pete's had chances but two double plays came to nip their opportunities. Throughout the game the locals were always to anxious to kill the ball.

The crowd was more evenly tempered than was expected, but after a game a few hot heads rushed around the visitor's bench, but the Peterborough boys escaped to the cass before a fight could be started.

MASTERSON FANNED 22 AND WON HIS OWN GAME WITH ONLY RUN IN MIDGETS' SENSATIONAL BALL

Sacred Heart Youngsters Tied Up Series With Toronto in 12 Innings.

PITCHING DUEL WAS SURPRISE TO CROWD

Masterson Allowed Only Three Hits and Sacred Heart Got Four.

KIWANIS LOSE

Bantams Defeated By McCormicks of Toronto in Second Straight.

Peterboro's Bantam and Midget representatives broke even in their double header with the Toronto champions in these classes at Riverside Park Saturday, the Kiwanis Bantams suffering their second defeat at the hands of McCormicks of Toronto by 6 to 1, thus passing out of the O.B.A.A. race, while the Sacred Heart team won a sensational 12 innings victory over the Toronto Humewoods in the midget section, tieing up the series and making a third game necessary to decide which team will enter the Ontario finals.

The twin bill provided twenty-one innings of fine baseball, the showing made by the four young teams proving a big surprise to fans who have not been following the fortunes of the kids' leagues.

"Casey" Masterson, Sacred Heart's crack young right-hander pitched the greatest game of his career in turning back the Toronto champions scoreless for twelve innings. In baseball parlance Masterson had "everything", crackling speed, a sweeping curve and perfect control. He did not issue a complimentary, fanned no fewer than 22 of the Humewood crew, allowed only three scattered singles, two of them scratchy, and threw out seven batters on rollers to the box. He went the long route without a sign of weakening and finished up by striking out five men in the last two innings. In addition Masterson had one of his team's four hits, stole four bases and scored the only run of the game.

Seasons' Sensation.

Duff, Humewood's sturdy box artist, was only a shade behind the Sacred Heart twirler in point of merit. Depending chiefly on a fast ball that fairly smoked, Duff whiffed 22 of the homesters, allowed only four hits and walked but one batter in twelve frames.

It was the most sensational pitching duel of the season in any series seen here.

In the first six innings only one man on each team reached first base. McWilliams singling with two out in Humewood's fourth, while Rishea was walked with two out in Sacred Heart's half of the same frame.

The second Sacred Heart man to get on the runways was Kennealley who singled with two out in the seventh. Masterson was sent to first on interference but Bannon fanned.

With one down in the eighth Humewoods got their second man on the sacks when Starr dropped Kennealley's throw off a tap in front of the plate. He stole second and went to third on a passed ball but Masterson cooly struck out Scott and Cossar.

Reynolds got a life on Rishea's miss in the ninth but was out trying to go to second on the play and the next two batters were easy.

That made just three men on each side to reach first in the nine innings.

The Extra Innings.

In the tenth McWilliams led off with a single to center, stole second and went to third on Kennealley's bad throw. Sager popped to Walton and Masterson fanned Duff and Flanagan.

Masterson hit safely to left with one out in the Sacred Heart half and stole second and third but Starr and Bannon fanned.

Reynolds for Humewood got on with two gone in the eleventh on Grady's error only to have Christie strike out.

The Peterboro kids lost a great chance. With two down Grady was safe on Flanagan's fumble and Grant doubled to right. With the winning run on third Rishea missed three.

Sager hit safely past the box with two gone in Humewood's twelfth but Duff struck out.

Sacred Heart won out in their half and it was fitting that after his wonderful performance Masterson should be the one to carry the winning run over. With one out he rolled to Reynolds and was safe when the third baseman's high throw pulled Cossar off the bag. Masterson stole second and went to third on a wild pitch. Starr struck out and it was up to Bannon. The centre fielder cracked one back at Duff which took such a high hop that the Humewood pitcher only succeeded in deflecting it and this scratch single was enough to send Masterson in with the counter that meant victory.

Both teams fielded nicely and the clash was one of the best battles of the year.

The play off game will be at Oshawa on Saturday and it should be a corker.

THE BANTAM GAME.

The bantam battle was a much closer fight than the final score of 6 to 1 would indicate. In fact the result was in doubt until the final frame.

The Peterboro youngsters scored a run in the first inning and remained in front until the fourth when the McCormicks tied it up. It remained at 1-1 until the eighth, the visitors going out in front by scoring a counter. In the ninth McCormicks put the game on ice by registering four times, an error starting them on their way.

Glatt, the clever pitcher of the Toronto kids, won the decision for them. He fanned fifteen men, allowed only four hits and would not have been scored upon but for a couple of errors in the first inning. Trebilcock for the Kiwanis also turned in a nice performance and was not hit hard until he weakened in the ninth while his teammates did some fine fielding and pulled off two double plays.

McDuffy Injured.

A regrettable feature of the game was the injury sustained by Jimmy McDuffy the Kiwanis short stop, who had his ankle broken when McBeth slid into him at second base in the fifth inning. It was a force play and McDuffy had just taken the throw when the Toronto centre fielder crashed into him.

McDuffy scored the only Peterboro run of the game. Leading off in the first inning he reached second when Glatt fielded his tap and threw high to first. Jones fanned but Graham hit to Spizzivi who tried to nail McDuffy at third. The throw was low, however, and McDuffy registered.

McCormicks evened up in the fourth. Beaumont led off with a single through, stole second and went round to third on Jones' bad throw. Field rolled to Trebilcock, Beaumont being held but Somers laid down a perfect bunt to score the runner.

Broke in the Eighth.

The teams remained on even terms until the eighth. With one out Spizzivi was hit for the third time and stole second and third. Convey fanned but Beaumont tripled to left scoring Spizzivi with what proved to be the winning run.

McCormicks made it sure in the ninth. Somers got a life when Dick missed Wolfe's toss, Callighen sacrificed him to second and McBeth's hit scored him, McBeth going to second on Lebarr's bad throw home. Glatt singled to left. Demers fanned but Spizzivi singled to right scoring McBeth and Glatt. Convey hit safely through short and on a double steal Spizzivi scored the fourth run of the inning before Convey was run down and tagged out.

Baltimore Record With Sixth Straight Pennant

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 15.—Baltimore made certain its sixth consecutive pennant in the International League Saturday by breaking even with Reading, while Toronto, the runner-up, was dividing a double bill with Buffalo. The Orioles won the first game 11 to 0 and were beaten in the second 6 to 3. The Orioles have been far out in front for the last six weeks, and can lose every one of the sixteen remaining games and still win. No other club in the history of organized baseball has won six flags in a row. Manager Jack Dunn made several changes this season, securing Jacobs from Jersey City and Connelly from Reading. Groves, Ogden, Jackson Tomlin, Henderson and Thomas all pitched winning ball for Baltimore.

SENATORS AND YANKEES LOSE

Positions in American League Race Unchanged—Baltimore Win 6th Pennant.

GIANTS HOLD LEAD

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(Canadian Press).—While Detroit was bunching hits off Washington's pitchers yesterday afternoon and making five runs to the two of the American League leaders, Chicago was solving Herb Pennock's offerings also in little bunches and beating the world champion Yankees by the same score. The relative position of the Senators and Yankees thus remained unchanged. Meantime Cleveland wound up its season with Philadelphia by taking the long end of a four-three score. Boston wallopped St. Louis 10 to 0.

Vance's 14th Straight.

Dazzling Dazzy Vance held the centre of the National League stage when he pitched his fourteenth straight victory and handed the goose-egg to Cincinnati 2 to 0. It was the Brooklyn speed-ball king's twenty-sixth victory of the season. The Reds only got four hits. However, the Giants held their game and a fraction lead over Brooklyn by bringing home eight men to St. Louis' two. Nehf made his fourth home run of the season, while Gowdy knocked a circuit with two on bases.

Birds Sixth Pennant.

Saturday's games in the International League saw the Baltimore Orioles capture the league pennant for the sixth time. Baltimore could lose all the rest of her games for the season and still lead Toronto, the runner-up. Toronto came a cropper in Sunday's double header with Buffalo, losing out 4 to 6, 1 to 4. Newark went down before Jersey City 3 to 2 and 6 to 5, while Baltimore took her first game from Reading 4 to 1 and tied the second, called on account of darkness 1 to 1. Syracuse and Rochester divided their show, the visitors taking the first 5 to 3 and Syracuse the second 8 to 5.

U.S. YACHTING VICTORY.

OYSTER BAY, N.Y., Sept. 15.—(Canadian Press).—Great Britain was defeated by the United States Saturday in the finals of the six metre yacht races for the Seawanahka Cup, but the victory was protested by the British through the collision between the Dauphin, the U.S. yacht, which passed the finish line first and the British Betty, which finished sixth.

The U. S. won Saturday's event 19.1-4 points to 17 points for the British, thereby giving the U. S. a victory in the series, four races to two.

If the protest is sustained by the International Committee, and the British yacht declared victor in the contest, the series will be tied up three all. Another race will be necessary.

QUARANTINED.

A victim of a relatively mild disease, such as measles, is quarantined. Victims of tuberculosis, virulent social diseases and so on, are allowed to roam at large, endangering the public.

These dread diseases will sweep the population until victims are isolated. The cost of supporting them would be terrific. But it would pay in the long run, and part could be charged to the safeguarded future generations by bond issues. Ontario, Canada, for instance, is active in compelling the segregation of tubercular unfortunates.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

AMERICAN POLO TEAM DEFEATED BRITAIN'S FOUR

Louis Lacey, the Canadian, Saved Invaders From Complete Route.

STEVENSON HURT.

American Star Gashed Over Eye—Score Was 16 To 5.

WESTBURY, N.Y., Sept. 15.—United States began the defence of the International Challenge Cup Saturday with a one-sided victory over Great Britain in the first match of the series for this historic emblem of polo supremacy. A colorful crowd of thirty-five thousand, which included the Prince of Wales and a host of other notables, saw the United States riders overwhelm the invaders, in a spectacular attack, and win by the record breaking score of 16 to 5. Only a startling show of form in the last two periods—in which the British scored four goals—chiefly through the individual brilliance of their Canadian-Argentine back, Louis Lacey, saved the challengers from complete rout.

The score rolled up by the United States with Tommy Hitchcock and Malcolm Stevenson leading the attack which swept all before the first six periods, was the highest that has ever been recorded in the thirty-eight years that the cup has been in competition.

Stevenson Hurt.

United States triumph, however, came close to being costly. In the final period, when Stevenson who had been a bulwark on both attack and defence, was thrown heavily, as his pony stumbled in a charge down the field. Stretched inert on the turf which he struck headfirst, it was at first feared Stevenson was badly injured, but examination showed he was suffering only from a severe shaking up.

Lacey, who led the Argentine team to victory in the United States open championships two years ago, was the individual star of the game and an heroic figure.

Crowd Gets Good View of Prince.

The Prince gave the crowd the best view of himself when he stood up in the second chukker, as the two umpires raced across the field and stopped in front of his box. They had been unable to agree upon whether a foul had been committed and they rode a furious hundred yards to get a decision from Referee Burke, who sat beside the Prince. Burke stood up with the Prince and ruled that a foul had been committed by a British player. The Prince sat down rather gloomily and watched the penalty exacted, the ball set up for the Americans and driven neatly between the goal posts.

The Prince was impassive under the deluge of American goals in the third and fourth chukkers. He took his punishment silently and his sportsmanship brought occasional exclamations of admiration for him.

At the strenuous fight which preceded the seventh American goal he arose in excitement and he applauded when Lacey, charging almost between his own goal posts, twice prevented the Americans scoring.

In the long intermission after the end of the fourth period the royal visitor left his box to talk to the British players. He strolled over to the paddock and casually looked over the ponies. He was accompanied on this walk by Mr. Stoddard and Mr. Guest and members of his staff.

Some one called for three cheers, and there was a ripple of applause as he walked back to his box. Many men in the stands stood up as he passed and took off their hats. To each of these salutations the Prince replied by raising his own hat.

The gameness shown by the British in fighting to the last, although hopelessly outclassed and already overwhelmingly defeated, brought applause and admiration from the Prince. He rose in excitement and waved a long cigarette holder in the fifth chukker.

It seemed to comfort the Prince that the crowds in the stands cheered the British at every opening. The deep ranks of spectators standing at the north end of the field, however, broke into jeers when the British showing was at its worst.

The fine spurt of the British in the last two chukkers gave the Prince a little excitement. When Kirkwood scored in the seventh, his Highness took off his hat and applauded loudly. Turning to Louis Stoddard, he exclaimed: "By Jove, that was a fine play, wasn't it?"

A few minutes later when the third British goal was scored he applauded vigorously without taking his long cigarette holder out of his mouth.

"Who was that?" asked the Prince when a player was thrown from his horse.

"Stevenson," he was told.

"I hope he isn't hurt," said his Highness.

Stoddard ran out on the field and came to the Prince with word that no bones were broken and that Stevenson was not seriously injured.

The wonderful comeback of the British team in the last chukker kept the Prince smiling.

CENTRAL FINAL WON BY TRUNKS

Weir Cracked Out Home-Run and Belleville Piled Up Five at Start.

A DISMAL FINALE

COBOURG, Sept. 15.—Jack Oulette and his Grand Trunks got away to a flying start in Saturday's game at Cobourg with the Dainty crew from Oshawa, when Weir, the first man up, connected with one of Dainty's fast ones and slammed it for four bases, and before the side was retired in the first frame, Belleville had three runs chalked up. When the game ended the score was 9 to 4 in favor of Belleville.

Oulette started on the mound just as smooth as his fellow players did at bat and he struck out the first two men to face him, while the third batter rolled to the second baseman. Belleville came back in the second and chased in two more counters, making the score 5 to 0.

The game was practically tucked away for Belleville right there. Oulette was going good, while Dainty was not up to form in the first few innings. Dainty settled down in the latter stages of the game, and in the last three innings they got but two hits off him, while he blanked them in the run column.

Oshawa scored two in the fifth and two in the seventh, but could not overcome the lead set up by Belleville in the earlier stages of the game. Belleville were dead on in the field and cut off several runs by snappy fielding, Harry Mills at first base always being in the limelight. Belleville resumed their offensive in the fifth and chased two more runs across the plate. They rallied once more in the seventh when they scored another pair. This ended the scoring for the rest of the game, but both twirlers got in some tight holes before it was over.

Dainty pitched a nice game, but was a little wild and, although he fanned nine of his opponents, they got thirteen hits, while the team behind him had five sloppy errors that cost him the majority of the runs, and in fact the game. If his team mates had given him any kind of support he might have pulled through with a win.

Jack Oulette pitched hthe same old steady game, fielding his position splendidly. He was touched for eleven hits and got by luckily, as his team was right there with the goods when it came to fielding the ball. They were nothing out of the ordinary, but compared to Oshawa they were far the better. Many spectacular catches were pulled off and had it not been for them, the game would have been tame. BILLY BISHOP WINS FREE-FOR-ALL SATURDAY

Beats Jack Canuck, Who Has Won 168 Races in 199 Starts.

SILKLINE A COMER

Stepped Mile in 2.13¼ on Slow Half-Mile Track.

Before a record crowd the Exhibition visitors were provided with a real race in Saturday's free-for-all, won by Billy Bishop, owned by J. Curran, Toronto, and driven by Chapman, doing the mile in 2.13¼ on a slow half-mile track.

Four well-known horses started, all of them with enviable records, one in particular that boasts of an origin of distinction. They were Bessie Brooks, Billy Bishop, Silkline and Jack Canuck.

Jack Canuck, now owned by Mr. Overland of Orangeville, was bred and raised by J. J. Morrison, editor of the Farmers' Sun and President of the U. F. O. Club of Ontario. He was sired by Missouri Chief and has a notable career. Out of 199 races he has won 168, and for several years has raced both summer and winter. In one season he won 37 races.

He stood second on Saturday, although he has beaten the winner before. The fans expected him to do better because of his unique record.

Billy Bishop was steady, but was chased on the stretch in all three heats. Silkline, a game sorrel gelding, can show a burst of speed and promises to make a top-notcher if carefully handled. He has steadily improved and performs much better than he did two years ago. In the second heat he pulled into second on the stretch and chased Billy Bishop to the wire.

In both the first and second heats the four horses pulled into the stretch together and finished close. Bessie Brooks surprised the racing moguls. Frank Montgomery's mare never was going better than she is this season, in the opinion of track followers.

WOOLLENS WIN; VETS UNLUCKY

Mitchell the Marksman, While Griffin Was in the Scrimmage.

LOST LEAGUE LEAD.

The Vets were defeated one goal to nothing in a league game at the Oval on Saturday afternoon by the Canadian Woollens before a poor attendance. Referee Clark handled the whistle in his usual amicable manner and satisfaction to all. Mitchell was the marksman of the day.

The Game.

Both captains tossed for choice of goals which fell in favour of the Woollens who took advantage of the slight wind to their gain. The Vets showed two new faces in their lineup and included to ex-Quaker players—Logan brothers— in the team since their transfer, while the Canadian Woollens were minus two of their regular players—Blowers and Foster. Following some even play, the Vets threatened Hillman's charge attacking from the right, but the custodian cleared once more, only to see the Vets boys return through the same agency, and the ball being crossed Chambers frustrated the raid. Monkman went down through on his own but was checked in his progress by Dyer who placed his forwards to advantage for a few minutes. At last, the Woollens vanguard found their feet and Roberts gaining possession on the touch-line, centered amidst a pile of players in front of Griffine's charge. While the ball bobbed in mid-air and the Vets goalkeeper getting injured. Mitchell scored the only goal from a scrimmage that registered against the Vets. Both goals run narrow escapes from well meant combination plays that was raised to try and increase the score. Half-time, Woollens a goal ahead.

HALF TIME.

Upon resuming, the Vets wrought havoc in the Woollens defence area but found that Chambers and Cridlan would give them no latitude to get a shot at goal. The loss of this game to the Woollens give the Vets a set-back an their opponents a glorious chance for the championship. Full-time, Canadian Woollens 1. Vets 0. Goal-scorer; Mitchell.

Vets: Griffine, goal, Crow and Wasson backs, W. Logan, Dyer and Gnsh half backs, Monks, Bryce, G. Logan, A. N. Other and Hanson forwards.

Woollens: Hillman goal, Chambers and Cridland backs, Ward, Monkman and Sayers half backs, Clark, Gaskill, Mitchell Hodgson and Roberts forwards.

Referee, J. Clark.

DISEASED.

The trouble isn't so much that we have too many laws, but that too much time is wasted enforcing the wrong ones. Here's a case. Every community has an ordinance against spitting on sidewalks, in street cars and other public places. Few local regulations are more important, yet how often is the expectorater arrested.

If you can think of anything that should be safeguarded more than the public's health, trot it forth. The victim of the most terrible contagious diseases can spit all over the walk without any danger of arrest. But just let him get caught buying a flash of whisky or violating parking rules.

RICHMOND AND YOUNG WINNING LEAGUE POINTS

Gardener's Snappy Goal Set the Thistle Eleven Back a Notch.

QUAKERS STRONG

Quakers Were Superior Team in the Second Half, But Failed to Score.

This year the league competition for the White Challenge Cup (league championship) has been most interesting. All the teams are now the same number of points, The Thistles made another two points at Quakers expense by three goals to nothing on Saturday afternoon at King Edward Park. Erratic shooting was much in evidence although both goalies got all they wanted to do during the ninety minutes.

Gardener snapped the opening tally past Curtis. This reverse enlivened the play a little as Carmichael intercepted the Quakers on another dangerous raid. He travelled down the field, centred to Richmond who brought Bain to his knees in saving his low grounder.

Nice Play Brought Equalizer

Carmichael accepted the ball, outwitted Craig, then Scott, passed for ward to McPhail. Willshaw met him but the Scot slipped quickly to Young. The Quaker's defense closed-in, while Scott and Honor tried to stop the right wings progress. McPhail let drive for goal, Bain made a smart pick-up but the ball landed at Richmond's foot, who quickly put past the goalie before he returned between the posts.

Scored From Penalty

Exchanges were very even, there after although the Porridge boys were more dangerous and were in Thistle area most of this half. Having "broken the ice", the Jags settled down to the game and went into the fray with more vim. On mid-field tactics Jackson gained possession from the Quaker forwards, lifted the ball out to Young who evaded the defense as he centered. At this point the Referee awarded a penalty kick against Scott, Quaker Oats for hand ling. Bain set himself to make an attempt to prevent a tally but Richmond's shot travelled at waist high height that no goalie could stop for the leading goal in favor of the Jags, five minutes before half-time. Thistle 2, Quaker Oats 1.

Second Half

After a much needed and a well earned rest, the teams again lined up and Quakers at once became dangerous though Craig on the left, while Burgess further jeopardized his side by fouling an opponent.

Young's Rocket Goal

The first brush past, however, Thistle bore away towards Bain, and a Quaker full back conceding a corner-kick that Burgess placed across the goal to Young without hesitation the latter rattled the ball at right angle for the third goal.

Occasional break always by the Thistle forwards were easily stopped by the superb defence by Bain, Willshaw and Honor which made things interesting around the Jags goal. Gardener made a splendid effort to score with a shot that was minus a few inches of the desired spot, then a solo run by Craig, deserved recompense but, Curtis ran out of goal to stop Gardener getting the re-bound and kicking clear to the touch and sending Richmond away in the other direction. The centre-forward beat man after man while making tracks for Bain's citadel until Honor nipped him in the act of having a try for goal, From the goal-kick, T. Williams looked like getting through but the Thistle backs were effective defenders. Nothing else worthy of note took place from this till time up, the final result being:—Thistle 3, Quakers 1.

Goal scores—Richmond 2, Young 1 for Thistle. Gardener for Quaker Oats.

The Teams

Thistle —Curtis goal, Rae and Andersón backs; Carmichael, Jackson and Burgess half-backs; Young, McPhail, Richmond, Williams and Laidler, forwards.

Noted Golfers To Play At French Link Sept. 15

FRENCH LICK SPRINGS, Ind., Sept. 15.—The course over which the Professional Golfers' Association championship will be played here Sept. 15 to 20, will demand top form for good scores, according to Arthur Lockwood, club professional.

The course is long and difficult, with a wealth of hills and hollows and more than 100 wide and deep traps. The elevated putting greens prove most deceiving in distance. Donald Ross, famous builder of golf courses, laid out the French Lick links and declares it to be his masterpiece. It is similar to Oak land Hills, where Cyril Walker won the American open.

Walker, Walter Hagen just back from England with the British championship; Gene Sarazen, Jock Hutchinson, MacDonald Smith, Joe Kirkwood, Eeddie McLeod and a host of other stars are expected to participate in the French Lick events for a purse of $5,000.

Sixty-four starters will tee off Monday, September 15, in pursuit of the title now held by Gene Sarazen. The men making the low 32 scores will be paired for the match play eliminations which start Tuesday. The 32 men eliminated on Monday will each receive $50; those on Tuesday $75, those on Wednesday $100, those on Thursday $125 and those on Friday, the day of the semi-finals, $125.

THE JUVENILES EVENED SERIES

Third Game Will Be Necessary and Will Be Played In Port Hope Wednesday.

COBOURG, Sept. 15.—Cobourg nicked Bradley for four runs in the fifth of Saturday's O.B.A.A. Juvenile game with Maple Leafs at the Lakeshore town and evened the series with a 4 to 3 score. The third game will be played at Port Hope on Wednesday afternoon, commencing at 4.30 o'clock.

The week-end contest was a battle all the way, with the Leafs clouting the ball, and the homesters preventing tallies with fielding plays that were pretty to watch. The Cobourg gardeners, and Andrews in left field in particular, saved McMahon on several occasions, when long wafts from the Leafs' bats were gathered in to stop rallies. But it was Butler at short who routed the Leafs finally, when he played deep for Gillespie's drive in the eighth and forced Scully at second to retire the side. Corbett had gone home for the Leafs' third run, on Scully's hit, and LeBarr was ready to score from third when Butler came through with the fielding play that held his team in the lead and probably saved the game.

The home gang took special delight in razzing the visiting pitcher, and they had a field day when four runs were scored in the fifth. McMahon led off with a fly to Dave Grant. Then Bradley passed Drope to start trouble. Butler laid one down; a difficult play for the pitcher, and both runners were safe. Ewing duplicated the trick, putting three on, the decision at first being close. With the Leafs two runs ahead, Bradley, after getting another awkward roller from Houten played for first and got the runner, Drope scoring on the play. Bevan laid down still another infield tap, Bradley's throw to the plate failing by a narrow margin to get Butler, and the score was tied. Next, Gibson hit between centre and right to score Ewing and Bevan. The throw-in got Gibson trying to make third. That was the extent of the Cobourg attack. At no other stage of the game, did the homsters show a punch.

The Leafs scored in the first. Delahaye lined out to Bevan. Bradley was safe on Butler's error and made second. Corbett was hit. A wild pitch advanced the runners, and Bradley scored when LeBarr laid one down for the pitcher.

Scully scored another run in the second on his own double, a passed ball and a wild pitch. From then on until the eighth, good fielding behind McMahon prevented tallies. With two gone in the eighth, Corbett single and LeBarr was safe when Butler fumbled his drive. They advanced and Corbett scored on Scully's single. LeBarr made third. Gillespie gave Butler a hard chance on which the shortstop played the ball past and threw to second to get Scully and retire the side. The Leafs went out in a row in the ninth.

JOHNSON'S NAME IN FAME'S HALL

Washington's Veteran Pitcher Chosen As Most Valuable Player This Year.

COLLINS SECOND.

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—Walter Johnson, pitching ace with the Washington Club for seventeen years, on Friday night was chosen winner of the American League trophy for 1924, which crowns him as the player of greatest value to his team during the championship season just closing.

Johnson's name goes into baseball's hall of fame along with George Sisler, manager of the St. Louis Club, chosen the greatest player of the 1922 season, and Babe Ruth of the Yankees, who was awarded the honor in 1923. Johnson received a total of 55 points out of a possible total of 64 from the committee of baseball writers chosen to make the award.

Eddie Collins of Chicago, long-time king of second basemen, ran a close second in the balloting with a total of 49 points, and was the choice of all eight members of the Trophy Committee as the best player of the White Sox.

Johnson's name will be inscribed on the 1924 tablet in the $100,000 baseball memorial to be erected in East Potomac Park, Washington, presented to the Government by the American League as a memorial to the nation's greatest sport and a hall of fame for its greatest players. As a more personal testimonial of the honor conferred on him, each winner will be presented a diploma by the American League.

The selection of the Washington pitching ace was highly gratifying to President Ban Johnson of the America League. Walter Johnson has been with Washington since 1907, performing uninterrupted service of the highest character, and with the Senators making a desperate fight for the pennant has an excellent chance of rounding out his career in a blaze of glory.

The veteran participated in thirty-three games to date this season, and is credited with winning twenty and losing six, giving him an average of .769. In 244 innings, Johnson has fanned 140 batters, by far the greatest number of any pitcher in the League, and held his opponents to eighty-five runs.

In voting for the winner, each member of the committee, except the chairman, selected the player on each team who, in his opinion, was of greatest service to his team this season, then ranked these eight best players, according to his individual estimate of this year's work, on a ballot so arranged that first place counted eight points, second place seven points, and so on down to one point for eighth place. The highest possible total for the winner is 64 points, which was reached by Babe Ruth, winner of the 1923 trophy.

Twenty-three players figured in the voting for the 1924 title, the official count being Was follows:

Player and Position.	Club.	Pts.
Walter P. Johnson, pitcher,	Washington	55
Edward T. Collins, 2nd base,	Chicago	49
Charles Jamieson, outfield,	Cleveland	25
Herbert Pennock, pitcher,	New York	24
John Bassler, catcher,	Detroit	22
Henry Severeid, catcher,	St. Louis	17
Joseph Hauser, 1st. base,	Philadelphia	13
William Jacobson, outfield,	St. Louis	11
Harry Heilmann, outfield,	Detroit	9
Joseph Sewell, shortstop,	Cleveland	9
Harold Ruel, catcher,	New York	7
Walter Schang, catcher,	New York	7
Al Simmons, outfield,	Philadelphia	7
Walter Pipp, 1st base,	New York	6
Howard Ehmke, pitcher,	Boston	5
Ira Flagstead, outfield,	Boston	5
Walter Gerber, shortstop,	St. Louis	4
Earl Whitehill, pitcher,	Detroit	3
Lou Blue, 1st base,	Detroit	3
Ike Boone, outfield,	Boston	2
Joseph Harris, outfield,	Boston	2
C. E. Galloway, shortstop,	Philadelphia	1
Kenneth Williams, outfield,	St. Louis	1

Walter Johnson will complete this month his eighteenth season as a pitcher for the Washington Senators—really seventeen and a half seasons, for he spent half of 1907 with the Weiser semi-pro club of Idaho, whence he came to the capital. He has been at Washington ever since, reaching his peak in 1913, when he was acclaimed by many as the greatest pitcher of all time, and by others as the equal of Charley Matthewson, the Giants' Six. After 1913, Johnson slipped a trifle, but quickly began to climb backward to his old heights, and the present season, with a club fighting for first place, has been one of the greatest enjoyed by the veteran Walter.

Johnson was born in Humboldt, Kan., Nov. 6, 1887, which would make him thirty-seven years old. Some records show him older than this. In his greatest season, 1913, he won thirty-six games and lost seven—a record that he probably will never equal.

DO YOU KNOW BASEBALL?

BY BILLY EVANS

QUESTIONS

1. There are runners on second and third. Batsman doubles, scoring both men. Team in field discovers batter, who made two-base hit, was an improper batsman. An appeal is made to the umpire before a ball is pitched. What is the proper ruling? A says the runs count. B claims otherwise.—G.F.D.

2. Manager of team at bat sends in a left-handed pinch-pitcher. Manager of team in field substitutes a southpaw pitcher. Manager of team at bat then send in a right-handed pinch-hitter for the left-handed hitter previously announced as the pinch-hitter. Manager of team in field wants to take out his southpaw pitcher. Game ends in an argument. What is the proper ruling in such a situation?—E.R.T.

3. Manager sends in a pinch-hitter to bat for the pitcher. The pinch-hitter happened to be a catcher, and at the start of the next inning the manager decided to keep him in the game as catcher to handle the new pitcher. How do the shifted players bat?—D.S.A.

ANSWERS

1. Since the mistake was discovered before a ball was pitched to the succeeding batsman, umpire should declare the proper batsman out. No runs can score on any act of an improper batsman. Runnners should be sent back to their original bases. B is correct.

2. It is always possible to change pinch-batters as often as desired. The announcing of a pinch-batter, and then the using of some player in his place, merely removes him from the game. When a pinch-pitcher is sent in, he must pitch until one batter reaches first or is retired.

3. Catcher, who acted as pinch-batter for pitcher, and then is continued in the game, must continue to bat in pitcher's place. New pitcher bats in the catcher's place.

BORDER PATROL BY 'REDCOATS'

Canadian Mounted Police May Be Taken From the Northwest Service, Is Report.

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., Sept. 15.—"The Redcoats," pride of Canada's northwest police division, many times cursed by a fugitive from justice waging his last battle across the frozen northern areas of the Dominion, may soon be inserted into the phraseology of border smuggling history here.

How soon the Northwest Mounted will br brought down from their favorite haunts, where they have been spreading the terror of the law for half a century; whether they are to retain their scarlet-hued raiment, with its historical attachments, and what their actual duties will be are well-guarded secrets.

A recent news despatch announces:

"As a co-operative step with the efforts of the United States border officials and for self-protection, to stop illicit smuggling of liquor, drugs and aliens across the line, practices which rob both countries of customs revenue, a Canadian border control, which will work individually, but, in times of need, in co-operation with the American force, is deemed immediately advisable."

Appointment to the St. Lawrence River section of the "Mounties," in the Province of Ontario, will be made in a short time. The action comes under the new international treaty relating to smuggling.

The stations already designated as trial posts in the experiment are Prescott, Brockville, Gananoque and Maitland.

For the first time in history the Redcoats will ride motorcycles instead of horses.

Their territory will comprise the entire area lying between Prescott, opposite this city, and Gananoque, a stretch of sixty miles. The great distances by which Canadian border cities are separated give rise to the need of competent forces, provided with swift means of chase, to check the rapidly rising successes of the daring smugglers.

Concurrently with the anticipated arrival of the Canadian forces is expected to come a sensational development in the organization of United States flying squads in northern New York. Now covered from the mountainous district of Malone to Ogdensburg and beyond to America's Summer playground of the rich, Alexandria Bay, the North of two years is taking on a semblance of renewed vigor by the efforts of smugglers. In recent months little action has occurred around St. Lawrence County, caused, it is said, by fear of the border patrol.

Contact between the pursuing Government forces and the bootleggers has disclosed the latter to be playing a new game. Finding liquor transportation too hard to conceal, they resorted to jumping the border with foreigners, who pay $450 a head for their entry.

TRUTH AND THE TRAVELLER.

A man travelling in the desert saw a woman sitting alone and terribly dejected. He inquired of her, "Who are you?" "My name is Truth," she replied. "And for what cause," he asked, "have you left the city, to dwell alone here in the desert?" "Because," said she, "in the cities so few people seem to recognize me."

SWEET GIRL GRADUATE PULLED GUN ON DOCTOR

Said She Meant To Torture Him—Is Librarian In Chicago.

CHICAGO, September 15. — A psychopathic examination was made on Saturday of Miss Rosalie O'Reilly, the pretty 21-year-old graduate of the University of Chicago, who last night attempted to kill Dr. Alexander Weiner, 62, staff physician at the West Shore Hospital.

Miss O'Reilly said that she wanted to avenge the death of her mother who was treated by the physician.

Mr. Weiner was seated in his office when the girl walked in, pointed a revolver at him and pulled trigger twice. The weapon failed to go off, and the girl fled, but was captured by Dr. Weiner, after a short chase.

"I meant to torture him," Miss O'Reilly told the police.

Miss Reilly is librarian at a public library branch here.

ISLAM HOLY CITY MAY BE CAPTURED

Sultan of Nejd Has Strategic Position—Moslems Disturbed.

LONDON, Eng. Sept. 15.—(United Press).—Mecca, Holy of Holies of the Islamic work, is about to fall into the hands of the Sultan of Nejd, according to an exchange telegraph dispatch from Cairo. The Sultan Ibn Saud, defeated Hussien ,his rival at Taif, in Aravia and is now in a position to capture the holy city if he wishes. The Moslem world is vastly disturbed by the news. If Mecca falls Hussien is expected to take refuge in Jeddah, seeking security under the shelter of the guns of the British navy. Reports indicate he has already withdrawn his out posts from positions between Taifa and Mecca and is unable to raise reinforcements to withstand the attacks of his enemy. Although reports from Constantinople say that the French General Weigand had ordered Syrians to facilitate the passing of the British troops to Palestine, it was believed here that Britain would not intervene beyond offering protection to Hussien. Intervention in the Islamic war fare it is felt here would leave the British open to the gravest misrepresentation in the Moslem world.

Prince of Wales Bobs His Shirt Sleeves And Drives With Coolidge In Ragged Attire

SYOSSET, L. I., September 15. — The Prince of Wales evidently suffers from the heat like the rest of us, and can be just as unconventional when the occasion requires. A good story just come to light which illustrates this perfectly. It may be recalled that the day of his visit to Washington to lunch with the Coolidge family at the White House was bakingly hot and on the trip on the train down from New York he and his party were very uncomfortably warm indeed. So warm that the Prince who had put on that morning an absolutely new shirt of the blue variety which he affects so much, took off his coat, secured a pen knife and cut off his shirt sleeves near the shoulder.

So that he actually lunched with the Coolidges with the ragged edges of his shirt hidden by his coat.

It is said that he repeated the operation on his shirt on the following torrid Monday when he visited the Belmont races to see the big race in which Epinard and Zev were beaten by Wise Counseller. The source of this story cannot be quoted.

Captain A. F. Lascelles, the Prince's secretary, says that the facts are not quite as stated. He declares that the Prince has his shirts specially made that way with short sleeves. At any rate it is one of the best stories of the present trip.

FATHER CAUGHT SON PUTTING DYNAMITE INTO FIRE

There might have been a few less Dorringtons in Peterborough to-day had Mr William Dorrington Victoria avenue not caught his small son in the act of putting a good sized stick of dynamite into the stove.

The young lad had found the deadly substance under a culvert on Downie Street, near Victoria Avenue. The matter was turned over to the police and when Sergeant Thomas got his hands on the dynamite, he headed immediately for the Otonabee River, picking his course very carefully and threw the explosives into the river at the end of Simcoe street.

TROOPS ARE RESTLESS.

Japanese Troops May Be Called Out To Keep Order.

TOKYO, Sept. 15. — (Canadian Press).—Disorder and unrest in the forces of General Chang Tso-Lin, stationed at Mukden, the principal city of Manchuria, have resulted in a strong protest from the Japanese Consul-General there, according to reports received here today by the Japanese Foreign Office.

Further press despatches say that as a result of the situation, the Japanese Consular police are held in readiness for action at Mukden, and the Japanese troops may be called out to preserve order. The Chang Tso-Lin troops are concentrated at Mukden to move south towards Pekin for an attack on the forces of the central government in Chi-Hli Province, headed by Wu Pei Su. Dissension in the forces of Chang Tso-Lin, as indicated in the Tokyo despatch, would be a new factor in favor of the Central Government forces, about to defend Pekin. The underlying cause of the Mukden turbulence was not indicated.

A GENEROUS OFFER.

France Will Create An Institution For Peace Services.

GENEVA, Sept. 15.—(Canadian Press).—France's generous offer to found at Paris an international institution for intellectual co-operation, under direction of the League of Nations, has been welcomed everywhere, but the question is raised whether in instituting relations, other existing organizations already devoting themselves to furthering international co-operation, will assist. Institutions desiring of co-operating with the new organization at Paris are the International Institute of Bibliography and the Union of International Associations, both of which have their headquarters at Brussels. A delegation from the latter association has presented a petition to the League, asking that their organization have the right to permanent representation in the section of the League devoted to intellectual co-operation.

COMMENT ON DEFEAT.

British Press Not Surprised That Americans Won Polo Match.

LONDON, Sept. 15—(Canadian Press).—Commentators in the morning newspapers express chagrin over the crushing defeat of the British in the first of the International polo matches at Meadowbrook. They are not surprised that the United States won, but they were not prepared for such an overwhelming defeat. The Daily Express declares that their non-success, together with Lord Wimbourne's departure for home, will bring to a head a controversy which has been raging behind the scenes for months. The sporting public here, it says, will be concerned less about the defeat than by the fact that the British team is in no wise the best available. This is due to a series of unfortunate events which have long agitated polo enthusiasts and which are alleged to be traceable to personal antagonism

The Daily News ruefully recalls the long series of British failures in international sports, of which the Meadowbrook polo and the Walker cup golf events are only the latest examples. Nevertheless it, refuses to believe that the British Empire is in danger of disruption by moral and physical decay, and hopefully looks to the day when the tables will be turned.

POLO PONIES SOLD.

Report That Prince Has Disposed of Entire String.

SYOSSET, New York, Sept. 15 —(Canadian Press).—After a round of golf yesterday and having been saved from any annoyance last night by an intruder who climbed the fence of the James A. Burden estate, the Prince of Wales today was prepared to quietly enjoy himself during the concluding days of his visit to the United States. Hereafter his programme of festivities probably will be less formal than during the first period of his visit. The Prince of Wales was away from the Burden home, where he is living while in this country when a man entered the place last night, and said he wanted to see the Prince on personal business. State troopers stopped the man and after searching him for weapons escorted him from the grounds.

Reports that the Prince had sold his whole string of eight polo ponies to Julius Fleischmann for $30 000 could not be verified to-day.

BISHOP O'BRIEN TELLS ROTARY ABOUT SCHOOLS

His Lordship Points Out Case For Separate School Supporters.

DISTRICT GOVERNOR.

John Symes, of Lockport, Delivers Splendid Address To-day.

In a most scholarly address upon the subject of education before the Peterboro Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon to-day, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien claimed on behalf of Separate School supporters of the province the right to carry on high school education in their schools to have a proportion of taxes paid by stock companies devoted to the maintenance of Separate Schools, according to the number of Roman Catholic shareholders and a fair share of the public grants.

His Lordship sketched the early history of education in Ontario, paying particular attention to the Act of 1841. He pointed out that the pioneer residents desired religious education to be taught in the schools and this was true of all denominations. If there were Separate Schools in Ontario to-day, he maintained, it was because Anglicans, and Methodists and Presbyterians in those days did not want purely secular schools and because there was a desire to take care of the Protestant minority in Quebec.

Bishop O'Brien then pointed out that by the acts of 1863 and 1867 the minorities in the two provinces were given the right to maintain Separate Schools, to clam exemption from paying taxes to the public school system and to share fairly in all grants.

In their claims to-day they were simply asking for what had been granted them by this legislation. His Lordship pointing out that in the case of stock companies no matter how much stock might be held by Catholics the taxes were all went to the support of public schools while a similar condition existed in regard to the Hydro-Electric Commission and the Canadian National Railways.

The District Governor

The Rotary Club was honoured to-day by a visit from District Governor John Symes of Lockport, N.Y., who delivered a most inspiring address posed upon the Rotary wheel in which he likened the members to the cogs, while important spokes in the wheel were fellowship, inspiration, service to one's classification, to the community and the home. Governor Symes is a very eloquent speaker and no one could listen to his address without being a better citizen and a better Rotarian. Throughout he emphasized the importance of regular attendance in order that the benefit of the fellowship of the gathering could be fully realized and stressed the fact that in their relations with each other and with the world at large through their business or profession that the Golden Rule should always guide them.

Governor Symes exposition of a Rotarian duties was a most impressive portion of his address and his announcement that his would endeavour to pay another visit before his term of office expired, was heartily applauded.

President J. W. McDermid was in the chair at to-day's luncheon.

NO LOOPHOLE FOR WAR SHOULD BE LEFT IN THE LEAGUE'S COVENANT

France Urges That All Causes of War Should Be Submitted to World Court—Not Satisfied With Clause for Three Months' Negotiations.

BRITIAN AVOIDS CLEAR STATEMENT

GENEVA, Sept. 16.— With foreign minister Benes of Checko-Slovakia, presiding as a kind of impartial judge and conciliator, British and French representatives at the assembly of the league of nations, wrestled all Monday with the problem of sanctions, which forms the greatest obstacle in the way of a general Geneva agreemnt, and last night both countries through their delegates, issued optimistic statements. They said until issues under discussion seemed on the way to satisfactory solution.

Whether this general agreement will take the form of a resolution, a protocol or treaty, has not yet been decided, but this question has been relegated to second place because of the proposal put forth yesterday with all the force of France behind it, that every loop-hole in the covenant of the league of Nations which makes it possible for any country to engage in war, must be effectively and hermetically sealed. The French propose that the provisions in article 12 of the covenant where by the nations agree not to resort to war until three months after an award by arbitrators or an award by the council of the league be stricken from the covenant. This is in accordance with the French determination that any and all causes of war shall be submitted for specific settlement by the world court, and specially appointed arbitrators by the council of the league.

Brit.in Assistance.

Although Monday's meeting was entirely private it is understood that some of the most difficult points of the discussion was the question of just how Great Britain will come forward when any state has been declared an aggressor. The British delegation gave the impression of being somewhat discouraged over the relations engendered among the continental powers by Britain's implied engagement to throw her naval forces against a proclaimed aggressor and there has seemed to be created on the part of the British representatives a tendency to avoid any definite and specific committment.

Efforts were largely centered about securing clarification of article 16 of the covenant. Paragraph two of this article says that the council shall recommend such military, naval and air forces that the members of the league shall severally contribute to the armed suasion which will be used to protect the league covenant. This suggestion of a recommendation was hardly satisfactory to France which wants something more definite and something stronger.

Settlement Certain.

Monday's negotiations also took note of the possibilities that a number of states might not sign the compulsory arbitration clause of the world court of justice, and hence the necessity of providing for some certain settlement of disputes to the council of the league or to a special board of arbitration.

So far were the negotiations advanced yesterday that Dr Banes with the approval of Great Britain and France submit a draft of the instrument to day to a meeting of the sub-committee of the disarmament committee. Lord Parmoor said last night: "There seems to every hope that the proposals which Premier MacDonald and Herriot drew up when they came to Geneva will be put into concrete shape."

A French delegate said: "The keynote of everything is the covenant. The world court by itself is insufficient. We are sticking by the covenant and clarifying it so that we might be effectually outlawed.

German Armament.

Constructive work in another direction was performed when the permanent league commission on military, naval and air matters reached agreement regarding the system of control of the German armament which will probably be launched by the League of Nations when the inter-allied board has completed its task and the time comes to transfer the whole question to the league of nations. Investigation of armament situation in Germany was authorized by the treaty of Versailles and the league military commission have drafted a detailed programme of investigation and control at the request of the council of the league.

WAR GUILT TO BE DISCUSSED

German Cabinet Will Take Up This Question Next Week.

MINISTERS AGREE

BERLIN, Sept. 16.— A cabinet meeting was held Monday, presided over by Chancellor Marx. The question of formal repudiation of Germany's war guilt was not among the subjects discussed. It is expected that a decision on the war guilt question will be taken next week, after President Ebert's return from his vacation. At the conclusion of the cabinet meeting Chancellor Marx and Foreign Minister Stresemann conferred at length on the subject of war guilt and an official announcement was made later that "no difference exists between the chancellor and the foreign minister."

The statement added that the negotiatnons between Dr. Streseman and Dr. Oscar Hertz, leader of the Nationalist Party, before the Reichstag, on the bill for making the Dawes plan effective, have the full approval of the chancellor and the entire cabinet.

A semi-official statement was issued last night saying that all cabinet members are in complete agreement regarding the question of war guilt and Germany's entry into the League of Nations. Both questions, according to the statement, will be dealt with thoroughly on September 23rd, when President Ebert is expected at a cabinet meeting.

Professor Hans Delbrueck, Count Max Montgelas and Dr. Paul Rohrbach, who are among the prominent Germans engaged in historic researches in connection with the outbreak of the war, have signed a joint statement in which they deplore the impending action of the German Government, declaring that such procedure is inimical to an objective search for truth.

"In our opinion," they say, "the most effective way to arrive at the truth in this highly important question is to continue the present international scientific discussions."

They also declare that Germany must make a frank statement with respect to her position on the question of war guilt when she applies for admission into the League of Nations.

The three German investigators are prepared to submit proof, they say, that Germany's preparedness for war in 1914 was far from that degree of comprehensiveness which her national prosperity and economic resources would have warranted.

They charge that the Russian and French Governments had decided for war before Germany declared war or mobilized and that the alleged withdrawal of the French troops to a point ten kilometers behind the frontier was not for the purpose of avoiding war, but was intended to give the world the impression that Germany was the aggressor.

Dr. Streseman, Foreign Minister, informed the newspaper representatives that he had ben misquoted with reference to Friday's statement that Germany would not enter the League of Nations until the question of war guilt had been settled. He declared that he did not hold the views attributed to him.

His views was that Germany's entry into the League must not be made conditional on her recognition of her alleged responsibility for the war. The present German Government held the same view in this connection as all previous Governments since the Treaty of Versailles was signed.

NORTHCLIFFE IN OTHER WORLD WEARS GREY FLANNEL SUITS AND SOFT SHIRTS

His Secretary Says She Receives Messages From Spirit of Employer.

HAS CONSERVATORY AND COUNTRY HOME

No Money Across Great Divide—Those Created Are Never Dead.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Lord Northcliffe is the latest dead celebrity to be credited by British spiritualists with establishing communication with this world.

The revelation is made by Louise Owen, for twenty years Lord Northcliffe's confidential secretary, and who herself is well known particularly to everybody who had dealings with the famous publisher. Lord Northcliffe regarded her as the most efficient woman of his acquaintance.

Message From Doyle.

She says that since Lord Northcliffe's death, two years ago, she has been conscious sometimes of his presence very near to her. One day Sir A. Conan Doyle sent her word that he had spoken to Lord Northcliffe, who wanted to get in touch with her.

Last week she saw Mrs. Leonard Osborne, famous medium, who, falling immediately into a trance, read aloud a message from the publisher to Miss Owen, in which he said among other things:

"I had an idea that over here we would float about wearing flowing robes. How I should have hated that. Yes, I have even fingernails. I am wearing a gray flannel suit like those you often saw me wear, with a soft collar and soft shirt.

"My skin is very clear, and it is a wondreful feeling to be so fit. One is never ill here and never depressed. I have chosen a country home with flowers and birds and am so happy. I have even a conservatory for my flowers.

"We have no money here but work out all things in time. I have no thoughts of returning to earth."

Spirit Foretells Trouble.

The message prophesied that there was troublous times ahead but cautioned everyone to keep calm.

Lord Northcliffe, according to Mrs. Osborne, spoke of his associations in the ethereal with Count Tolstoy and Joseph Conrad, who died two months ago.

In closing, the message observed that "those who are created are never dead."

Rimouski Conservatives Will Contest Election

MONTREAL, Sept. 16.—A special despatch to the Montreal Gazette says that the Conservatives of the County of Rimouski have decided to contest the election of Sir Eugene Fiset, Liberal candidate, to the House of Commons, and are preparing the necessary papers.

Investigation of circumstances surrounding the election of Sept. 2, has been in progress under Conservative auspices, the despatch says, and local organizers believe they have grounds for successful contestation.

Keever had told of buying two bottles of whiskey at 9 p.m., on August 6th and taking them to Toronto for analysis. His evidence was supported by a second government operator, who yas not asked however to identify the defendant.

STIRRED BY TICKER

Unconscious Telegrapher Aroused By Familiar Signal.

VANCOUVER, Sept. 16.—(Canadian Press).—The muffled call of a telegraph instrument sounding the personal signal "PN" Sunday night aroused J. T. Phelan, superintendent of the Government Yukon telegraph wires, well-known throughout Canada, from unconsciousness which has persisted since he fell critically ill three weeks ago.

After many futile attempts by members of his family to penetrate his unconsciousness, the telegraph experiment was decided upon. Once his attention was attracted by the signal, to which he has responded for many years. The operator sent a number of messages which Phelan acknowledged by a nod of his head. His condition is so serious he is unable to speak. The experiment will be repeated.

The result will be the reduction of the shop staff in Winnipeg, September 19 by twelve hundred, and in all Western Canada by twenty-two hundred men.

PREMIER NEEDS BIGGER INCOME IF A POOR MAN

Sir Robert Donald in London Times Emphasizes Heavy Cost of Position.

DEFENDS GIFT

Unworthy for Nation That Government Leader Should Be Embarrassed.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Sir Robert Donald emphasizes, in a letter to The London Times, the argument put forward by Ramsay MacDonald that the fact of his holding high office was likely to make him a poorer man than he was before he became Premier. Discussions about Sir Alexander Grant's present to the Premier of a motor car serve to raise an issue of some importance, says Sir Robert. This is that the Premiership is no place for a poor man.

The mental and physical strain which the Prime Minister endures taxes his strength to the utmost, the writer says, and the financial burdens imposed by his office cannot be met out of his salary alone if he is to fill his position with dignity.

The Prime Minister's salary of £5,000 is reduced considerably more than one-fourth by the income tax, the letter points out. He has a very expensive house to run and a large staff of servants to keep; he has to pay for heating, lighting, cleaning, maintenance and so on. He also has personal charges to meet, including the salary of his private secretary, who carries on his personal and party correspondence.

The living expenses of the Prime Minister and his family, Sir Robert writes, are small, but his position obliges him, even though they may be reduced to a minimum, occasionally to entertain his colleagues, distinguished visitors and the representatives of foreign countries. Moreover, Mr. MacDonald, as Foreign Minister, has other expenditures to meet in that he must return the hospitality of diplomats and must entertain the members of conferences and so on.

Large Debit Balance Mounts.

It is easy seen then, says Sir Robert, that the Prime Minister must have a large debit balance to meet if he is dependent on his salary alone, as Ramsay MacDonald is. Without making any provision for a motor car, he is in a far worse position materially than any of the other Secretaries of State, who have not the same calls upon them.

The question arises, Sir Robert says, should this state of things continue? He suggests that there will be other Prime Ministers whose means also will be unequal to the financial burdens of the office. Prime Ministers of Continental countries, he says, have official residences maintained for them, as well as large entertainment allowances, and a grateful State endows a motor car for them. Every one, he says, will admit that a motor car is an indispensable adjunct of the office of Prime Minister.

Is it worthy of a great country to let its highest officers be placed in an undignified position, and handicapped in the efficient discharge of their duties by unnecessary anxiety? Sir Robert asks. The dignity and prestige of the office, he says, should be thought of apart from any personal considerations now that the Labor democracy has assumed the responsibility of the Government.

In conclusion, the writer says:

"As regards the Prime Minister's motor car to which exaggerated attention has been given, it is preposterous to think that that obviously straightforward and innocent transaction can have the slightest political significance. It was a gift from an old friends, such as many other friends would have been pleased to give. Sir Alexander Grant's honor was open to him from any other political part—he himself is a Conservative—in recognition of his magnificent donation of the National Library for Scotland and other philanthropic gifts."

Wheatley Assails Lloyd George.

Ramsay MacDonald as the 'greatest statesman of Europe" and Lloyd George as the 'wrecker of Europe' was the contrast drawn by John Wheatley, Minister of Health, in a speech at Glasgow.

Premier MacDonald had altered the whole tone and attitude of Europe, Mr. Wheatley said; the spirit of MacDonald, the peacemaker, had influenced the electors of France and induced them to dismiss Premier Poincare and his policy of conquest, and had made possible the wonderfully successful London conference.

The Prime Minister had also established peace with Russia, Mr. Wheatley declared, and had apparently opened a conflict with Lloyd George. Was it not an impertinence for that man, he asked, who, above all others, was the wrecker of Europe, to claim to teach Ramsay MacDonald how to run the Foreign Office?

Lloyd George had threatened to oust the Labor Government from office, Mr. Wheatley continued, but he could no longer make their flesh creep, as he did not speak for the country nor for Parliament, and it was doubtful even if he spoke for the Liberal party.

TRUSTEES OBEY HEALTH MOGULS

Comply With Order That Children Must Be Vaccinated to be Admitted.

CONSULT MINISTER

SARNIA, September 16. — After instructing the public school teacher to admit children to school whether they had vaccination certificates or not, thus ignoring the order of the medical health officer, the Point Edward school trustees changed their policy on Monday on the advice of the Provincial Board of Health, and thereby saved the teacher, J. B. Wilcox, from prosecution.

Dr. W. K. Carruthers, the village health officer, then complained to the county magistrate, C. S. Woodrow, of the board's defiance of the vaccination order. The magistrate advised the trustees that if a summons were issued he would have no alternative but to impose a fine on the teacher, and advised that the Minister of Health be consulted. This was done, and the Minister replied that the order was a reasonable one and the school authorities would have to comply, which they did when the school opened yesterday.

Sugar Experts Organize To Improve Production

HONOLULU, Sept. 16.—The first Worlds' International Conference of Sugar Experts was organized here recently in connection with the Pan-Pacific Food Conservation Conference. H. P. Agee, director of the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association experiment station, was chosen chairman; Mario Calvino, vice-chairman, and George Barnette, of the Colonial Sugar Refining Company, Australia, secretary.

The organization will be a permanent one and will hold a meeting in some sugar producing country every three years.

Delegates from Cuba, Porto Rico, Mexico, Australia, Fiji, Philippines, Formosa, Java, Louisiana and Hawaii attended the organization meeting. They visited the plant quarantine station of the territorial board of agriculture and forestry and the cane quarantine station of the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association.

The business of the organization will be mainly of a technical nature, dealing principally with cane breeding, eradication of cane diseases and methods of increasing production.

DRIVER KILLED IN MOTOR RACE; BREAST CRUSHED

Jimmy Murphy Died in Syracuse Hospital — His Machine Skidded.

CRASHED FENCE

Breast Pierced Over Heart by Post—Was Speed Champion.

SYRACUSE, Sept. 16 — Jimmy Murphy, driver in the 150 mile automobile race at the State Fair Grounds here on Monday, received fatal injuries in the 136th lap of the race and died a few minutes later in a local hospital. Murphy was national speedway champion in 1922, finished second in the American rating in 1923 and had first honors clinched again this year.

While Murphy, who was in second place, was making a desparate effort to make up the three laps between himself and "Red" Shafer, who won the race his machine skidded on the east end of the track, whirled around twice and struck the fence, rear-end foremost.

A post from the fence pierced his breast over the heart, and another splinter struck him under the chin. Nearly seventy feet of the railing was ripped out in the crash.

A slight pulse was noted when attendants removed the injured driver to the ambulence but death came at 4.45 o'clock a few minutes after his arrival at the hospital.

PROWLERS ESCAPED

Were Trying to Steal Grain From Walter Henry' Barn.

BAILIEBORO, Sept. 16.—Recently Walter Henry, a farmer residing a short distance in from the Provincial highway near Rice Lake, had a visit paid to his granaries by two men. About daylight Mr. Henry's hired man was awakened from his slumbers by a noise that seemed to come from the barn, which is situated only a short distance from the house. He got up out of bed, and did not even wait to put on his shoes but made his way to the barn. The unwelcome visitors must have been on the watch out and saw him coming, as they ran down the lane towards the road, but as they were fleeter afoot than their pursuer. They escaped into a woods near by and their pursuer had to return without having over taken either of the men.

CANADIAN 'VET' SOUGHT PRINCE

Twice Ejected From the Burden Grounds—Shell Shock Victim.

VISITOR PUT OUT

NEW YORK, Sept. 16. — State troopers, who are on duty guarding the Burden state at Syosset where the Prince of Wales is residing, ejected a man Sunday night who entered the gate to see the Prince "on personal business" and an hour later ejected the man a second time after he had entered the estate by climbing a fence.

"What do you want?" demanded State Trooper Hayden, as the visitor entered the gate leading to the front entrance.

"To see the Prince," replied the visitor, a well-dressed man who was not more than 30 years old, but whose face was wrinkled and deeply lined.

"What do you want to see him about?"

"Important business."

"What is the nature of it?"

"That is between me and the Prince."

Noticing something unusual about the man's eyes, the Trooper, as if in friendship, linked his arm in the visitor's, and lightly tapped his coat and trousers' pockets. There were no weapons. Hayden walked with his companion to the servants' entrance and questioned him at length. The man said he was a Canadian soldier of the Third Engineering Division, a veteran of the Somme, Vimy Ridge, Arras and Mons. Though insisting it was highly important that he should see the Prince in person, the visitor would let nothing induce him to disclose his purpose in calling there.

"The Prince isn't here anyway to-day," said Trooper Hayden, "and if he was, you would have to tell all about yourself and your business before you would even have a chance to see one of his secretaries."

It was judged, however, that the visitor was harmless and that his secret probably was a grievance about a pension or medal claim.

Montreal Fire Code To Be Made More Stringent

MONTREAL, Sept. 16.—The stiffening of fire regulations in Montreal and more severe penalties for carelessness that results in outbreaks are being studied by Fire Commissioner Latulippe, who will shortly present to the City Council a new fire code, comprising suggestions for amending the existing by-laws and for adopting new ones. Blazes that would not have happened had citizens been reasonably careful have been too frequent in recent months, the Fire Commissioner finds, but with the city laws as they stand to-day, the court in many instances is impotent, even though it might wish to take action against an offender.

ACID PUMPS OF PORCELAIN

Trout To Be Kept From Preying On Salmon Fry

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Sept. 16.—Under a plan adopted by the United States bureau of fisheries, it is hoped to increase the salmon pack of the Cook Inlet section of Alaska from 200,000 cases in recent seasons to 500,000 within the next few years.

According to William Studdert, in charge of salmon protection, the depletion of salmon in southewestern Alaska has been due as much to failure to convert the spawning grounds as to over fishing. Mr. Studdert declared the greatest enemy to the salmon were Dolly Varden trout, which preyed on the eggs in the spawning grounds up streams and caught the salmon minnows before they could swim to safety.

"One trout", he said, "captured in a stream while the salmon fry were traveling to the ocean revealed 70 odd fry in its intestines. To stop these inroads we have decided to destroy the trout."

Surveys are being made of every stream used by salmon to reach spawning grounds in the lakes. The streams are being cleared of obstructions and made navigable for the salmon. The lakes will be seined and the trout transferred to lakes not used by salmon.

Buy Coal Now!

Nature Study

You have to hand it to Old Man Squirrel for being a true exponent of the Doctrine of Preparedness. He doesn't wait until the nuts are all gone or covered up with dead leaves or snow, but puts in his Winter supply in the Summer and early Fall, when they are plentiful and easy to get. Then, when cold weather comes, he just grows a heavy coat of fur and takes life easy, secure in the knowledge that, come what may, he's sure of three square meals each and every day.

If the lowly little squirrel sees the wisdom of preparing for shortage in time of plenty, what excuse can humans offer for not putting in their Winter supply of coal now? Good Coal is cheap and plentiful now and, even though there be no strikes next Winter, coal will be scarcer and higher. Car shortages, bad weather, increased demand and transportation tie-ups will make it so.

You will profit by following the Squirrel's Example

THE GUMPS—HIS MASTER'S VOICE

GETTING READY FOR FALL FAIR

T. J. Horkins Offers Special Prize For Best Exhibit of Flowers.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 16.—In order to encourage a greater floral display at the Campbellford Fair, Director T. J. Horkins, who is chairman of the Building Committee, has offered a special prize of $5 for the best exhibit of flowers. There should be no difficulty in getting out a big showing of flowers in a town like Campbellford, where there are so many well-cared gardens devoted to floral culture. Travellers out the Grand Road especially never fail to note the beauty spots in front of the handsome residences on that thoroughfare. Earl Williams has only been a few months in his new residence near the railway crossing, but already has one of the most attractive flower gardens in town.

Mr. Horkins is interested in the general success of the Fair as well as that of one department, and has addressed the following open letter to Mayor Meyers and the members of the Town Council:

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Campbellford.

Gentlemen,—The President and Directors of the Seymour Agricultural Society wish to convey to you our very best thanks for the free use of the Market Square during midway week, which made it possible for them to erect a horse barn on the Fair Grounds. This barn was badly needed as large numbers of horses in the past were tied to wagons, posts and rails, and there was a danger of one of them getting loose and running amuck among the children at the Fair.

Several other buildings are needed, and theese, no doubt, will be built as time and circumstances permit. There should be a building for the inspected cattle, one for the hogs and sheep, and one for the merchants, manufacturers and people of Campbellford to exhibit their wares. Large bills have been printed and are being distributed throughout the surrounding country, and it would add very much to the Fair, and would be good business on the part of the manufacturers and merchants to have a good exhibit for visitors to see.

Your directors have two handicaps to overcome this year—Picton having its Fair at the same time, and the bridge being torn up—but they are working hard to overcome these obstacles and make this Fair better than ever. They appeal to the pride and patriotism of every citizen of Campbellford and Seymour to help by buying a dollar membership ticket, which can be obtained from Mr. Stone, the secretary, or any director, and by exhibiting, and by so doing enlarging the Fair.

What pleased me most at the Toronto Exhibition was the exhibit of the flowers and foliage. A start should be made along this line at the Campbellford Fair.

Hoping we will have good weather, good exhibits and a good crowd.

I remain, yours respectfully,
T. J. HORKINS,
Chairman of Building Committee.

Made Quick Time.

The firemen had their first call Monday forenoon to the west side of the river since the bridge was torn up. The blaze started in a barn belonging to Wm. Oliver in the Third Ward, but was out before the arrival of the brigade.

It was necessary to cross the river by way of the bridge at the Paper Mill, and this made a run from the Fire Hall to the Third Ward of about three and a half miles. The truck covered the distance in less than seven minutes.

Prohibition Rally.

A prohibition meeting will be held in the Methodist Church on Tuesday evening, 23rd September, when Rev. C. D. Daniels, of the Seymour Circuit, will give an address on the approaching plebiscite. A choice musical programme will be furnished by local talent. Rev. Wesley Elliott will preside.

Personals.

A. German, of Rochester, spent a couple of days here visiting at the home of J. Harndon.

Arthur Skitch, of Toronto, came to town to visit his uncle, Edward Skitch, who has been in ill-health for some time.

SCARF ON HAT

A soft felt hat, cloche of course, is trimmed with a black and yellow alpaca scarf which also winds about the neck and makes a muffler.

WHITE KID GLOVES

The white kid glove for evening is evidently staging a comeback, for at the smartest functions one sees them in large numbers.

SKATING COSTUME

Some of the smartest skating outfits have wide sashes made of wool scarfs heavily embroidered in gaudy yarns.

LONG SCARF

The scarf these days may be almost a dress, being a length of silk wound once around the neck and held in under the belt, with long ends that reach to the hem of the gown.

RURAL FAIR AT NORTH MANVERS

Seven Schools Entered in the Parade Contest—Five Hundred in Attendance.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 16. — The thirteenth North Manvers Rural School Fair was held at Janetville on Monday with about five hundred people in attendance. The fine weather added materially to the success of the occasion, and while the number of exhibits was somewhat smaller than in former years the quality was quite up to the usual high standard and the spirit of enthusiasm which prevailed showed the genuine interest taken in this annual event.

Seven schools are included in the North Manvers constituency, six of which were entered in the school parade contest, Colonel L. T. McLaughlin of Bowmanville, acting as judge, while Major Snyder, of Port Hope, in whose inspectorate the schools are situated, judged the physical culture exercises. In each case the judges complimented the teachers and scholars on the excellent work done and the originality shown in planning drills, uniforms, and school yells, as well as the painstaking efforts, evidently put forth in bringing the pupils to a good standing in their physcal culture work.

OBITUARY.

SARAH JANE SPENCER.

BONAR LAW, September 16—The funeral of the late Sarah Jane Spencer, was conducted from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. George Rutherford, on Thursday afternoon, 11th of September. The deceased was the last surviving member of the family of the late Samuel Dunk, of the Seventh concession Seymour, most of whom lived to a ripe old age.

Besides her only daughter, Mrs. George Rutherford, deceased is survived by four sons, Frank and Herbert of Rawdon; Ernest and Alfred, of Havelock, and by 15 grandchildren, and eight great-grand children, the eldest of the latter being 15 years of age.

The husband of the deceased, John Spencer, died 22 years ago, and a son, Edgar, passed away in 1895.

The funeral was held to the Rylstone cemetery, the services being conducted by Rev. S. G. McCormack of Madoc, who is acting moderator during the vacancy in the charge at Rylstone and Burnbrae. The esteem in which the deceased was held was shown by the large procession of friends and neighbors, who followed her remains to their last resting place. The floral offerings were many and beautiful.

The pallbearers were six nephews: Dan. Petherick of Havelock; Harry Rowe, Thomas Dunk, Robert and Lewis Dunk, and James Dunk, of Campbellford.

A REAL GOOD "SPORT."

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept 13 (United Press).—The honest man Diogenes searched for with a lantern has been found—but the ancient Grecian didn't find him.

B. F. Boggs, probation officer, found a note on the steering-wheel of his car. The writer, Dr. J. B. Jenkins, explained he had hammed Bogg's car, denting the side, and asking him to call. When Boggs called, Jenkins asked to be allowed to pay for the damage. Boggs assented.

The man walked in a peculiar manner, as if wounded. Hayden let him go.

A Dim Figure Among the Trees.

An hour later, Trooper Grimes detected a figure moving in the gloom among trees and bushes in the rear of the Burden residence. He was soon on the man. It was the Canadian veteran again. He had climbed a fence at a distance from the front gate and started for the house again.

This time he was taken before Sergeant D. S. Bock in charge of the State Troopers and O. H. Sawyer, the special agent of the State Department attached to the Prince. Again the man insisted that his story was exclusively for the ears of the Prince. He would not hint its nature beyond implying that it was of vast importance.

"Shell shock" was the informal diagnosis. Since he carried no weapon on either visit, the troopers contented themselves with seeing him aboard a train for New York.

An ejection of a different kind took place on the preceding night at "Chimneys," the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Sanford at Brookville, where the Prince of Wales was the guest of honor at a dance.

A young man in evening clothes drove his automobile to the front of the house and was about to get out when he was asked to drive his car a distance from the house and park it. He was his own chauffeur and somewhat unfamiliar with the technique of motoring into Long Island estates, and so he was marked from the first.

When he finally entered the Sanford residence he was already under the observation of Pinkertons, who were employed to guard against the repetition of a robbery like that which occurred at the Cosden's a few nights after the visit of the Prince. A man who is credited with knowing the faces of most of the "international crooks" was notified of the presence of this suspect. He detective was unable to identify the visitor as a crook. Mrs. Sanford could not place the man as one of her 400 guests.

The Guest Becomes Nervous.

The Prince had not yet arrived from the Burden residence, where he was given a supper, and for a time speculation as to the identity of this counterfeit guest and his mission gave a good deal of interest to the affair.

The man began to act uncomfortably as he found himself the target for suspicious glances. He fidgeted and mopped his brow and sought shelter in spots where he thought he would appear inconspicuous.

Finally there was a tap on the shoulder of the four-hundred-and-first guest.

"Will you come with me?" asked the tapper. "I would like to have a little conversation with you."

No. 401 was led to a room where several men were waiting for him.

"Who are you?"

"Who? Me?"

"Yes, who are you?"

"Why, I am—Wait, here's my card. No, I can't find it."

"Were you invited here?"

"Well, the fact is, you see, I am——"

"You were not invited here?"

"Not exactly."

"Come along with me."

He was led to his automobile. According to one account, he was booted into it, but the official information about the incident said that he was "seen off." The Prince arrived a few minutes later.

APPEALS POSTPONED

Montreal Bandits' Case Waits on N. K. Laflamme's Recovery.

MONTREAL, Sept. 16.—(Canadian Press). — The appeals filed in behalf of Guiseppe Serafini, Louis Morel, Valentino, Frank Gambino and Leo Davis, all sentenced to death for the murder of Henri Cieroux in the Hochelaga Bank collection car hold-up last April, were called in the Appeal Court yesterday and postponed until September 18th.

The reason for the postponement was to see whether N. K. Laflame, K.C., would by that time have recovered from his illness to conduct his case for the appellants as had been arranged.

WEDDING BELLS.

KITSON—LAWS.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Saturday, September 13th at 4 p.m. at the home of the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Jones, 600 Gerrard street, Toronto, when Archie, youngest son of Mrs. Jones, of the above address, and Doris Evelyn, eldest daughter of Mr. A. W. Laws, late of London, Eng., now of Peterboro, Ont., were united in the bonds of holy matrimony. The ceremony was performed by the bridegroom's brother, Ensign W. Kitson of Sarnia, Ont.

The bride entered the room on the arm of her father to the strains of Lohengren's wedding march, rendered by Mr. W. Turner. The room was beautifully decorated with flowers and silver bells, one very large bell being directly over the bride as she stood at the altar.

The bride looked very sweet in a lovely dress of brown beaded romaine, with bronze picture hat, bronze kid shoes and gloves to match, and carrying a large bouquet ophelia roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Katherine Curry of Toronto looked charming in a dress of peacock blue georgette, black picture hat, grey suede shoes, with gloves to match and carrying a bouquet of pale pink asters. The bride was also attended by two charming little flower girls, carrying baskets of flowers The groom was ably assited by Mr. Sidney A. Laws, brother of the bride.

During the signing of the register, "O Promise Me" was most ably rendered by Mr. W. Turner.

After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served to about fifty guests. The two long tables required for the purpose were most beautifully decorated and gave great credit to the efforts of the ladies concerned and called forth many complimentary remarks from the assembled guests. After the many good things had been disposed of, several complimentary speeches were made, showing the popularity of the young couple. Ensign Wilfrid Kitson also spoke a few thoughtful words, emphasizing the importance of the home life as the foundation of the state and nation. Mr. and Mrs. Kitson left shortly after on an extensive motor trip.

The happy couple were the recipients of many beautiful and costly present. Mr. and Mrs. Kitson will be at home to their friends after October 1, at 22 Mounstephen Ave. Toronto.

FRUIT NOW SHIPPED IN NEW TYPE OF CAR

1.—Exterior of Car.
2.—Interior of Fruit Shed at Bonaventure Station.
3.—Interior of Car.

THE development of the Niagara Peninsula as a source of fruit for markets of the Dominion is becoming more pronounced, through the co-operation of the fruit growers, the dealers and the Express Department of the Canadian National Railways.

For this traffic, the Canadian National Express has designed an entirely new style of fruit car which has already given satisfaction. No ice is used in these cars, a natural air-cooling method being used. While it does not develop as low a temperature as ice refrigeration, the process is more natural, and as a result, the fruit does not deteriorate quickly when removed to the warmer outside atmosphere.

These are ordinary baggage or express merchandise cars, 60 feet in length. They are equipped with a steel underframe and can be added to the equipment of any type of train; they are also equipped with special ventilating devices, consisting in part of ten metal air intakes and channels placed in a staggered position, five on each side of the car, for the purpose of carrying outside air, while train is in motion, through the channel into a chamber of approximately seven inches in depth under a racked false flooring, which entirely covers the regular floor of the car, with the exception of the two gangways across the car between the two side doors at each end. There are also eight metal air exhausts placed in a staggered position, four on each side of the car, for the purpose of carrying off gases and foul or warm air thrown off by the fruits and vegetables. The intakes and exhausts lead to the outside of car through the deck light openings.

The channels running from the air intakes into the chamber under the false flooring are placed against the wall and curved portion of the roof inside of the car. All of the equipment is portable and will in no way damage the car when being attached thereto. In addition, the intakes bring air into the car irrespective of the direction it moves. The idea is to utilize an ordinary baggage or express merchandise car, equipping same at the start of the fruit and vegetable season and dismantling at the close of the season.

There are thirty of these cars in operation between the Niagara Peninsula and points in Ontario, Quebec, the Maritime Provinces and the North West, and they received several tests under the most unfavorable conditions possible, before they were finally adopted for service. These tests were carried out by G. E. Bellerose, general superintendent of transportation of the express department. In the case of an empty car, it was found that the car exhausted 292,590 cubic feet of air, which is equivalent to changing all the air in the car every 58 seconds. A car loaded with 800 crates composed of radishes with the tops on, asparagus and spinach, exhausted 168,360 cubic feet of air per hour, or a complete change of air in the car every 101 seconds. Thermographs in this car showed the inside temperatures to range from 53, 54 and 56 degrees, while the outside temperature ranged from 78, 58 and 56 degrees.

Another test carried out with 1,200 crates of the same traffic, showed a complete change of air every 87 seconds and temperature readings inside of 60, 68 and 60 degrees, and outside readings of 90, 84, 68 and 58 degrees. Still a further test was made with smoke bombs broken in the car, proving that the car could be entirely cleared of smoke in 90 seconds while not in motion.

The claim is made that not only do these cars carry out their object better than any other type of air-cooled car, but they cost less to equip, and the maintenance charges are nil. The false floors are put down in sections and can be removed by one man and the true floor of the car can be swept clean in a few minutes. As the air from the intake devices comes in underneath the false floor, any dust or cinders that may enter the air channels, remain on the bottom and is not blown down on the fruit, so that the fruit arrives as clean and fresh as when it left its shipping point.

A RECORD ATTENDANCE.

With an attendance on Saturday afternoon of 8,886 people, the largest one-day mark in the history of the Exhibition, the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition set up a new record for the four days of 27,040, surpassing the best previous figure by 696.

Had the weather been favourable at the opening of the Exhibition the attendance would undoubtedly have reached the 30,000 mark, but under the circumstances the showing is most gratifying, and the support given the Exhibition, especially on Saturday, will encourage the directors to fresh efforts.

It should be understood that the attendance figures as given out in connection with the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition are not estimates or guesses, but the actual paid attendance, no attention being paid to the large number of people who for some reason or other are entitled to enter the grounds without charge.

In the case of other fall fairs, some of them much smaller in every way than the Peterborough Industrial, there are often reports of 10,000 or 15,000 people attending on one day.

Usually the attendance at these fairs is arrived at by the process of guess work, and the estimating is usually done by somebody whose experience in judging the size of a crowd has not been extensive.

The Peterborough figures are accurate—and the establishment of a new record is therefore most welcome.

THE FLOWER SHOW.

The Flower Show under the auspices of the Peterborough Horticultural Society to be held in the Armouries on Thursday and Friday evenings is a community event of unusual interest and should attract liberal patronage from the citizens generally.

The proceeds, of course, will be devoted to the work of the Horticultural Society, which may be described in a phrase as "the beautification of the city."

That is an effort that merits enthusiastic support, especially as the society has already given an earnest of its ability to serve by its many activities in Peterborough.

The programme will be full of excellent features, and it is expected that the display of flowers by the children and adult exhibitors will surpass anything of the kind seen here.

Professional florists are not competing for prizes, but they are showing their interest in the organization and in the undertaking by making attractive exhibits that will add to the beauty of the display.

It is a notable feature that no fewer than 765 school children who became members of the Horticultural Society early in the year are entitled not only to make exhibits but by displaying their membership buttons are entitled to free admission during the show.

The interesting of so many children in the work of the Horticultural Society was a progressive step that has distinguished this year's programme, and it will play a big part in the success of the Flower Show.

Citizens generally are urged to attend the event, both as an exhibit of unusual beauty and charm and as an opportunity to support an organization that is doing much to make Peterborough "the city beautiful."

NO CAUSE FOR WORRY.

There seems to be an unnecessary amount of worry over the possible effect of a double affirmative or a double negative vote at the coming plebiscite.

Such worry is a needless reflection upon the intelligence of the people of this Province.

Surely the number of people who would vote two "yes's" in answer to the questions would be so small as to be neglible in the general result.

The questions present no puzzle.

A voter who favours prohibition and votes "yes" on the first question can be depended upon to vote "no" on the second, which asks for an expression of opinion as to the desirability of the sale of liquor in sealed packages under Government control.

It is conceivable that some voters may vote "no" on both questions, not believing in the Ontario Temperance Act nor in the proposed sale by Government control.

A man who believes in the sale of liquor and beer in licensed premises might possibly answer both questions in the negative.

But in this case, too, the percentage of electors would be only a handful compared to the total number of votes registered.

The vote, it should be understood, is a plebiscite, not a referendum.

That is, it seeks to secure an expression of the will of the people on a matter of public interest, instead of being the submission of a proposed public measure, a law which has already been passed by the people's representatives in the Legislature.

What matters it then if a few voters prove so mentally endowed as to vote two "yes's" so long as the plebiscite enables an accurate estimate to be made of the opinion of the electors at large?

TELL THE WORLD.

Wembley is teaching us a lesson and we should profit from it, says the Border Cities Star. What Canada needs to do is to tell the world! An eminent Canadian, returning recently from a foreign tour, told a Toronto audience of how little Canada was known abroad. He was greatly surprised, not to say pained, to find such lack of knowledge concerning this great Dominion. There are many others who will support his testimony along this line. Canada has not been sufficiently advertised in Europe or even in America. Indeed, American lack of knowledge of things Canadian has long been a subject of comment in this country. The last few years have seen something of a change owing to the great influx of tourists each summer, but there are still millions of Americans who know little or nothing concerning their next door neighbor and their best customer. This is a condition that we should be trying, in every possible way, to remedy. We must go into the United States and into other nations of the world and let them know, as we have never done before, what we are doing in this country, our products and advantages, and why it is good business for them to come here and to do business with us. The British Empire Exhibition at Wembley has shown us the way. We have secured practical results from it already and have established a fame that will stand us in good stead in the years to come.

Telling the world about Canada shouldn't be hard work. The greatest talking points ever dreamed of are here for the using.

IT WON'T WORK.

The directors of the Colborne and Haldimand Agricultural Society are evidently thoroughly modern in their viewpoint, judging by a novel contest which they propose to hold in connection with their annual exhibition.

They are announcing a prize of a pair of electric hair curlers to the oldest lady with bobbed hair in evidence on the grounds during the fair.

It's a fine scheme—but it won't work.

What woman for the sake of a pair of tongs is going to tell her correct age?

And if they leave the question to a committee to decide there seems little doubt that the woman selected as the winner will angrily repudiate the verdict.

In fact, the society will be lucky if they avoid a libel action.

Competitions that seek to discover the age of a large number of representatives of the fair sex are doomed to failure.

The "female of the species" may not be able to keep secrets as a general rule, but there is one outstanding exception.

She is rarely known to admit her own age.

The Colborne and Haldimand directors are enterprising enough, but their knowledge of the fair sex does not correspond with their general executive ability.

They could easily find the oldest clean-shaven man on the grounds, but the oldest woman with bobbed hair—never.

LIFE IN RUSSIA.

Col. Mackie, who at one time served North Renfrew as their spokesman in the House of Commons and has had a somewhat romantic and adventurous career since the Armistice in connection with relief work in Russia, Montenegro and other countries of Europe, recently returned to his home after a long tour abroad.

Col. Mackie has been telling the people of Renfrew of the wonderful recovery of Moscow, with its "two thousand stores carrying splendid stocks." He has been warming the hearts of his friends with his tales of Russian life and his praise for "its administrators who regard the industrial life of Russia as their religion and will not allow it to be exploited for big profits by the traders."

"Law and order in Russia is equal, if not superior, to that prevailing in other nations," he declares, "and if the Anglo-Russian treaty recently signed in London is ratified by the British Parliament the recuperation of Russia is assured." In view of the fact that this amazing agreement provides for the issuing of a huge international loan, it is not surprising that the upholders of that treaty see in its ratification the recuperation of Russia and the prosperity of its people.

* * * *

It was in singularly bad taste for the newspapers that gave prominence to the man who has been employed for so many months in works of charity and benevolence, to print in another column of the same issue the cabled report from Moscow that Russia is facing the worst famine in her history, that hundreds are dying of starvation, abandoning their holdings in despair and facing the most terrible winter which the country has ever passed through.

Moreover, the official facts and figures of the conditions in Russia scarcely indicate that the country is the workers' paradise which some of its sympathizers claim it to be. One of the latter group, Mr. Farbman, has been describing conditions in Russia to a sympathetic audience at the Independent Labor Party's summer school in England. He does not paint the picture in anything like the glowing colors of Col. Mackie.

On the authority of Mr. Farbman, the Russian workman, far from having profited by the revolution, is now only receiving three-fifths of his prewar wages when he is employed at all. In the iron and steel trades, the mines and the transport industry (about which the Colonel enthuses) the Russian worker receives less than one-half of the wage he did under the Czarist regime, according to Mr. Farbman, who quotes from official figures of the Izvestia. It might have been expected that the ideal Socialistic state would at least have solved the question of unemployment; but, from official figures again, it is proved that out of an artisan population of somewhat less than 10,000,000 persons, the number of unemployed in April last reached the astounding figure of 1,358,000, half of them being trades unionists. The Socialist doctrinaires would do well to study the fact that instead of giving subsistence in full to all the unemployed, the skilled worker gets only half his normal wage as subsistence allowance and the unskilled gets one-third. The workers, even when employed and given the privileges of free train rides and cheap housing, must find it difficult to keep body and soul together under the shadow of the Kremlin.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Judging from Premier Ferguson, it is not going to be "Government control as they have it in Quebec" anyway.

Gasoline gets cheaper just as the need for it falls off, while coal takes a jump in price. It was ever thus.

Hon. P. C. Larkin declares that the next ten years will be the most prosperous in Canada's history. Let us hope that Mr. Larkin is as good a prophet as he has been a High Commissioner.

The plebiscite questions are clear enough. People who want prohibition will, of course, vote "yes" on the first question and "no" on the second, while those who want liquor as a beverage simply have to reverse his procedure.

The Prince of Wales was cheered at the international polo game. He was the only English product in evidence there that earned a cheer, judging by the score.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 15—Export buying and reduced estimates of yield in Canada did a good deal to-day to send the wheat values up. About 1,500,000 bushels were said to have been taken by foreign interests. Closing quotations in wheat were strong at 1-2to 2 5-8 net advance with December 1.34 1-4 to 1.34 3-8 and May 1.40 7-8 to 141. Corn finished 3-8 to 7-8 down, oats at 1-4 decline to 1-2 gain and provisions unchanged to 25c lower. Highest prices to-day in the wheat market reached just before business ended were in contrast with guesses that Canadian crop figures to be issued to-night would show a total yield of about 250,000,000 bushels for the three prairie provinces as against 267,000,000 bushels according to the last government estimate.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Sept. 15. — There was a general good enquiry from the United Kingdom and continental buyers for all lines of grain in the Montreal market and a very fair amount of business was done. A moderate amount of business was done on spot, there being a steady demand from exporters for supplies. The trade in carloads of oats was reported quiet.

There were no new developments in the local flour situation to-day, but the undertone was firm for spring wheat grades, with a fair amount of business passing with the United Kingdom and the continent.

The trade for domestic account quiet.

A fair amount of trade continues to be done in winter wheat flour and prices were well maintained. The demand for white corn flour was small and a firm feeling prevailed in the market.

A steady feeling prevailed in the market for all lines of millfeed, and prices showed no change. There was no change in the condition for baled hay to-day, prices being steady with a fair trade.

A very firm feeling prevailed in the local market for eggs and prices showed no important change.

A weaker feeling developed in the butter market to-day and prices were reduced 1-4 cent to 1-2 cent per pound, the volume of business was small. Prices moved up 1-4 cent per pound in the local cheese section on all top grades. This is due to the improved demand from English importers.

STERLING RATES

MONTREAL, Sept. 15.— Sterling Exchange rates were quoted here to-day as follows: Sterling demand 4.46 1-2; cables 4.46 7-8.

CHICAGO LIVESTOCK

CHICAGO, Sept. 15. — Cattle receipts 29,000. In between grades weighty steers and lower grade fat she-stock very slow, largely 25c lower; clearance poor, many grass cows and heifers almost unsalable, fed year lings and handyweight steers about steady, little change on western grass offerings, later comprising approximately 9,000; head top handyweight steers 11.35, some 1,323 pound average 11.15, best big weight steers 11.00; bulk fat steers and yearlings 8.50 and 10.50; few weighty steers above 10.25; well finished yearlings rather numerous at 10.50 and 11.00; mixed yearlings up to 11.15, top year lings 11.25; bulk western grass steers to killers and stocker and feeder dealers 6.50 and 7.25.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Sept. 16.—There is no shortage of cattle in the country if to-day's receipts at the Union Stock Yards is any criterion. This morning's bulletin called for 378 cows, 6,697 cattle, 744 calves, 1,996 hogs and 4,108 sheep and lambs. In addition to this three were 634 cattle billed through, mostly to Rogers and Maybee for export, but about 200 of this number were sent to the country. To-day's quality of export cattle was not as good as last week when 800 head averaged $7.40 a cwt. Butchers sold in full loads of steers at $6.40 and $6.50, and in the heifers at $6.25 a cwt. This class of stuff is not too plentiful and at prices paid makes good quality beef available at attractive prices. The demand for baby beeves saw $9 to $10.50 a cwt. paid for several well finished.

Old Country market in none too good a condition Rogers & Maybee were bidding lower. The quality was not equal to that of last week, but a load which would have sold at $8 a cwt. a week ago was bought to-day at $7.80. Other loads were taken from $6.85 to $7.50 and 700 or 800 will be taken in all. Feeders were bougtht from $5.50 to $6.35 and export heifers in about the same range

Butchers' cows are holding steady and one choice top brought $5.50 and other good cows $4.25 to $4.50 a cwt. Choice butchers' heifers are scarce and worth $6.25 to $6.50, but common ones sold down to $4.25 a cwt. Export cattle are off 20 to 30 cents a cwt. to-day.

Calves did not weaken any from last week and good calves are selling at 10 1-2 and 11 cents. One top made 12 cents and many others 11 1-2 and 113-4 cents pound. Good medium calves were 9 to 9 1-2 cents and common calves 6 to 7 1-2 cents.

Lambs were at standstill and few trades were made up till noon. Packers were bidding a dollar a cwt. lower, making ewes 11 1-2 cents. A nice bunch of breeding ewes sold at 7 cents a pound. The first bunch of choice ewe lambs over the scales sold at 12 1-4 cents a drop of 25 cents a cwt. from Thursday.

Hogs closed last week at $9 to $9.15 a cwt. f.o.b. for the thick smooth .Packers bid over the week end was $8.75 a cwt., but sellers did not look for this to be effective. The unusual heavy proportions of light thin hogs coming in has caused the packers to discount them $3 a cwt. to try and stem the shipments. Bids of $9 a cwt. f.o.b. were general to-day for the thick smooth.

CANADA WOOLLENS SUFFER BY IMPORTS

Nearly 75 Per Cent. of Textiles in Use Were Imported.

That Canada's last increase in British preference made it difficult to successfully conduct the textile industry in Canada is the statement of A. O. Dawson, president Canadian Woollens, in reviewing the past year's operations. Net earnings stand at $133,552 as compared with $119,790 for the year previous. During the year the company sold its French spinning plant and also the equipment of the Standard Mill, Toronto, and took a loss of $74,218. This with interest on bank loans, less interest on investments, when deducted from net profits, leaves $37,553 to apply to reserves. Current assets stand at $1,056,782 and current liabilities $456,485 and the president states that it is the intention to put plants in proper physical condition and finances in such liquid position as to retain the full confidence of the company's bankers. He calls attention to the fact that the company is in excellent position to take advantage of improved business conditions which, it is hoped, will be noticeable in the not far distant future. Preferred dividends not having been paid for two years, the voting power at the next annual meeting will revert to preferred shareholders.

Speaking of trade conditions, Mr. Dawson says of the past year's experience:

Nearly seventy-five per cent. of the woollen goods used in this country habe been of foreign manufacture, leaving but twenty-five per cent. for the Canadian mills to compete for among themselves. This meant the necessary shut down of some mills, with a very heavy curtailment on the part of all the others, among these latter being the mills of your company.

This heavy curtailment, coupled with the low prices prevailing, prevented the making of a sufficient margin of profit to take care of overhead expenses and depreciation, and of course, shareholders received no return upon their investment to which they were justly entitled.

Russians Who Fled During Revolution Urged To Return

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—Soviet officials have taken steps designed to persuade Russians who fled during the rebolution to return to their native land. Newspapers throughout Germany have published a communication of the Soviet Embassy in Berlin to all former Russian war prisoners and others who did not take an active part in fighting the red army, inviting them to Russia. Free transportation is assured.

The Prussian Department of the Interior declares itself in sympathy with the official Soviet summons, asking the German authorities to assist all Russian subjects who wish to return.

SIDELIGHTS ON WAR IN CHINA

In its present stage the fighting which has broken out in the vicinity of Shanghai is purely a local struggle for the possession of that rich and populous city and the port through which flows close to one-third of all China's commerce. That it may be the spark which will plunge all China into a war, where its armed millions will be arrayed behind either Wu Pei-fu or Chang Tso-lin, and in comparison to which China's fighting of the last decade will be merely neighborhood quarrels, is extremely possible. If that comes, it will be a war which has never been equalled—waged with scientific engines of warfare which civilization perfected for its own recent struggle, but weilded by barbarians who still eat the hearts of their prisoners to gain courage.

The future depends on whether Masshal Wu Pei-fu, war lord of the Peking Government, shows his hand in the present struggle. The next contingency is whether Marshal Chang Tso-lin, war lord of Manchuria and Mongolia, with his capital amid the ancient glories of Mukden, will unloose the vast army he has been drilling under British, French, Italian and Russian officers for two years, come through the great wall and attempt to capture Peking and set up a new dynasty or proclaim a new president.

Such a move would start fires on all sides of Marshal Wu, or the Peking Government. Hunan and Szechwan—the latter China's largest and richest province, with a population of 60,000,000 a nation in itself—have been subdued only this last summer by the governor of Hupeh, whom Wu delegated for the task. They would smite Wu's forces on the south and west, while Dr. Sun Yat-sen, for the last twenty months busy with a local war around Canton, would hail it as the opportunity to annihilate Wu and again unify China Wu realizes all this, but he has weighed t and has triumphed over Chang. Sun and others in other years, and is ready for the fray.

Accords with Wu's Strategy.

Though the present fighting is merely between the troops of two provinces, which Marshal Wu has successfully used in adding other provinces to his string, for civil purposes called the central government and recognized by the powers as the only government of China, because Peking is its capital and the foreign legation quarters are there. Honan troops subdued Hupeh in 1923, and gave Wu the rich cities of Hankow and Wuchang, including the Hanyang arsenal. He appointed the governor of Hupeh, and this year the latter was called on to furnish the troops and finance the expeditions to subdue Hunan and Szechwan. In the latter, Wu got the Chengtu arsenal. Shanghai also has an arsenal prize.

The present skirmishing, as it starts, shows every indication of the deft hand and nimble brain of Wu Pei-fu behind the scenes. Chi Hsien-yuan, tuchun of Kiangsu, who recognizes the authority of Peking, is launching the attack on Lu Yung-hsiang, tatao of Chekiang (he renounced the military title of tuchun), who declared his province independent several years ago. When other governors have been unable to accomplish the task of subduing their neighbors which Wu assigned them, he has reenforced them with generals, troops, ammunition, funds and his own military genius. He may do the same in the present struggle.

The present attack on Shanghai also accords with part of the programme which Wu Pei-fu has been carrying out this year. His programme at the opening of the year was to bring all of China south of the great wall, leaving Chang Tso-lin north of it unmolested for another year, under his control and giving civil allegiance to Peking. Dr. Sun Yat-sen's pertinacity in Canton has kept the big province of Kwantung a "no man's land," but Wu has taken Szechwan, Hunan, Kiangsi and Fukein on its northern borders. Yunnan in the far south, under Tuchun Tang Chi-yao, also is independent, and that portion of the programme also must go over for another year.

Blot on Otherwise Perfect Chart.

However, the programme has been carried out as planned in central China, the Yangtze valley is under his control, his officials are installed in Shantung, and the cost of the decrepit navy has been foisted on its railroad, and he controls everything from the great wall south to the three southern provinces, except Chekiang province and Shanghai city. Chekiang and Shanghai stand out like a red blot on Marshal Wu's otherwise perfect shart.

They control the mouth of the Yangtze, and without them the most important link in domination of central China is lacking. Chinese soldiers will not fight in bad weather, on holidays or after dark. Only a few weeks more of balmy weather remain in this year, but by a quick campaign the trick may be accomplished. The attempt to capture Shanghai has been anticipated for months, but when it came at the eleventh hour of the waning summer it was a surprise, as has been most of Marshal Wu's moves.

Shanghai has been a sore spot for the governor of Kiangsu ever since he was appointed to office by Peking. Shanghai is in Kiangsu province, but instead of being under the control of Nanking, the capital of that province, it is under Hangchow, the capital of Chekiang. Nanking is 201 miles up the Yangtze from Shanghai, eight hours by train and thirty by steamer, while Hangchow is only three hours by train or automobile. However, politics, not distance, has separated the greatest commercial city of China from the capital of its own province. The defence commissioner of Shanghai, the most important official in the City, is appointed by the governor of Chekiang, a system which survives from the old Anfu party days when Tuan Chi-jui was the power in Peking.

Crisis in Assassination.

Less than a year ago the effort of Kiangsu to get control of the metropolis within its own border came to a crisis when the defence commissioner was assassinated and a successor was to be appointed. Each governor named a man. The one from Nanking did not risk his ribs by going to Shanghai. However, there were many proclamations, much citing of legal opinions and calling names behind official backs, and Peking even attempted to involve the foreign diplomatic corps in the controversy. The new appointee of the Chekiang governor took office in the leading city of the neighboring province and Shanghai seemed to want it that way.

The controversy flared up again, as was told at the time, when Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, the American minister, stopped in Shanghai in January and went out to call on Tatao Lu Yung-hsiang at Hangchow, though, being an independent governor, he was not recognized by the powers. At that time the various provinces were imposing consumer taxes on cigarette smokers. The representative of a British tobacco company, who was instrumental in arranging the call, was also the representative of the governor of Kiangsu, and Dr. Schurman, possibly under the impression that the independent governor, and not the Kiangsu governor as well, was imposing the tax, indicated that the powers would demand that Peking take measures to prevent its collection. This was interpreted by many as sanction by the powers to the launching of a war on Chekiang, and it has been used as a justification for the present conflict, though the recent protest of the powers has shown no such result was intended.

Tells of Railways in Region.

The railroad roughly parallels the Yangtze between Shanghai and Nanking. Shanghai is on the Whangpo, which joins the larger river a few miles down at Woosung, where forts and an arsenal are located. The railroad cuts across the little peninsula and continues westward through miles of fertile valley. Hangchow is on a smaller branch line to the southwest. Nanking is the terminal of the main line. On the opposite bank of the Yangtze is Pukow, whence passengers, baggage and freight are ferried to continue over the Tientsin-Pukow line to Tientsin and thence over the Peking-Mukden line to the capital. There is also a daily steamer service between Tientsin and Shanghai. The fighting now is along the main line a few miles from Shanghai. If Fukein province province joins in, its troops will attack south of Hangchow.

Every influence is undoubtedly being used to bring Chang Tso-lin into the fray. Chang and Wu joined forces in 1920 and ousted Tuan Chi-jui and the Anfu clique from Peking. For a year the puppets which the two war lords put into office were recognized as the government of China, and then the leaders were at war. Chang was defeated on the plains south of Peking in 1922, and his broken army fled back north of the great wall.

Since then he has been developing the vast steppes of which he is master, storing the gold in his Manchurian banks, building up an army, manufacturing poison gas, airplanes, Stokes mortars, artillery, ammunition and rifles with foreign experts doing the instructing. Wu Pei-fu has been going ahead on a similar scale for the struggle which they consider inevitable. When I saw Chang last spring, he said that this struggle would come this year. Wu, when seen a few months earlier, was more optimistic. He may have precipitated it by the attack on Shanghai.

Tuan Ch'-jui a Real Power.

The aged Tuan Chi-jui, though retired from politics and solacing his years by studying Buddhism in his home in the foreign concession in Tientsin, is not a power to be ignored. The governor of Chekiang is his protege. It is certain that his message to Chang will be that now is the time to strike before his rival adds the immense wealth of Shanghai and another arsenal to his resources. Dr. Sun will add the same, as months ago he announced the consolidated government of China, which included the present line-up against Marshal Wu.

Foreign and Chinese business in Shanghai will be seriously hurt as long as the troubles continue near the city, and it has been largely through their influence and protests that it was averted on previous occasions. While the port of Shanghai, being on the Whangpo, will be open to ocean commerce, its communication with the interior, on which its trade depends, will be broken by the fighting on Yangtze and railroad. The only ones not depressed are the arms traffickers, and they envision fortunes as the international embargo is harder to enforce than preventing rum running.

Shanghai has a Chinese city of nearly 2,000,000, but its chief interests to the outside world are the portions of it known as the international settlement, which includes American, British, Japanese and others, and the French concession, which is as its name indicates. They have their own governments. They also have their defence corps, infantry, cavalry and artillery. An additional protection for the foreigners in case hostilities reached the borders of the city, would be from the crews of the foreign warships which are mobilized in the harbor, the Whangpo River. They are believed able not only to defend the city from invasion, but the warships anchored in the river could reply in case stray shots from the attackers endangered lives.

THE ONCE-OVER

By B. I. PHILLIPS

THE PRINCE WRITES A LETTER HOME

(The Prince of Wales took time today to write a letter to his mother.—News item).

Dear Ma:—I am now in my second week of the Battle of Long Island. The fighting has been very severe and I doubt if I can hold out much longer. I am now surrounded. Several new batteries of moving picture men were brought up during the night and are subjecting me to a steady fire. On my right the 86th Division of American Newspaper Correspondents, known as the All Brass Division, are preparing for a new onslaught. On my left, a little to the right of Cosdan Hill, there is a strong detachment of Rotarians, Businessmen and Boosters shelling me with a continuous fire of invitations to open food shows, dedicate new drinking fountains, review Moose parades, act as one of the judges at the Hohokus Dahlia Exhibition, etc.

Directly ahead of me there is a very suspicious movement in the heavy woods. My scouts inform me this sector is strongly held by several thousand determined women whose battle cry is "Up girls and at him."

"I have had a rubber stamp made of my signature and intend to fight it out on that autograph if it takes all winter.

In my rear there is a large force of marriageable young ladies. They take the attitude that they have but one life to give for their title. They are preparing for a sharp attack and I can hear their jazz orchestras sounding the call for the advance. If I am taken prisoner it will mean a long term at hard dancing. But I shall never yield to those who don't the new steps.

My back is to the wallflower! I had supposed Long Island was a friendly country. Have papa look up and place the responsibility for giving us this false information. I had no sooner landed than I was set upon and dragged from dinner party to dinner party, house party to house party, lawn fete to lawn fete and dance to dance. No mercy was shown. It was an eye for an eye and a waltz for a waltz.

I have just received several offers of mercy. One of them agrees to cease firing if I will consent to open the Sappville Automobile Show. Another offers to make peace if I will attend a christening of triplets in the Bronx. Another agrees to stop hostilities if I will accept an invitation to be an honorary pall bearer at the funeral of Josephus Wham, the oldest member of the Woodmen of the World.

Tell father to pray for me and to see if he can't do something to make the world safe for travelling men and to protect the rights of small princes.

Your loving son,
Edward.

P.S.—Two brigades of camera men have just broken through my outer defenses and have men at their mercy. They are demanding that I pose for a series of 23,000 newspaper and movie-weekly pictures, jumping through paper hoops, standing upside down in a jar of ferns, sitting in a saxaphone player's lap, and eating an English mutton chop while playing a chukker of polo. I am carrying on.

EMPEROR TUNES IN ON RADIO.

TOKIO, Sept. 16.—Radio is supplying the emperor and empress of Japan, spending the summer at the imperial villa at Nikko, with the news of the world. Daily reports are sent to their summer residence by apparatus installed in the imperial palace grounds in Tokio.

Radio communication has been established also between the palace in Tokio and Okinajima in Fukushima prefecture, where the prince regent and crown princess are spending the hot season.

THE VITAL QUESTION

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.— (United Press).—To bob or not to bob is still a vital question wherever a few women are gathered together, but the trying shingle bob is on its way out, according to Miss Emily Lloyd, beauty expert.

"Shingle bobs are notoriously unbecoming to many women," Miss Lloyd said, "and are utterly out of place for evening or afternoon wear. In France the woman with bobbed hair wears a postiche or transformation, swirls, curls,—some sort of artificial arrangement at night. The shingle bob is not seen in Paris at all."

MEXICO MINUS MANY MILLIONS

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 16.—The sum of 23,000,000 pesos appears in red ink on the government's books, says a statement by the treasury department, and is composed of uncollected sums due for customs and other federal duties. The department announces that a program of reforms is being studied, both with the object of collecting what is now overdue and preventing future bad accounts.

TWO DEAD UNDER CAR.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 16.—(Canadian Press).—Edward Gorge, of St. Agathe, and Ovide Robert, of Aubiny, were found dead under an overturned automobile on Jefferson Highway south of Winnipeg yesterday morning. Marks showed the car swerved into the ditch and upset.

In every cup of happiness you will find a tincture of bitterness, so expect it and not be disappointed.

KAISER'S ALLOWANCE

$11,900 a Month for All Members of Hohenzollern Family.

BERLIN, Germany, September 16.—Former Emperor William has been enjoying a monthly drawing account of 50,000 gold marks ($11,900) since January 1, 1924, with which he was expected to support himself, his wife and his five sons and their families, his brother, Prince Henry, and his cousin, Prince Friederich Leopold.

As now constituted the Hohenzollern familyy comprises about 40 head, all of whom will share in the final settlement to be effected with the former ruling house.

The issue which has been stubbornly fought between both parties during the last five years is now entering upon its final stages. The process of inventorying the variegated holdings of the Hohenzollerns has sufficiently progressed to enable the Prussian minister of finance to issue an elaborate statement in which is recaptulated the progress of the temporary settlements reached to date, and the moot points which are awaiting adjudication.

Up to May, 1920, Prussia had turned over to the former emperor out of the proceeds of his private exchequer the sum of 32,000,000 marks.

WHITE RACE MENACED

Eight causes of racial hatred are discussed by Professor William McDougall of Harvard University. Here they are:

One.—Expansion of population.
Two.—Sex jealousy.
Three.—The assertion or expression of a claim of superiority, associated with race pride.
Four.—The claim of political ascendancy.
Five.—Differences of religious belief.
Six.—Economic rivalry, or exploitation of situations leading to slavery.
Seven.—Nationalism (patriotism).
Eight.—Desire to defend a national culture against disintegration.

It stands to reason that there wouldn't be any racial antagonism to speak of, if every race had for each of its individual members as much wealth, freedom, intelligence and geographical desirability (including land acreage and fertility) as the individual of other races.

So-called racial antagonism is a highbrow name for jealousy. The supremacy of the white race is menaced because the white race has cornered more than its numerical share of humanity's natural resources, intelligence and desirable climate.

Higher scientists of the white race are worried about the world's constantly increasing population. The more population, the more people to envy white possessions. Asiatic yellow and brown races and the black race in Africa are multiplying much faster than whites. The white man, incidentally, in increasing the numerical strength of his rivals by sending millions of dollars and medical brains to curb disease which for centuries has destroyed a large part of the colored races' over-population.

Whether the white race, in this humanitarian way, is sowing the seeds of its own destruction, time will show. Even more important than the life-saving is that we—in our desire for foreign markets—are raising rival races to a standard of living beyond what can be supplied by their own acreage and natural resources.

However, nature's law of the survival of the fittest is not going to be repealed.

BOOK REVIEW

"Sound and Fury" Story of Newspaper Man's Ascent —New Locke Novel.

The literary market is picking up. Uneffected by the vacillations of the political world, the stock and bond tables, and other artifices which control most markets, our writers have gone ahead concentrating on the business of life. And their product has been real and earnest.

Leastwise, such is the tendency evinced by several first time novels which have reached this reviewing stand about the same time.

* * *

First comes "Sound and Fury" (Knopf) from the typewriter of James Henle, a young man who made a success as a newspaper reporter, then went into magazine editing, and now stands ready to take his place with the foremost of contemporary American novelists.

His book shows the effect of both newspaper training and the Sinclair Lewis Main Street writing. Its style is one of ease and simplicity, without any affectation of labored form.

It is a true report of the effect of life upon a remarkable character—one Goody Guthrie, a "boy who was afraid of nothing," but who grew, tamed when married and settled down in a real Main Street town. But it was only a dormant lapse. The legend which has been created by him as a boy, re-established itself and carried him on to his end.

Occasionally a bit staccato, the theme is sustained with few flat notes or discordances. The end is a bit hurried. But that probably is due to the impatience of youth, rather than to any fundamental weakness.

If his first novel is not a flash in the pan, Henle is a comer—who will come along so fast that some of his elders will be left gasping.

* * *

Differing from Henle in style, method and type of protagonist, Walter Gilkyson, another first-timer, has written "Oil" (Scribner's). Here the principal character is not an individual but an industry.

The treatment is heavy in an attempt to develop a vigor. The latter is there, but it is crude.

With more experience in writing, Gilkyson undoubtedly will develop more subtlety. But, although this is lacking, his story is good enough to be absorbing. And that, after all, is the chief demand made by many readers.

"Wings" (Knopf), the second novel of Ethel M. Kelley, is the study of three women who influence the life of a poet who is almost a genius—the one he loves, the one he marries, and the one who loves him.

They are not simple souls, but in 200 pages they are absolutely revealed to you because the author understands them so thoroughly herself.

Miss Kelley is working herself into the class with Willa Cather and Edith Wharton. Here is a typical bit of description:

"She has beauty of the sort that comes from within, despite her features, which were mostly bad. She radiated a kind of tortured fire that did not warm him . . . a New England fire. . . . She was like a New England room, now he thought of it . . . the kind they heated with a base burner . . . a glowing fire at the heart of it that did not take the chill out of the corners."

* * *

To read a new Locke novel is to meet at least one old friend who, for some reason, has changed his name; grown a mustache, perhaps, or has dyed his gray hair.

But you say to yourself, "I've seen him some place before. Now, where was it?"

Thus it is in "The Coming of Amos" (Dodd, Mead), latest from the ever-productive William J. Locke. There is the usual "beloved" character, the smooth flow of polite social goings on; a gentleman or two who take honor with the seriousness of the chivalric age; some persons of title who make light conversation and a writing style that is both gracious and genial.

The realist gift Locke possesses in all probability is this capacity to write melodrama with seeming seriousness and yet with a gesture that plainly implies that he knows better, thank you; but the Dear Reader will have to accept it or leave it.

ACCUSED BENGAL HEAD OF INSULT

Governor Insulted the Womanhood of India.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Charges mad by Swarajist leaders that the Earl of Lytton, governor of Bengal, has "insulted the womanhood of India," finds no credence in England, where, it is recalled, somewhat humorously, that the earl was one of the few public men in England to stand up for the Pankhurst "suffragettes" in the old pre-war days. The press finds it hard to believe that a man with the strong convictions of the Earl of Lytton would be guilty of saying anything which could be construed, even by the most sensitive women, as an "insult."

Nevertheless, dispatches from India describe mass-meetings in Calcutta attended by 50,000 people demanding the recall of the governor for his alleged slander upon the womanhood of India. What the slander was is not stated, nor has the Governor replied to the attacks. Speeches were made by Mrs. Naidu, the poet; C. R. Das, and Motilal Nehru, floor leader of the opposition in the legislative assembly. One of the leading Swarajist newspapers proposes a boycott of all public assemblages in which the Governor appears:

"Let the people take a solemn vow that they will boycott all functions, social and political, in which Lord Lytton takes part, and express their unflinching determination to end a state of things under which the entire nation can be abused and insulted by its ruler with impunity."

The India Office here professes to think that the Governor will safely ride out of the storm.

Ever buy a wooden nutmeg?

A HUCKSTER stopped at Grandmother's door. "Any nutmegs today, lady?"

In the tray before him he displayed his wares—big, beautiful nutmegs, and at a ridiculously low price.

Being fond of nutmeg's spicy flavor and seeing an opportunity to stock up on them to advantage, Grandmother bought generously.

There was to be rice pudding for supper. Grandmother took the golden-brown beauty from the oven and prepared to give it its finishing touch—a sprinkling of nutmeg. Out came the grater and one of the new nutmegs. She scraped and looked puzzled. Scraped again, and looked closer. Sawdust!! The nutmegs were made of wood.

How far from such methods we have traveled in these days of advertised merchandise. The merchant of today signs his name to what he says about what he sells. He knows that when you come to buy you will expect the goods in his store to be what he has said. He knows that if he deceives you once, your trade is gone for ever.

Wooden nutmegs never could have been advertised.

61 AND RICH, SHE SUES BOY MATE

Wealthiest Woman on Chicago's North Shore Charges Cruelty and Desertion.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Mrs. Sara V. Brown Deynzer, the North Shore's richest woman, who at fifty-eight married a twenty-six-year-old bond salesman named John George Deynzer, toady filed suit for divorce.

In their three years together, Mrs. Deynzer says, there were two years of bliss, and the last year has been peppered with kicks and beatings, pinches and various other forms of cruelty, winding up with desertion.

Mrs. Deynzer's friends were surprised. A divorce is the most ordinary thing she ever has asked for. She has acquired a reputation for startling acquisitions. She had a Persian pink limousine with gold door knobs.

She has a houseboat worth $35,000, named "Driftwood," on which she took her first honeymoon. She has a six-acre estate in Evanston called "Windeknowe", and her home is filled with wonders.

Says Husband Shot At Her.

The bill, filed by her attorney, Malcolm Sterritt, says that Mrs. Deynzer was shot at by her husband, the bullett barely missing her head.

Mr. Deynzer's story is different. Their first quarrel came, he says, when he refused to drive down the street in what he called "that outrage." He meant the Persian pink limousine.

He has retained Attorney Charles Erbstein and is ready to fight.

According to Deynzer, who is treasurer of the Great Lakes Candy Company, last Friday morning he went to the garage to get his car and drive to work. He found the car locked. He lifted a chair and shattered the car window. As he was about to crawl in, he says, his wife's daughter and her husband confronted him. The wife with a tomahawk and her husband with a revolver. Deynzer said:

"I said I'd leave, that they had me. Now she says I deserted. That's how I did it."

Car Gift From Wife.

The limousine in which he tried to drive to work last Friday morning, when the fight in the garage ensued, was the gift of his wife to young Deynzer two years ago.

Deynzer, who appears nervous says that he is a wreck from his matrimonial experiences and doesn't mind leaving home to be at peace with the world, but he will not be accused of cruelty without a fight. His pet name for his wife was "Cookie."

FAMILIES SMALLER

Results of Study in the Central United States.

In a study based on the results of questionnaires mailed to native-born American families throughout the Middle West, of the United States, many of whom were reached through students at the University of Wisconsin, which included some 750 families of a generation ago and 2,500 families of their descendants in this generation, the biggest thing found was that among Americans of native parentage belonging to the middle class in the Central United States, the shrinkage in family size between the present generation and their parents is 38 1-2 cent. The results of this study are published in a monograph just issued by Professor E. A. Ross of the sociology department of the University of Wisconsin, assisted by Miss Jeanette Halverson, also of the university.

The present generation averages but 2.8 children per couple, which is about one child of what they should have in order to replace themselves. It is significant also that 13 per cent. of the unions were barren, while nearly 18 per cent of them have produced but one child.

It is a population study that has ascended from families with parents still living to the families of their parents, and not only among college graduates but among the educated and occupatonal groups.

"Thus we have eliminated the factor of difference in family tradition and have left chiefly change in conditions and the spirit of the times," the investigators declare. An independent study was conducted by Miss Halverson among 100 dependent families and it was found that they raise an average of six and one half children each.

What's Best for a Bad Stomach?

Nine-tenths of all stomach trouble—indigestion, sourness, gas, pain, heartburn, etc., are caused by an excess of acid in the stomach.

Artificial digestents, such as pepsin, are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids, and instead neutralize the acid that has upset your stomach with a spoonful or two tablets of pure Bisurated Magnesia, taken with a little water. This instantly sweetens the stomach and stops the pain and discomfort and your food digests as nature intended. For quick positive relief from Acid Stomach

"The Store of Smiling Service"

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Sermon on Temperance Issue at St. Andrew's Church on Sunday.

OTHER NEWS

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 15—The first temperance sermon in the coming campaign for the plebiscite vote was preached in St. Andrew's church last night by the pastor, Rev. C. F. McIntosh, who selected as his text the ninth verse of the eighth chapter of First Corinthians: "But take heed lest by any means this liberty of yours become a stumbling block to them that are weak."

One of the arguments advanced by the speaker was that the State has the right to curtail the liberty of the individual in order to advance the general good and his conclusion was that it was the duty of Christian people to support prohibition when the vote was taken. He submitted figures to show the number of arrests for drunkness had decreased under the Ontario Temperance Act.

Social Evening.

A social evening will be held in the school room of St. Andrew's Church on Thursday to give the people of the congregation and others an opportunity to meet the missionaries from Formosa, Rev. and Mrs. G. Williams. Mr. Williams is maintained in the foreign misson field solely by the people of St. Andrews, but he and his family returned to their native land last spring on sick leave and have spent the summer at Mr. Williams former home near Woodstock. This is the first time since his return to Canada that his health has permitted him to visit Campbellford. He will deliver an address on his work at the gathering Thursday evening and will exhibit a number of curios from Formosa.

Mrs. Williams will speak to the Sunday School children on Friday afternoon and the ladies of the congregation on Saturday, mission work to be the theme of her address on both occasions.

Organist From Kincardine.

H. M. Paton, organist and choir leader of Knox Church, Kincardine, conducted the musical service here yesterday as he is an applicant for the vacant position. Mr. Paton is highly recommended and his services here yesterday were highly appreciated. After the evening service he gave an organ recital, his programme consisting of a number of classic selections from sacred music.

Testing the Gravel.

When R. McVicar, engineer for the Provincial Highway Department, was here last week he inspected the repair work which is being done on the bridge. The gravel required for the cement work was purchased by the contractor from Councillor Henry Redden and has been delivered. Mr. McVicar submitted the gravel to a test and announced that it contained too high a percentage of clay and sand. It is understood that he will so report to the Government.

Mr. Redden is gathering evidence to combat this finding. He says the gravel came from the same pit and was subject to the same process as that which he recently furnished to the Hydro Commission for the construction of the two new power houses and that no complaint of the quality of the material was ever made. He will serve, he says, a written statement from the Hydro engineer to this effect.

Warden W. M. Fowlds of Hastings and George Green, County Highway Superintendent, were here Saturday to look over the work being done.

Thomas Crawford has been appointed resident inspector and he will be on duty constantly until the contract is completed.

Social Notes.

A very enjoyable evening was spent at the home of Miss Ethel Bedford, River Road, on Thursday night, when the Christ Church choir and friends about thirty-five in all met at her home in Seymour for a corn feed.

The evening was spent in playing games and enjoying the abundance of corn. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Miss Bedford for her hospitality to the choir and at the close of the evening all sang "Auld Lang Syne" and "She's a jolly good fellow."

Moscow Cabarets Dull With Profiteers In Exile

MOSCOW, Sept. 16.—The wholesale deportation to Siberia and the north of profiteers and others, has had a bad effect on the Russian restaurants and night-life resorts. Whereas a year ago Moscow was as gay with smart restaurants, cabarets and cafes as the liveliest American city, it is today as dull and depressing as a New England village on a Blue Sunday.

It is not an uncommon sight nowadays to find more waiters in a Moscow restaurant than actual patrons. This is due partly to the disappearance of the profiteers, who were the most regular and liberal frequenters of the restaurants, and partly to a fear on the part of those left behind that they may share a like fate if they give evidence of having sufficient money to patronize the more expensive eating places.

After partaking of expensive repasts at Moscow's best restaurants, Russian business and professional men have undergone the experience of being cross examined by police officers as to how they came into possession of sufficient money to patronize such extravagant caravanseries.

That done, it besought her to lay the whole matter before the Queen, and thus secure him facilty to return to England and immunity from any consequences of his subsequent renegade act to which his sufferings had driven him. He loaded the young Cornishman with gifts, gave him that letter to deliver in person, and added instructions that should enable him to find the document he was to deliver with it. That precious parchment had been left between the leaves of an old book on falconry in the library at Penarrow, where it would probably be found still undisturbed since his brother would not suspect its presence and was himself no scholar. Pitt was to seek out old Nicholas at Penarrow and enlist his aid to obtain possession of that document, if it still existed.

Then Sakr-el-Bahr found means to conduct Pitt to Genoa, and there put him aboard an English vessel.

Three months later he received an answer—a letter from Pitt, which reached him by way of Genoa—which was at peace with the Algerines, and served them as a channel of communication with Christianity. In this letter Pitt informed him that he had done all that Sir Oliver had desired him; that he had found the document by the help of Nicholas, and that in person he had waited upon Mistress Rosamund Godolphin, who dwelt now with Sir John Killigrew at Arwenack, delivering to her the letter and the parchment; but that, upon learning on whose behalf he came, she had in his presence flung both unopened upon the fire and dismissed him with his tale untold.

Sakr-el-Bahr spent the night under the skies in his fragrant orchard, and his slaves reported in terror that they had heard sobs and weeping. If indeed his heart wept, it was for the last time; thereafter he was more inscrutable, more ruthless, cruel and mocking than men had ever known him; nor, from that day, did he ever again concern himself to manumit a single English slave. His heart was become a stone.

Thus five years passed counting from that spring night when he was trepanned by Jasper Leigh, and his fame spread his name became a terror upon the seas, and fleets put forth from Malta, from Naples, and from Venice to make an end of him and his ruthless piracy. But Allah kept watch over him, and Sakr-el-Bahr never delivered battle but he wrested victory to the scimitars of Islam.

Then in the Spring of that fifth year there came to him another letter from the Cornish Pitt, a letter which showed him that gratitude was not as dead in the world as he supposed it, for it was purely out of gratitude that the lad whom he had delivered from thraldom wrote to inform him of certain matters that concerned him. This letter reopened that old wound; it did more—it dealt him a fresh one. He learned from it that the writer had been constrained by Sir John Killigrew to give such evidence of Sir Oliver's conversion to Islam as had enabled the courts to pronounce Sir Oliver as one to be presumed dead at law granting the succession to his half-brother, Master Lionel Tressilian. Pitt professed himself deeply mortified at having been forced unwittingly to make Sir Oliver so evil a return for the benefits received from him, and added that sooner would he have suffered them to hang him than have spoken could he have foreseen the consequences of his testimony.

So far, Sir Oliver read unmoved by any feeling other than cold contempt. But there was more to follow. The letter went on to tell him that Mistress Rosamund was newly returned from a two years' sojourn in France to become betrothed to his half-brother, Lionel, and that they were to be wed in June. He was further informed that the marriage had been contrived by Sir John Killigrew in his desire to see Rosamund settled and under the protection of a husband, since he himself was proposing to take the seas and was fitting out a fine ship for a voyage to the Indies. The writer added that the marriage was widely approved and was deemed to be an excellent measure for both houses, since it would weld into one the two contiguous estates of Penarrow and Godolphin Court.

Oliver-Reis laughed when he had read thus far. The marriage was approved not for itself, it would seem, but because by means of it two stretches of earth were united into one. It was a marriage of two parks, of two estates, of two tracts of arable and forest, and that two human beings were concerned in it was apparently no more than an incidental circumstance.

Then the irony of it all entered his soul and spread it with bitterness. After dismissing him for the supposed murder of her brother she was to take the actual murderer to her arms. And he—that cur, that false villain—out of what depths of hell did he derive the courage to go through with this mummery? Had he no heart, no conscience, no sense of decency, no fear of God?

He tore the letter into fragments and set about effacing the matter from his thoughts. Pitt had meant kindly by him, but had dealt cruelly. In his efforts to seek distraction from the torturing images ever in his mind he took to the sea with three galleys, and thus some two weeks later came face to face with Master Jasper Leigh aboard the Spanish carack which he captured under Cape Spartel.

CHAPTER XI
HOMEWARD BOUND

In the cabin of the captured Spaniard Jasper Leigh found himself that evening face to face with Sakr-el-Bahr, haled thither by the corsair's gigantic Nubians.

Sakr-el-Bahr had not yet pronounced his intentions concerning the piratical little skipper, and Master Leigh, full conscious that he was a villain, feared the worst and had spent some miserable hours in the forecastle awaiting a doom which he accounted foregone.

"Our positions have changed, Master Leigh, since last we talked in a ship's cabin," was the renegade's inscrutable greeting.

"Indeed," Master Leigh agreed. "But I hope ye'll remember that on that occasion I was your friend."

"At a price," Sakr-el-Bahr reminded him. "And at a price you may find me your friend to-day."

The rascally skipper's heart leaped with hope.

"Name it, Sir Oliver," he answered eagerly. "And so that it lies within my wretched power I swear I'll never boggle at it. I've had enough of slavery," he ran on in a plaintive whine. "Five years of it, and four of them spent aboard the galleys of Spain, and no day in all of them but I prayed for death. Did you but know what I ha' suffered."

"Never was suffering more merited, never punishment more fitting, never justice more poetic," said Sakr-el-Bahr in a voice that made the skipper's blood run cold. "You would have sold me, a man who did you no hurt; indeed, a man who once befriended you—you would have sold me into slavery for a matter of two hundred pounds"——

"Nay, nay," cried the other fearfully, "as God's my witness 'twas never part of my intent. Ye'll never ha' forgot the words I spoke to you, the offer that I made to carry you back home again."

"Aye, at a price, 'tis true," Sakr-el-Bahr repeated. "And it is fortunate for you that you are to-day in a position to pay a price that should postpone your dirty neck's acquaintance with a rope. I meeed a navigator," he added in explanation, "and what five years ago you would have done for two hundred pounds you shall do to-day for your life. How say you, will you navigate this ship for me?"

"Sir," cried Jasper Leigh, who could scarce believe that this was all that was required of him, "I'll sail it to hell at your bidding."

"I am not for Spain this voyage," answered Sakr-el-Bahr. "You shall me precisely as you would have done five years ago—back to the mouth of the Fal and set me ashore there. Is that agreed?"

"Aye, and gladly," replied Master Leigh without a second's pause.

"The conditions are that you shall have your life and your liberty," Sake-el-Bahr explained. "But do not suppose that arrived in England you are to be permitted to depart. You must sail us back again;though once you have done that I shall find a way to send you home if you so desire it, and perhaps there will be some measure of reward for you if you serve me faithfully throughout. Follow the habits of a lifetime by playing me false and there's an end to you. You shall have for constant bodyguard these two lilies of the desert," and he pointed to the colossal Nubians who stood there invisible almost in the shadow but for the flash of teeth and eyeballs.

"They shall watch over you and see that no harm befalls you so long as you are honest with me, and they shall strangle you at the first sign of treachery. You may go. You have the freedom of the ship, but you are not to leave it here or elsewhere save at my express command."

Jasper Leigh stumbled out, counting himself fortunate beyond his expectations or deserts, and the Nubians followed him and hung behind him ever after like some vast twin shadow.

To Sakr-el-Bahr entered now Biskaine with the report of the prize captured. Beyond the prisoners, however, and the actual vessel, which had suffered nothing in the fight, the cargó was of no account. Outward bound as she was, it was not to be expected that any treasures would be discovered in her hold. They found great store of armaments and powder and a little money; but naught else that was worthy of the corsairs' attention.

Sakr-el-Bahr briefly issued his surprising orders.

"Thou'lt set the captives aboard one of the galleys, Biskaine, and thyself convey them to Algiers, there to be sold. All else thou'lt leave aboard here, and two hundred picked corsairs to go a voyage with me overseas, men that will act at once as marines and fighters."

"Art thou, then, not returning to Algiers, O Sakr-el-Bahr?"

"Not yet, I am for a longer voyage. Convey my service to Asad-ed-Din, Whom Allah guard and cherish, and tell him to look for me in some six weeks' time."

This sudden resolve of Oliver-Reis created no little excitement aboard the galleys. The corsairs knew nothing of navigation upon the open seas, none of them had ever been beyond the Mediterranean, few of them, indeed, had ever voyaged as far west as Cape Spartel, and it is doubtful if they would have followed any other leader into the perils of the open Atlantic. But Sakr-el-Bahr, the child of Fortune, the protected of Allah had never yet led them to aught but victory, and he had but to call them to heel and they would troop after him whithersoever he should think well to go. So now there was little trouble in finding the two hundred he desired for his fighting crew. Rather was the difficulty to keep the number of those eager for the adventure within the bounds he had indicated.

You are not to suppose that in al this Sir Oliver was acting upon any preconcerted plan. Whilst he had lain on the heights watching that fine ship beating up against the wind it had come to him that with such a vessel under him it were a fond adventure to sail to England, to descend upon that Cornish coast abruptly as a thunderbolt, and present the reckoning to his craven dastard of a brother. He had toyed with the fancy, dreamily almost, as men build their castles in Spain. Then in the heat of conflict it had entirely escaped his mind, to return in the shape of a resolve when he came to find himself face to face with Jasper Leigh.

The skipper and the ship conjointly provided him with all the means to realize that dream he had dreamed. There was none to oppose his will, no reason not to indulge his cruel fancy Perhaps, too, he might see Rosamund again, might compel her to hear the truth from him. And there was Sir John Killigrew. He had never been able to determine whether Sir John had been his friend or his foe in the past; but since it was Sir John who had been instrumental in settlin up Lionel in Sir Oliver's place—by inducing the courts to presume Sir Oliver's death on the score that, being a renegade, he must be accounted dead at law—and since it was Sir John who was contriving this wedding between Lione and Rosamund, why, Sir John, too, should be informed of the precise nature of the thing he did.

With the forces at his disposal in those days of his absolute lordship of life and death along the African littoral, to conceive was with Oliver-Reis no more than the prelude to execution. The habit of swift realization of his every wish had grown with him, and that habit guided now his course.

He made his preparations quickly, and on the morrow the Spanish carack lately labelled Nuestra Senora de las Llagas, but with that label carefully effaced from her quarter—trimmed her sails and stood out for the open Atlantic, navigated by Captain Jasper Leigh. The three galleys, under the command of Biskaine-el-Borak, crept slowly eastward and homeward to Algiers, hugging the coast, as was the corsair habit.

The wind favored Oliver so well that within ten days of rounding Cape St. Vincent he had his first glimpse of the Lizard.

CHAPTER XII

In the estuary of the River Fal a splendid ship, on the building of which the most cunning engineers had been employed and no money spared, rode proudly at anchor just off Smithick, under the very shadow of the heights crowned by the fine house of Arwenack. She was fitting out for a distant voyage, and for days the work of bringing stores and munitions aboard had been in progress, so that there was an unwonted bustle about the little forge and the huddle of cottages that went to make up the fishing village, as if in earnest of the great traffic that in future days was to be seen about that spot. For Sir John Killigrew seemed as last to be on the eve of prevailing and of laying there the foundations of the fine port of his dreams.

To this state of things his friendship with Master Lionel Tressilian had contributed not a little. The opposition made to his project by Sir Oliver—and supported, largely at Sir Oliver's suggestion, by Truro and Helston—had been entirely withdrawn by Lionel; more, indeed Lionel had actually gone so far in the opposite direction as to support Sir John in his representations to Parliament and the Queen. If followed naturally enough that just as Sir Oliver's opposition of that cherished project had been the seed of the hostility between Arwenack and Penarrow, so Lionel's support of it became the root of the stanch friendship that sprang up between himself and Sir John.

What Lionel lacked of his brother's keen intelligence he made up for in cunning. He realized that although at some future time it was possible that Helston and Truro and the Tressilian property there might come to suffer as a consequence of the development of a port so much more advantageously situated, yet that could not be in his own lifetime; and meanwhile he must earn in return Sir John's support for his suit of Rosamund Godolphin and thus find the Godolphin estates merged with his own. This certain immediate gain was to Master Lionel well worth the other future possible loss.

It must not, however, be supposed that Lionel's courtship had thenceforward run a smooth and easy course. The mistress of Godolphin Court showed him no favor, and it whs mainly that she might abstract herself from the importunities of his suit that she had sought and obtained Sir John Killigrew permission to accompany the latter's sister to France when she went there with her husband, who was appointed English ambassador to the Louvre. Sir John's authority as her guardian had come into force again with the decease of her brother.

Master Lionel moped awhile in her absence; but sheered by Sir John's assurance that in the end he should prevail, he quitted Cornwall in his turn and went forth to see the world. He spent some time in London about the Court, where, however, he seems to have prospered little, and then he crossed to France to pay his devoirs to the lady of his longings.

His constancy, the humility with which he made his suit, the obvious intensity of his devotion began at last to wear away that gentlewoman's opposition, as dripping water wears away a stone. Yet she could not bring herself to forget that he was Sir Oliver's brother—the brother of the man she had loved, and the brother of the man who had killed her own brother. Between them stood two things—the ghost of that old love of hers and the blood of Peter Godolphin.

Of this she reminded Sir John on her return to Cornwall after an absence of some two years, urging these matters as reasons why an alliance between herself and Lionel Tressilian must be impossible.

Sir John did not at all agree with her.

"My dear," he said, "there is your future to be thought of. You are now of full age and mistress of your own actions. Yet it is not well for a woman and a gentlewoman to dwell alone. As long as I live, or as long as I remain in England, all will be well. You may continue indefinitely your residence here at Arwenack, and you have been wise, I think, in quitting the loneliness of Godolphin Court. Yet consider that that loneliness may be yours again when I am not here."

"I should prefer that loneliness to the company you would thrust upon me," she answered him.

"Ungracious speech!" he protested. "Is this your gratitude for that lad's burning devotion, for his patience, his gentleness, and all the rest?"

"He is Oliver Tressilian's brother," she replied.

"And has he not suffered enough for that already? Is there to be no end to the price that he must pay for his brother's sins? Besides, consider that when all is said they are not even brothers. They are but half-brothers."

"Yet too closely kin," she said. "If you must have me wed I beg you'll find me another husband."

He was persistent, and his persistence was increased when he came to conceive his notion to take the seas again. His conscience would not permit him to heave anchor until he had bestowed her safely in wedlock. Lionel, too, was persistent, in a quiet, almost self-effacing way that never set a strain upon her patience, and was therefore the more difficult to combat.

In the end she gave way under the pressure of these men's wills, and did so with the best grace she could common, resolved to drive from her heart and mind the one real obstacle of which, for very shame, she had made no mention to Sir John. The fact is that in spite of all, her love for Sir Oliver was not dead. It was stricken down, it is true, until she herself failed to recognize it for what it really was. But she caught herself thinking of him frequently and wistfully; she found herself comparing him with his brother; and for all that she had bidden Sir John find her some other husband than Lionel, she knew full well that any suitor brought before her must be submitted to that same comparison to his inevitable undoing.

All this she accounted evil in herself It was in vain that she lashed her mind with the reminder that Sir Oliver was Peter's murderer. As time went on she found herself actually making excuses for her sometime lover; she would admit that Peter had driven him to the step, that for her sake Sir Oliver had suffered insult upon insult from Peter, until, being but human, the cup of his endurance had overflowed in the end, and weary of submitting to the other's blows he had risen up in his anger and smitten in his turn.

She would scorn herself for such thoughts as these, yet she could not dismiss them., In act she could be strong—as witness how she had dealt with that letter which Oliver sent her out of Barbary by the hand of Pitt—but her thoughts she could not govern, and her thoughts were full often traitors to her will. There were longings in her heart for Oliver which she could not stifle, and there was ever the hope that he would one day return, although she realized that from such a return she might look for nothing.

When Sir John finally slew the hope of that return he did a wiser thing than he conceived. Never since Oliver's disappearance had they heard any news of him until Pitt came to Arenwack with that letter and his story. They had heard, as had all the world, of the corsair Sakr-el-Bahr, but they had been far indeed from connecting him with Oliver Tressilian. Now that his identity was established by Pitt's testimony, it was an easy matter to induce the courts to account him dead and to give Lionel the coveted inheritance.

This to Rosamund was a small matter. But a great one was that Sir Oliver was dead at law, and must be so in fact, should he ever again set foot in England. It extinguished finally that curiously hopeless and almost subconscious hope of hers that one day he would return. Thus it helped her perhaps to face and accept the future which Sir John was resolved to thrust upon her.

Her betrothal was made public, and she proved if not an ardently loving, at least a docile and gentle mistress to Lionel. He was content. He could ask no more in reason at the moment, and he was buoyed up by every lover's confidence that given opportunity and time he could find the way to awaken a response. And it must be confessed that already during their betrothal he gave some proof of his reason for this confidence. She had been lonely, and he dispelled her loneliness by his complete surrender of himself to her; his restraint and his cautions, almost insidious creeping along a path, which a more clumsy fellow would have taken at a dash, made companionship possible between them and very sweet to her. Upon this foundation her affection began gradually to rise, and seeing them together and such excellent friends, Sir John congratulated himself upon his wisdom and went about the fitting out of that fine ship of his—the Silver Heron—for the coming voyage.

Thus they came within a week of the wedding, and Sir John was all impatience now. The marriage bells were to be his signal for departure; as they fell silent the Silver Heron should spread her wings.

It was the evening of the first of June; the peal of the curfew had faded on the air and lights were being set in the great dining-room at Arwenack where the company was to sup. It was a small party. Just Sir John and Rosamund with Lionel, who had lingered on that day, and Lord Henry Goade, the Queen's Lieutenant of Cornwall together with his lady. They were visiting Sir John and they were to remain yet a week his guests at Arwenack that they might grace the coming nuptials.

Above in the house there was great stir of preparation for the departure of Sir John and his ward, the latter into wedlock, the former into unknown seas. In the turret chamber a dozen seamstresses were at work upon the bridal outfit under the directions of that Sally Pentreath who had been no less assiduous in the preparation of swaddling clothes and the like on the eve of Rosamund's appearance in this world.

At the very hour at which Sir John was leading his company to table Sir Oliver Tressilian was setting foot ashore not a mile away.

He had deemed it wiser not to round Pendennis Point. So in the bay above Swanpool on the western side of that promontory he had dropped anchor as the evening shadows were deepening. He had launched the ship's two boats, and in these he had conveyed some thirty of his men ashore. Twice had the boats returned, until a hundred of his corsairs stood ranged along that foreign beach. The other hundred he left on guard aboard. He took so great a force upon an expedition for which a quarter of the men would have sufficed so as to ensure by overwhelming numbers the avoidance of all unnecessary violence.

Absolutely unobserved he led them up the slope toward Arwenack through the darkness that had now closed in. To tread his native soil once more went near to drawing tears from him. How familiar was the path he followed with such confidence in the night; how well-known each bush and stone by which he went with his silent multitude hard upon his heels. Who could have foretold him such a return as this? Who could have dreamed when he roamed amain in his youth here with dogs and fowling-piece, that he would creep one night over these dunes a renegade Moslem leading a horde of infidels to storm the house of Sir John Killigrew of Arwenack?

Such thoughts begot a weakness in him; but he made a quick recovery when his mind swung to all that he had so unjustly suffered, when he considered all that he came thus to avenge.

First to Arwenack to Sir John and Rosamund to compel them to hear the truth at last, and then away to Penarrow for Master Lionel and the reckoning. Such was the project that warned him conquered his weakness and spurred him, relentless, onward and upward to the heights and the fortified house that dominated them.

He found the massive iron-studded gates locked, as was to have been expected at that hour. He knocked, and presently the postern gaped, and a lantern was advanced.. Instantly that lantern was dashed aside and Sir Oliver had leaped over the sill into the courtyard. With a hand gripping the porter's throat to choke all utterance, Sir Oliver heaved him out to his men, who swiftly gagged him.

That done, they poured silently through that black gap of the postern into the spacious gateway. On he led them, at a run almost, toward the tall mullioned windows whence a flood of golden light seemed invitingly to beckon them.

FURTHER DROP IN GASOLINE

Over Production Is The Attributing Cause of the Reduction.

TORONTO PRICE 28c.

TORONTO, September 16. — A general drop of two cents in the wholesale price of gasoline all over Ontario, is the explanation given by one of the leading oil companies today for the good news that gasoline has dropped from thirty to twenty-eight cents in Toronto. This action, it was stated, had followed a two or three cent reduction across the border, which was regarded here as the precursor of an equivalent slump in the price of crude oil.

The fact that the retail price has remained stationary in Buffalo at 18c and in Woodstock at 20c was attributed to local conditions, such as the competition of independent companies. The underlying reason for the reduction in Ontario prices, an official of one of the leading oil concerns here explained to-day, is demoralization in the mid-continent oil field due to general over-production.

"The situation," he said, "is much like that relating to other products sold in the United States. The price is agreed upon and made uniform to the retailers.

"Back of all this, is the fact that you pay a fixed price for crude oil. It is known as the "posted price" but at present it does not prevail in the mid-continent field because of over-production."

LAUCNH CAMPAIGN.

A meeting of the local members of the Ontario Women's Prohibition Committee yesterday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. was the first official step towards launching a campaign in Peterboro on behalf of the temperance forces, those who believe that the Ontario Temperance Act is the proper machinery with which to shackle the liquor traffic.

From early indications the fight on this side of the fence promises to be determined whole hearted one. The Y. M. C. A. library would not hold the meeting and additional seating accomodation had to be obtained.

Mrs. A. J. Langford in a stirring message defended the O. T. A. and exposed the menace of Government control as it has affected Quebec and British Columbia. The speaker urged upon those present the need of every women studying the question for herself and of using her franchise and sacrificing her time in the coming campaign.

Preparatory to further work in an intensive campain for arid province, a list of officers were elected: President, S. R. Armstrong; Vice Pres. Mrs. Dr. W. D. Scott; Secretary, Mrs. A. S. WELSH MALE GLEE SINGERS

(By Jeannette.)

The Rhondda Welsh Male Glee Singers, who made their initial appearance in Peterborough last season, when they sang at the Murray street Baptist church, repeated last night in St. Paul's Presbyterian church the favorable impression made by them on their first visit here. A group of twelve singers, with their leader and accompanist, they are splendid musicians. In their solo and ensemble work, they were accorded the heartiest applause by a somewhat small, but very appreciative audience that gathered in the big church last evening to hear the Welsh Glee Singers, whose performance here was under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's.

The men sing with ease and freedom. Their rendering of various types of music is a delight, made so by their intelligent handling of every number and the real artistry which allows no jarring notes in their fine choral work, when they sing as one man, with clear tenors and smooth bassos working together in perfect harmony. Their interpretation of their songs follows every least move of the masterly conductor, Professor Tom Morgan, and their excellent enunciation is an outstanding feature of their music. Without musical notes for any of their numbers, and supported by the fine accompaniments of Professor Emlyn Jones, A.R.C.M., their choral porgramme was striking from start to finish. In the Welsh numbers particularly, they sang with a verve and abandon that evidenced their whole-hearted enthusiasm for their art,

The programme opened with the well-known "March of the Men of Harlech," sung in Welsh, a stirring, robust, full-voiced number that softened to the demands of the encore "On the Sea," arranged by Dudley Buck. Edward German's "O Peaceful Night," with its calm atmosphere, demanded and received a mild, legato treatment, and was followed later by the rollicking strength of a second Welsh number, "Bugeilio's Gwenyth Gwyn," with an odd little encore, "Beethoven's "Where Is He?" from the "Mount of Olives," illustrating the search for the hidden David by the soldiers of King Saul. The interpretive powers of the singers was apparent in the short, staccato sentences that rang out with decisive power.

A choral selection, "Italian Salad," with solo work by Stephen Jenkins, tenor, was an entertaining portion of the programme. This was a hodge-podge of musical terms in Italian, woven together in clever fashion, and demanded instant change of tone and tempo at times, that was adequately met by the singers. As an encore to the applause which greeted this number, they sang the "Gypsy Laughing Chorus," another difficult selection in which their robust laughter gave an effective impression of real spontaneity. "The Sandman" and "Sleep, Dear One, Sleep," were also given. By request, as a final number, preceding the singing of "Hen Wlad Fy Nhadau" (Land of My Fathers), the Welsh National Anthem, the Soldiers' Chorus from "Faust," was sung, in bright, martial fashion.

The solo numbers and the two quartettes which interspersed the choral programme were fully equal to the high standard of the ensemble work. A splendidly-played organ selection, Hymn of Seraphs, was the contribution of the accompanist, Professor Emlyn Jones, A.R.C.M. to the evening's solos, and there were two quartette numbers, the softly-sung, typical "Lullaby" of Brahms, and its encore, "Every Rustling Tree," the four fine voices blending beautifully in the lovely music.

Stephen Jenkins, possessor of a clear, sweet tenor, of sympathetic, fine quality, sang the lovely old favorite, "Lassie O' Mine," with an encore in the little "Lilac Tree," (Perspicacity) number. Sydney Charles, whose tenor tones were of golden, piercing sweet timbre, sang with striking effect "Nirvina," and was compelled to respond to insistent encores, with "When Song Is Sweet," a lovely minor melody with soaring, high-pitched finale. A third tenor, of differing quality to the previous singers, was that of Richard Owen, whose odd, resonant, ringing voice, with a temperamental handling that gave it a unique atmosphere, was exhibited to fine advantage in a Pagliacci number, "On with the Motley," and an encore, "Trusting Eyes."

Two baritones were heard last evening, Walter Evans, with his warm, expressive voice, singing in artistic fashion Gounod's difficult "She Alone Charmeth My Sadness," and Robert Hopkins, an almost tenor-like sweetness in his artistic, rich tones, rendering "If I Were a Rose" and its fantastic little encore, "Jane."

David Rees' splendid, strong, expressive bass voice was heard in Handel's "Hear Me, Ye Winds and Waves," a fine rendition that brought applause and an encore in the rollicking "Kitty O'Toole," and Edward Hopkins, with a voice like a rich bass viol, sang "The Voice of the Storm," and "Down in the Deep."

CHILDREN'S AID TAG DAY

On Saturday, September 27th, the local Childrens' Aid Society, will make their annual appeal for financial support by holding their customary Tag Day. It is hardly necessary to define the commendable work undertaken by this worthy organization whose philanthropic efforts are directed to making useful and exemplary citizens out of orphaned and neglected children. It is a God-given and noble work, that so cheerfully shouldered by the "Children's Aid," and a humanity-loving self-imposed duty standing above criticism.

But the expenses of this institution grow every year apace with the increased demand upon its attention of and care for little folks, who, without their Christian aid would wander into paths of life beset with evil example, vice, ignorance, indolence and crime. But to prosecute such work effectively sufficient funds must be forthcoming, and for these funds the Society rely to no inconsiderable extent upon the receipts from their Tag Day appeal.

So it is to be hoped that this year's appeal will be responded to as generously as in the past, and that individual and collective effort will round up a comfortable sum in practical co-operation with the society's aim that dependent and uncared-for children may have opportunity to develop into real community and national assets—men and women holding the respect of their fellows and living in observance of the best traditions of the British race.

POPLARITY OF THE CHEVROLET GROWS

Marked Interest Shown In Splendid Exhibit at Peterborough.

An aftermath of the exhibition, of absorbing interest to automobile lovers, is found in practically a replica at Howson's Garage, 387 Water street, of this enterprising firm's exhibit of the newest models of Chevrolet cars and trucks at the Fair grounds.

The exhibit embodied the last word in moderate priced automotive conveyances for business, pleasure, city or country driving, and general utility. Hundreds of visitors called at the Chevrolet exhibit booth and displayed marked interest in cars which for economical transportation, little outlay in upkeep and all round dependabilty have reached the summit of popularity—cars that take one where one wants to go at minimum operating costs. For instance, there was in evidence a Chevrolet Sedan, similar to the one which travelled 166.4 miles on three gallons of gasoline, an achievement the manufacturers may well be proud of.

Another and outstanding reason for the popularity of the Chevrolets, is that they are quality cars made in Canada—not merely assembled in this country, but having their motors, axles and other heavy parts manufactured at Walkerville, while small parts manufacture, body building, assembling and finishing, is done in Oshawa. This is gratifyingly in keeping with the timely trade slogan of to-day: "Buy Canadian Made Goods."

But when it comes to finish, a feature of the Howson Garage exhibit was the Duco process in varied colors so rapidly gaining in public favour. This method of finishing cars is entirely new and distinctive; while quiet and not possessing the lustre which goes with enamel, it reflects solidity, together with long-life qualities of incomparable wear and tear and weather resistance. Then this finish is much easier cleaned and actually improves with washing and rubbing. The Chevrolet Sedan in beautiful deep blue Duco finish and the appealing Touring cars finished in medium blue and grey Duco all presented a distinguished appearance quite their own.

In fact, the whole exhibit of Chevrolet cars was notably complete, not forgetting the newest comfy four-passenger Coupe, a luxurious vehicle at a moderate price, with a body upholstered in handsome velour, and with fittings and equipment unusual except in cars much more expensive than Chevrolets.

All Chevrolet models are comfortably upholstered, have double windshields and powerful, dependable and durable motors. In addition, purchasers are given the option of having the modern balloon tires at surprisingly little extra cost.

DIED IN A CAR.

Mother Noticed Strange Look in Child's Face.

KINGSTON, Sept. 16—The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Boyle, of Brewer's Mills, died very suddenly on Sunday while the family were motoring to church. Just a few minutes before reaching the church the baby appeared to be all right but on getting out of the car the mother noticed a strange look on the child's face and afterwards it was found that the baby was dead. As the child showed no indication of illness of any sort and had the mother's constant attention during the journey, death is believed to have been due to heart trouble.

ALE TEST HIGH.

KINGSTON, Sept. 16.— License Inspector Taber of Brockville, stated that the analysis of the ale seized recently at the brewery in the village of Portsmouth had not yet been completed at Toronto. Until the report has been made nothing further can be done he said. If the ale tests too strong action will be taken by the local officials.

WOMAN FACES MURDER TRIAL

Unfalteringly Replied "Not Guilty, My Lord," When Arraigned.

KILLED HUSBAND.

CAYUGA, Ont., Sept. 16. — A woman is on trial for her life here to-day. Calm and outwardly concerned she stood in the prisoners' dock at the opening of the Fall Assizes in the presence of a crowded court-room, turning coolly toward the jury box and unfalteringly replied "Not guilty, my Lord," to the charge that she "did poison" her husband, George Gilbertson, of Hagersville, on the 22nd of June last.

For almost three months the accused widow has been confined within the walls of the Cayuga County Jail, but she has not allowed her incarcreration to discourage her. All through the gruelling days of the original accusation, the inquest and the preliminary hearing, she was able to maintain perfect composure, and to-day when she appeared before Mr. Justice Kelly, her demeanor had not changed.

Seven witnesses are expected to contribute the bulk of the evidence during the trial, which commenced here early this afternoon.

Harrison Arrell, K.C., Crown Attorney of Caledonia is conducting the prosecution, and S. R. Coulter, of Cayuga, is acting for the defence. The trial is expected to last two days.

This is not the first instance in which a woman has faced the charge of murder in the County of Cayuga. There have been at least two other occasions when the little grey court-room has been packed with a morbid throng, all pressing forward to catch a glimpse of a grey-faced woman standing on trial for her life.

It is an odd coincidence that each of these cases parallels closely with the present one in that both of these women of the past were also charged with poisoning their husbands.

Back almost a quarter of a century ago there was the famous Sternaman case, in which Mrs. Sternaman was convicted of causing the death of her husband. The hangman had arrived, the gallows had been constructed, and everything was set for the execution when the undertaken unexpectedly revealed some hitherto unmentioned bit of evidence. A new trial was granted, and in a sensational hearing the widow was completely acquitted of the charge.

The other case involved a Mrs. Perkins, of Canfield. After another sensational trial which stirred the whole countryside, she, too, was acquitted of her charge.

Two Men and a Woman Tried To Slide Down a Rope.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(Canadian Press).—Two men were burned and a woman was injured in attempting to slide down a rope and thirty other persons were rescued with difficulty, when fire that broke out early this morning in a rooming-house in the theatrical district blocked the hallway leading to the fire escapes.

UNITED STATES TO AVOID TALK ON DIVERSION

Chicago and Niagara Water Withdrawal Not on Programme.

REPLY TO CANADA.

American Authorities Would Leave Discussion Until Later.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—(Canadian Press).—The reply of the United States government to the Canadian note refusing to include a study of the water diversion at Niagara in the matter to be referred to the joint engineering board studying the proposed St. Lawrence-Great Lakes Ship Canal had been transmitted to the British Embassy here for despatch to the Ottawa Government, it was learned to-day at the State Department, because Sir Esme Howard the British Ambassador and other of ficials of the Embassy are at the Embassy Summer home in New England, some delay in the actual sending of the note to Ottawa will probably result.

The contents of the note will not be made public until actually delivered to the Canadian Government, but it is understood to contain the suggestion that the task of studying the feasibility of the proposed waterway should not be delayed by including the study of collatoral subjects such as the water diversion at Chicago and Niagara Falls. If this American suggestion is agreed to by Canada, the question of withdrawal of water by Chicago from the Great Lakes, lowers the levels of the Lakes and affects navigation and the matter of diverting water at Niagara Falls will go over for later attention by the two governments.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

September 16, 1924

Editor, Examiner,
Dear Sir:

In last night's Examiner was a letter over Mr. Roland Denne's name containing an anaemic and wondering series of lamentations, but it could be gathered from it that it was a complaint about Re-distribution as it affected Peterborough County.

Of course, he required to refer to the Peterborough Exhibition and himself. The inference being, I suppose, that he was a patriot, and others were very selfish, but now that he has raised the question, would he mind stating how many thousands of dollars have been paid him for tooll and fodder for horses and cattle required at Fair time, and by circuses using the Fair grounds while he has been President and why his competitors seem to have the opportunity of dealing with proprietors of the circuses coming to the Fair Grounds?

In the letter, to which Mr. Denne has signed his name, of course he misses the whole point in issue. I rather expected he would, because he has missed about everything he could miss.

What I said was that after the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, and the Hon. H. H. Stevens, had learned what Mr. Denne's views were, regarding redistribution, that they and every Conservative member on the re-distribution committee voted exactly the opposite way to what Mr. Denne desired.

I drew from that course of conduct on the part of Mr. Denne's leaders, that knowing him as they did, they had little respect for his opinions, and I do not think he should complain, that, if for once, I voted the same way as Mr. Meighen and his Conservative followers did, and against Mr. Denne's views.

Then Mr. Denne asks why I did not seek the advice of certain persons. Well, I did seek advice and received it, and coupled with my own opinion, I acted upon it, the same as the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen and his followers did.

In addition to that, I might say, that certain Conservatives in this city, who were voting consistently Conservative, when Mr. Denne was a Stratton-Conservative only, have told me, that their views were that this Redistribution was an equitable and a fair one.

Mr. Denne having recently qualified to shade hands with the "Brethren" of the East Peterborough, is naturally disappointed, when he finds that this particular section of the County is not linked to West Peterborough, and his splendid opportunity for becoming more widely acquainted in this district, is not of very great value to hm.

I might add in conclusion, I have found it a very safe rule to do the very opposite to what Mr. Denne does, and so far I have found myself not only right but I have been in accord at least with the majority in Parliament, including the Conservatives, on the Redistribution matter.

Yours truly,
C. N. GORDON.

CABINET DECIDES FORM PLEBISCITE

System Will Do Away With Confusion and Hasten Counting of Vote.

TORONTO, Sept. 16.—(Canadian Press). — The Provincial Cabinet this afternoon decided the form of the plebiscite to be submitted to the voters of Ontario.

There will be two questions, the first as to whether the voter favors the continuance of the O.T.A., and the second as to whether Government control of the sale of beer and spirituous liquor is desired, one under the other with a black line between and blank spaces to the right for the "X" to be marked by the voter under "Yes" or "No."

This manner of expressing the vote, it is believed, will obviate any confusion and expedite the counting of the votes.

ACCUSED DIRECTORS SOLICITOR ON STAND

Declares Nothing Improper in Ocean G. Smith's Loan of $525,000 From the Home Bank.

TORONTO, Sept. 16.—(Special) —"Did you tell Ocean G. Smith that this scheme was false and fraudulent and improper?" Such was the query put by Gordon M. Shaver, counsel for the accused former chief accountant of the Home Bank, O. G. Smith, to Edward L. Middleton, solicitor for the Canadian Property Co., at this morning's session of the Home Bank case before Judge Coatsworth.

The 'scheme' referred to was the manner in which the bank turned over its head office at 8 King Street West to the Holding Company. And Mr. Middleton said emphatically that he did not tell Mr. Smith any such thing because he did not think the scheme false or fraudulent.

The 'scheme' was that the King Street building should be turned over at a price of $525,000 by the simple expedient of borrowing the money from the Home Bank and giving it a bond therefor.

"Did you ever see anything improper in it?"

"No," said Middleton.

D. L. McCarthy, K.C., and his allied counsel for the prosecution, smiled broadly at this statement from the solicitor, who put his OK on the deal.

"You did not advise the directors that they were doing anything improper?"

"I did not."

"Were your instructions that everything was to be properly done?"

Middleton wasn't sure he had instructions on that line.

"It was assumed that everything would be proper," said Mr. Shaver.

Again the Crown counsel laughed.

Mr. Shaver sarcastically suggested that it was evidently now assumed that Smith should be not only general financial advisor but also solicitor to the bank.

When Mr. Shaver asked Middleton whether he knew the only way the Canadian Property Co. could raise the money was by borrowing from the bank, the witness asserted. He still took the view there was nothing wrong with borrowing the money and giving the bond to the bank.

The borrowing power of the Holding Company was increased to $1,000,000.

AT 3 P.M. ADMISSION 35c. RETURN GAME OF THE THIRD ROUND OF INTERMEDIATE O.B.A.A.

MAJOR LEAGUES RUN TWO WEEKS

Giants and Brooklyn Have Remaining Games on Home Grounds.

BOTH RACES CLOSE

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—With two of the most exciting pennant races in years now in progress, interest in major league baseball is now at its height. The campaign will come to a close two weeks from to-day and the outcome of the annual races in both circuits is far from settled. Fans not only in this city, but also through out the entire country are watching the efforts of the two New York teams to win the pennants in their respective leagues for the fourth successive year. Sentiment throughout all of the rival cities in the two circuits is strongly against a victory for either of the New York teams and many followers of the game even in this city also will admit that a victory for an outside team in at least one of the two leagues would be an excellent thing for baseball and would add new interest to the game.

In the National League the Giants and Robins are fighting hard for the championship, and it is now reasonably certain that one of these local teams will represent the National League in the world's series, although Pittsburgh is by no means out of the race. Outside of the fact that the Robins have two less games to play than have the Giants, neither of these two teams has any decided advantage over the other as regards the remainder of the two schedules Both will play all of their remaining games on their home fields, and the strength of the opposition for the rest of the campaign will be pretty much alike. The Giants, with a shifted line-up and a tottering pitching staff, have been fighting hard to keep ahead of the fast-moving Robins, who have a splendid array of pitchers, led by the redoubtable Dazy Vance. From present indications the outcome of this race is not likely to be settled definitely until the last few days of the season.

American Tied Up

In the American League the Senators and Yankees are moving towards the close of the campaign now on even terms. Cheered by fans all over the circuit, the Washington players have been making valiant efforts to hold their position at the head of the league long enough to wrest the championship from the Yankees. Both of these clubs face the same disadvantage of playing all of their remaining games on the fields of their opponents and each of them has fourteen more games to play. With the Tigers still in third place but pretty well out of the running, the Senators and Yankees give every promise of contining their battle right up to the close of the season.

The choosing of Walter Johnson ash the American League player of most value to his team this year undoubtedly will met with the approval of baseball fans throughout the country, and it is generally agreed that no more popular choice could have been made. After seventeen years of splendid service in the American League the pitcher is having one of his best seasons, and his work has been one of the biggest factors in the sensational showing of the Senators this year.

PIRATES BUY TWO

In preparation for the pending series with Brooklyn and New York, which will probably decide the chances of the Pittsburg Pirates to win the National League pennant, the Pirate management announced the acquisition of two new players, a south paw pitcher and a hard hitting outfielder.

The pitcher, Don Songer, was obtained from the Oklahoma City Club of the Western League in exchange for pitcher Herbert May and a cash consideration. The outfielder, George Haas, was recalled from the Pittsfield, Mass., club of the Eastern League, where he has been playing under option. Both players will join the Pirates Tuesday at Philadelphia.

Deloro Here Wednesday In Return Game With C.G.E. At Exhibition Park, 3 P.M.

The return game between Deloro and C.G.E. will be played at the Exhibition grounds at 3.00 p.m. on Wednesday. The first game between these two teams was a humdinger and Wednesday's encounter promises to be a repitition of Saturday's thirteen-inning struggle.

The Smelters claim they were out-lucked at home and they can reverse the decision right on the Electricians' home lot. The locals will have their full team on hand, and their pitchers are all ready to go the route.

1924 SEASON UNCOVERS NEW STARS

Cuyler, Wilson and Combs May Be Outfield Brilliants of Future—Successors to Speaker, Cobb, Ruth and Roush.

Watching a star outfield make a brilliant catch of a difficult fly ball is one of the big thrills of the national pastime.

Fandom likes to see the batsman get a long drive. A hard-hit ball calls for the best that is in the outfielder in the way of judgment and perfect mechanical execution.

For nearly 20 years Tris Speaker, now managing the Cleveland club, has been rated the perfect fielder. Uncanny judgment, good speed and nearly perfect mechanical ability have made Speaker the master outfielder.

Ty Cobb, generally regarded as the greatest player of all time, has not only been a star in the field but in every other department of the game. Throughout his career he has teemed with color.

Then along came Ruth. Right now the Babe is baseball's most talked about individual, has been for several years. First a pitcher, then an outfielder of parts, now baseball's premier slugger, Ruth is the idol of fandom.

Four Stars Are Passing

Eddie Roush of the Cincinnati Reds, while perhaps lacking the color of the above named trio, is none the less valuable.

These four great players are going the other way. Speaker and Cobb, at the very best, only have a few years left.

Who will take the places of these stars?

The National League already has in nomination two recruits, Hazen Cuyler of Pittsburg and "Hack" Wilson of the New York Giants.

The American League presents Earl Combs, who unfortunately for himself and the Yankees, suffered a broken leg in mid-season. Combs I regard as the best-looking young outfielder that has broken into the American League in 10 years.

It is rather unusual that one season should produce three such likely stars as Cuyler, Wilson and Combs.

Rookies Displace Veterans

Cuyler and Wilson did the unexpected by displacing star veterans in their first year. At Pitsburg Bigbee gave way to Cuyler, while Wilson for a while bat out the brilliant Billy Southworth for the center field position at New York. Although Wilson was benched recently, he is expected to recover from his temporary slump soon and get back in the game.

While Combs was injured before he had won a regular berth in the Yankee outfield, there was no way of keeping him out. At the time of his injury he was leading the American League in batting. He had also showed great fielding ability and enough speed to be rated one of the fastest men in the game.

Cuyler, Wilson and Combs form an outfield trio that any major league club would welcome.

These rookie stars are being touted as the successors to Cobb, Speaker, Roush and Ruth. However, it takes more than one big year to deserve so high a rating.

HUGE FIGHT PAY DAZZLES PETER

Peter Maher Advises Them to Put Some of It Away.

DOWN AND OUT

NEW YORK, September 16.—"Three hundred thousand dollars! Three hundred thousand dollars!"

Peter Maher, one time heavyweight fighter who gave the hardest wallop of any of his contemporaries, turned his head on his pillow in the public ward in St. Mary's Hospital, Hoboken.

Friends had come to him to read him the account of the big fight. They told him Firpo and Wills would probably get that much of the gate. It was too much for the old "Irish Champion" as he loved to be called. A sufferer from pneumonia, pleurisy and gallstones, down and out, he whispered:

"They'd better put some of it away. They'd better. The rainy day comes."

His day yesterday, like many and many a day for the last fifteen years, was filled with the rain of adversity. Outside the sun was shining and the windows of the ward were filled with its silver.

A Sharp Contrast.

Across the river, kicking up its heels under a pleasant breeze, Firpo was stowing away a fortune that would take care of a hundred Peter Mahers.

Within the ward lay the old-timer with the famous punch, the handsome dark-browned, blue-eyed, black mustached Peter of twenty years and more ago, now turned saggy, gray, weak as a little child, hoping to get on his legs again, and back to his job along the river front as watchman and stevedore. And yet he is only 56 years old.

He whispered:

"I just could not hold on to mine. Three hundred thousand dollars! Think of it!"

He was asked if he had any family. He whispered:

"A boy, twenty one. He likes fights, but he's no fighter. A wife I had, but when I got to the Pennsylvania depot she was in Los Angeles."

Still a Sport.

There was almost a twinkle in the dulled blue eyes. He was still a sport at heart, careless of responsibility.

The night of the fight he kept the others awake demanding to know how the battle went.

Had it been possible for some fairy of the sporting world to have lifted him up and held him at the ringside, he would have died happy, perhaps with a great shout of encouragement to his favorite.

He brightened up for a moment, and there came from his pain ridden chest almost the ghost of these words:

"The best — the best — fight — was between Sullivan and Kilrain. But tell 'em—tell 'em—to put some of the money away for a rainy day. It comes."

Missed Champion Ship.

Maher was never the heavy-weight champion, but he was a wonderful fighter, with a terrible right. He always just missed gaining the laurels. He lacked decision, it is said, and also had a weak jaw. He fought the best of his time and made plenty of money. He liked fun and had it.

In 1900 came his finish in Philadelphia, when Jack Fitzgerald laid him low to the resin in one round. He was carried out of the ring. From then on it was drifting, drifting, drifting, for Peter, as bartender in saloons, and then when phohibition came, to the wharves for any job he could pick up.

VANCE'S GREAT FEAT.

In Sunday's game between the Cincinnati Reds and the Brooklyn Dodgers, Dazzy Vance shooting them in for Brooklyn accomplished what is believed to be a record when he fanned three men in one inning on nine pitched balls. Vance struck out Bohne, Hargrave and Rixey in succession. He had nine strikeouts during the game and he shot his season's strikeouts up to 254. It was his twenty-sixth victory of the season.

BRITAIN WINS CUP

OYSTER BAY, Sept. 15. — Great Britain won the international six metre Seawanaka yacht racing cup from the United States to-day by taking the second and final events in the series.

Britain scored 4 victoreis to the United States three.

Just to give some idea of the closeness of the Amerncan League race, on one day six teams changed places, thusly:

Detroit, idle because of rain, went into first place, while New York, twice deefated by Washington, dropped to second. Washington moved from fourt to third.

Boston lost twice to Philadelphia and fell to fourth. St. Louis was idle and Cleveland, by winning twice from Chicago, went into a tie for fifthy with the Browns. Chicago dropped from fifth to seventh.

Beat that for one day's happenings in the baseball world if you can.

THE PERFECT PLAYER?

Veteran Coast Outfielder Assays 100 Per Cent. in Four Important Phases of Game.

"BUZZ" ARTLETT

Baseball has never hard a perfect ball player Ruth, Cobb, Speaker and other headliners, great in many respects, all had a deficiency of some sort which denied them the glory of perfection. Sisler in 1922 was nearer to all-round greatness than any other notable, but George lacked Ruth's mighty driving power. Out on the Pacific Coast they have advanced Buzz Artlett, Oakland's star outfielder, as the 100 per cent ball player. Artlett is equally gifted in the four most important phases of the game—hitting, throwing, running and fielding. Moreover, he has the instinct of the natural born player. Artlett used to be a pitcher. And a good one, too. The Boston Braves bid $30,000 for him. When his arm went bad he turned to outfielding. Overnight he became a sensation. Artlett is not young. He has been in the game nearly ten years. For that reason the 100 per center of the Coast League may never come to the big leagues.

HUNCH PLAYERS LEAN TO "H" IN GOLF

Hagen, Holderness and Hurd Account for Three of This Year's Big Titles—Golf Dope is Uncertain.

By JOE WILLIAMS.

Anybody who knows the difference between an ascot tie and a wormcast knows that golf is the most elusive and baffling of all sports from the standpoint of advance prophecy. Past performances, form and established abilities mean nothing, if not considerably less.

Only one tournament has run true to form all year. That was the British women's championship, won by Joyce Wethered. She is strokes better than the next best golfer in England. Her victory was anticipated. The surprising thing was that some outsider didn't cut in and spoil the picture. It usually happens that way.

Glenna Collett is the best shotmaker among the American women. The Providence girl proved that by breaking 80 in the qualifying round of the recent national event. No other player in woman's golf had done that before.

Glenna's Defeat a Shock.

Everyone expected Glenna to move on to an easy victory in the championship. But she was beaten by Mary Browne of California, a courageous but not especially brilliant player. And the following day Miss Browne bowed to Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, a title-holder as far back as 1909. And by the unflattering figures of 7 and 6!

It is probably best not to employ reason or logic in making a golf forecast. Some silly system, such as judging players by the manner in hich they drawl their r's, or wear their store teeth, might bring more accurate results.

Now who'll win at Merion, Pa., in the men's amateur the week of September 22? Reason and logic would unhesitatingly nominate Bobby Jones, Jess Sweetser, Francis Ouimet or one of the other notables. But reason and logic have no place in golf prophecies.

It is more likely that some player whose name begins with "H" will win. This has been a great year for haitches. The eighth alphabetical letter (don't count, it really is the eighth!) has already accounted for three national champions, Walter Hagen, in the British onen; E. W. E. Holderness, in the British amateur, and Mrs. Hurd, in the American women's.

Hunter and Held.

Let's consider the potential haiches among the amateurs. Willie Hunter of California stands foremost. Hunter once won the British amateur. Last year he put Chick Evans out in the first round. He'll be dangerous anyway.

Dave Herron of Chicago won the amateur at Pittsburgh in 1909. Tony Haines of Rockford qualified in the amateur last year, but bowed to Francis Ouimet in the opening skirmish. Eddie Held of St. Louis is one of the younger set—a positive comer. Kenneth Hisert of Chicago is another kid who is progressing.

No more haitches of golfing note come to mind at the moment. One of these may win at Merion. We wouldn't bet on it. And if you have golf dope of a more profound and intelligent character to offer we wouldn't bet on that either. It is a trifling game and no game to trifle with.

ANYWAY, CONNIE'S GOT A STAR

Pitcher Gray's Natural Stuff Promises to Win Him Big League Fame—Has Fast Ball, Curve and Courage.

BY BILLY EVANS

Pitcher Sammy Gray of the Philadlephia Athletics may or may not develop into a big league star.

If Gray fails, it will be due to lack of control, proper pitching poise, because he possesses remarkable natural ability.

Not since Walter Johnson broke into the American League has a rookie pitcher shown me as much stuff as Gray. Since I umpired the first game Johnson worked I feel that I am in a position to make such a comparison.

Gray, while lacking the physique of Johnson, boasts a great fast ball. Perhaps it is not as swift as that of the speed king, but it doesn't fall far short.

Great Curve Ball

Unlike Johnson, Gray comes to the majors with a sharp-breaking curve. In fact, I have never seen a recruit pitcher with a more deceptive hook.

For years Johnson depended entirely on his terrific speed for success. Gray has an added asset in a corking good curve ball. Johnson lacked a change of pace, Gray also has yet to learn that phase of pitching.

If natural ability, only, was needed to be a successful pitcher, I would have no fear of predicting great things for Gray. However, there are other things to be considered.

Courage is most essential. A disposition that is able to accept the good and the bad breaks without affecting one's poise, is just as important. Control is absolutely necessary.

Johnson Starred From Start.

Johnson had all of these three great assets. From the start of his career, for a pitcher using such a fast ball, his control has been uncanny.

Gray has the speed and the curves to be a star. If he possesses the other attributes he is going to be a much talked about young man in the next few years.

"Gray is a great pitching prospect," says Connie Mack. "When he has control the odds are always in his favor to win. I have great hopes for him."

The sudden jump to fame of Gray, who during the early months of the year did little more than warm the bench, brings to mind an incident of the southern training camps.

Two years ago in making a tour of the camps I came upon the Cleveland club at Lakeland, Fla. Manager Speaker had his young pitchers lined up in a row working out. After watching them in action for about a half hour, I remarked to Manager Speaker:

Gray Has the Stuff.

"That fellow pitching to Luke Sewell has the best fast ball I have seen this year. Who is he?"

"His name is Gray," remarked Speaker, "but don't give him any consideration in commenting on the Cleveland club. He belongs to another major league club, is simply working out with us."

Later Speaker sent him into a game between the Regulars and Yanigans, he struck out four of the first five batters to face him, using only a fast ball. It was the same Gray now making a bid for fame with Connie Mack.

Gray has the stuff to be a second Johnson. It is up to him.

WRESTLES HAY NOW

Collegian, Who Won Olympic Mat Title, Spurns Pro Career For Life on Farm With "Ma."

HARRY STEEL AN D "MA" STEEL

EAST SPARTA, O., Aug. 16.—Wrestling with humanity in the form of Olympic competition and wrestling with hay on the farm are matters of wide divergence, but they count decidedly in the life of Harry Steel of this little village.

Steel, a graduate of Ohio State University, is the new Olympic heavyweight wrestling champion. Steel went over with the team as an alternate, answered the call of emergency, broke into four matches and won them all. What's more, Steel looked the part of a finished artist.

Several promoters have tried to persuade him to adopt wrestling as a profession, confident of his ability to wrestle on even terms against Strangler Lewis, the Zbyszko brothers and Plestina.

"I'd rather stay here and work on the farm and be near "Ma," says Steel.

Ohio State will miss Steel this year. For three years he was a star tackle on the football teams and last year he captained the wrestling squad when it won the Western Conference title. Steel is six feet three inches tall and weighs 210 pounds.

SOCCER NOTES.

The Gordon Cup semi-finals will be played on Saturday afternoon. Down at King Edward Park the Thistles and G.W.V.A. kick-off at 3 o'clock. Referee, A. Mitchell. Up at the Oval the Quaker Oats and Canadian Woollens kick-off at 3 o'clock. Referee, Jack Clark.

All Plenty Cup players are requested to be at the Exhibition Grounds on Wednesday evening at 6.30 prompt. Trainer Gatfield must have all men on time and under strict training. They will also have training quarters in the Y.M.C.A.

The Plenty Cup team met last evening along with Trainer Wm. Gatfield and a good understanding was in evidence. Every player was anxious to do his bit and intend going into next round—third.

Last season Dyer, Vets, scored nearly twenty goals, and this year he has been playing as good a game as ever, but has only got four so far. While Al. Williams got 17 last year, he has only got 3. And Charlie Griffine holds the unique honor of being the only goal-keeper to play as forward and score 4 goals. Frick also got a goal.

Gardener, who played at centre forward for the Quakers on Saturday, gave a splendid exhibition of football. He was at one time a signed player for Clapton Orient—not a junior from local circles, although he took part in one game.

McPhail, the prominent inside right of the Thistles, failed to get a football player this time—another girl for Mac.

After consideration being given to the request of the Plenty Cup team, the P. and D. F. A. Executive could not see their way to permit the select team a game, owing to so many matches already being postponed during the season, otherwise the games could not be finished this year.

FAMOUS GIRL STARS COMING

Peterborough Will See Toronto's Best Runners and Ball Players on Saturday.

An unusual sportinrg event has been arranged for Saturday, when the famous Toronto ladies' ball team, incluring Rita Grosse, Grace Connacher, Miss Hennessey and other well-known girl athletes who have won fame in international contests, will be seen in action at Riverside Park against a picked Peterboro girls' team. The local girls' teams have been playing great ball, and many fans think them capable of beating the best Toronto can produce.

Saturday's game will do much to settle this argument. The Peterboro team will be chosen, by permission of President Fred Gandy, by a committee composed of Messrs. Jack Pilling, Tom Turcotte and J. O'Brien.

In addition, the famous Toronto ladies' relay team will be here and will be matched in a race against four Collegiate Institute boys. The visiting girls comprise the fastest woman runners in the continent, and Rita Grosse holds several world's records.

With two such attractions on the programme it is expected that there will be a record crowd at Riverside Park Saturday.

VEHICLES COLLIDE.

Street Car Had To Make a Trip To The Barn After Accident.

With its front fender tied up to its head light in reversed fashion, street car Number 13 proceeded down George Street this morning, after maintaining the right-of-way over a light delivery waggon and a small truck. The waggon and the truck remained unharmed, but the ponderous car suffered a misadventure to its front fender, that put it temporarily out of business.

To save a minute of time, an enterprising young man in charge of a light motor delivery waggon swung out into a fraction of space that intervened between a street car coming down George Street and a half-ton motor truck. He missed the truck but collided with the street car and tore off its front fender. The sixty seconds which he might have gained had he been able to get clear lengthened into five minutes examining the damage caused by his desire for speed.

HOME BANK CASE.

Lax Conditions In Connection With Bank Loans.

TORONTO, Sept. 16.—(Canadian Press).—The shrinkage in value of securities rendering them insufficient to meet loans against which they were deposited, inability of those to whom the loans had been made to meet their obligations to the Home Bank in full, and the fact that the officials of the bank allowed these conditions to prevail for some considerable time prior to suspension, were points in the evidence submitted yesterday afernoon by the Crown during the fifth day of the trial of S. Ocean G. Smith, former chief accountant of the defunct Home Bank of Canada.

Other evidence adduced by the Crown showed that, although the bank kept close account of the condition of some of the companies to which large overdrafts or loans had been allowed, it ended only in the financial state of these companies getting worse until assignments were made and the bank, of necessity, suffered considerable loss.

FRANK CHANCE DEAD.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Sept. 16. (Canadian Press).—Frank Chance, manager of the Chicago White Sox, died here last evening after a long illness.

He was at his apartment here early last night when a sudden attack caused his removal to hospital, where he died within half an hour.

A HIGH STANDARD OF SUPERIORITY

Shown By C.P.C. Team at Exhibition—Won 6 Prizes In Four Classes.

It is interesting to note, in connection with the exhibits at Peterborough Fair, that the high standard of superiority enjoyed by the Canadian Co.'s far-famed Rose Brand food products was reflected in the outstanding achievements of their local delivery team of horses. For these splendid bays, over five and under six years of age, walked away, to speak, with no less than six prizes in competition with horses in their own class, as follows: Second and third for best general purpose team on halter; first for best general purpose team to delivery wagon; first and second for best heavy delivery, single and Mr. V. Eastwood's special prize for best general purpose team to delivery wagon.

In this connection, considerable credit is due to Mr. J. Seymour, the company's local factory superintendent, who personally gives special attention to the care and upkeep for delivery purposes of these splendid five-year-olds, the preparation of which for exhibition contests also came under his expert supervision. They were exhibited for the first time this year.

Mr. Seymour is an energetic member of the Exhibition Board, to whom he gives whole-hearted co-operation, particularly so in regard to exhibit of heavy horses, sheep and swine. He is also a highly appreciated member of the exhibition grounds committee.

The trade policy of the Canadian Packing Co. is "the best is none too good"—in products, in factory equipment, in horse and automotive delivery. Enterprise and progress is a watchword with the management, as evidenced in their comparatively recent addition of a new sanitary equipment in their local lard department, which experts commend as the best in the country. Then this company enjoy an enviable reputation for the super-goodness of their unsurpassed Rose Brand products, including ham, butter, eggs, bacon and other exquisitely delicious edibles, the demand for which is growing daily. And three government inspectors guarantee absolute purity in all foods produced in the big Peterborough premises.

IS NOT DISMAYED.

Conservative Leader Addressed Meeting of Workers in Winnipeg Last Night.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 16. — (Canadian Press.—Addressing a meeting of Conservative workers here last night, Hon. Mr. Meighen, leader of the Conservative Opposition in the House of Commons, said that he was not dismayed by the results at elections. No Conservative should be dismayed, he added, when the figures polled were analyzed. Commenting on criticism of himself in certain quarters, following the by-elections, Mr Meighen said any appeal that is going to affect him will have to come from those who stood in the battle-front, who fough the battles of their country and in that struggle maintained their share of the battle. Any appeal from those who feel by the wayside in that battle will not have any effect upon himself.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—The Liberal Executive of the East Riding has come into the fight for county boundaries the day after the Fair. Mr. Brethen, M.P., and Mr. J. H. Burnham wrote to The Examiner warning all hands of what was likely to come. The Liberal Executive, with Dr. Munro in the chair, has now called the Conservatives and Progressives together to protest. Delays are always dangerous, and putting on the airs of great deliberation with a government is dangerous work. The people who are to blame for this mix-up are the people who did not protest in time and they are the people now waking up and making a row. Now what are they heading for? What are these latecomers heading for? They are heading for losing a seat to Ontario. Strictly speaking, Ontario is entitled only to 86 seats in the redistribution. Quebec, who provides the unit, consented to Ontario's having 88, thereby not losing any. Quebec consented to P. E. Island and Nova Scotia's keeping their old number, all of which was mighty generous of Quebec. Now the local agitators want Ontario to lose one, N. Hastings. If Dummer, etc., is taken away from the new riding of N. Hastings that riding will go out of business again and Ontario will have 87 members instead of 88. Is that what you want, Mr. Slow-and-Easy? You are like the lazy virgins in the Scriptures. Too late! Too late! If you lose a member for this Province you won't be very popular.

Asselne was an employee of the Parks and Playgrounds Department.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

THE CAT AND THE CANARY.

An eccentric old codger who hated all his relatives, arranged to have his will read in his gloomy old house twenty years after his death, the surviving relatives to assemble at midnight. They were received by a West Indian voodoo woman, with a sepulchral voice, who predicted disaster for some of those present.

Such is the unusual start of the thrilling melodrama, "The Cat and the Canary," which is being presented at the Grand the first three days of this week, with matinee to-morrow, by the Theatrical Enterprises Limited Players. No more exciting play has been seen here and last night's audience alternately squirmed with fright or roared with laughter as the story developed. For the benefit of those who will see "The Cat and the Canary" during the balance of its run, the working out of the mystery will not be revealed Suffice it to say, that it has a most remarkable plot, not all gloom or shivery stuff, of course, but with plenty of fun to lighten the dark spots And there is a very interesting love theme as well, with a very bashful hero, who takes a long time to say the final word.

The company succeeds in giving the melodrama a most realistic production Every member of the cast is equal to all demands and the result is a performance that is smooth and convincing The major roles fall to Jessica Paige, the heiress of the play, and to Byron Hawkins, who is the unheroic hero. Miss Paige's work is of stellar calibre. Her part of Annabella West calls for genuine talent and Miss Paige's conception of the role leaves nothing to be desired. It was particularly effective in the most thrilling scenes of the melodrama where her picture of a terror-stricken girl was life-like in the extreme. Mr. Hawkins is nappily cast as the uncertain Paul Jones, who ends up by being a hero in spite of himself. It is a part full of rich possibilities for fun-making, and Mr. Hawkins does not lose a chance.

The rest of the company is excellent. Miss Esther Pinch renders the part of Mammy Pleasant a memorable one. Evelyn Watson and Ada Howard, as twp of the expectant relatives, make valuable contributions to the merit of this performance. Henry Gurvy handles a difficult role effectively. Norman Wendell is a convincing lawyer and Roger Allen, Arthur Mack and William Armstrong are clever in their respective roles.

"The Cat and the Canary" is a thrilling play most admirably acted and staged.

It should be greeted by large audiences during the balance of its run.

"THE FIRST YEAR."

Tommy Tucker's bride had a quarrel with him and packed up her things and went back to mother. It hurt Tommy pretty bad, no denying that, but the way in which it is worked out is a perfect scream and you'll be rollicking with laughter even at the sight of Tom's woes.

In fact all the haps and mishaps to the characters in "The First Year" are tragically serious to them, but each incident as the play moves along, becomes funnier and funnier to you. You may sympathize with Grace or you may sympathize with Tommie, you may even sympathize with both of them, but in spite of your sympathies, you just simply cannot help laughing and that's what you are going to do, whether you want to or not.

You will laugh at practically every line in "The First Year," and there are some moments of heart-gripping pathos that will get you the same way they have gotten hundreds of thousands of others who have seen the play. But when you are laughing, you will have nothing to be ashamed of, for "The First Year" is the greatest of all the great "Comiclean" plays that Mr. Golden has produced.

That clean plays are the kind of plays the public want, thereby proving that the great majority of Canadians are clean-minded and do not care for dramatic material that has the tinge of suggestiveness has been emphatically proved by John Golden, who has never produced a play with an unclean line or situation. "The First Year" will be produced here under the direction of Theatrical Enterprises, Limited, at the Grand on Friday.

AT THE CAPITOL.

The glorious Gloria is back again at the Capitol Theatre. Gloria Swanson has plenty of admirers and she has also her detractors, who maintain that she is merely a gorgeous fashion-plate. At least, that is what they used to say about her. In her last two or three pictures, she has proven conclusively that she can act, and do it in a variety of roles. In "Her Love Story," the versatile star has an entirely new role, and, although she poses a good deal in it, and wears elaborate gowns, it is really a very fine picture, one of those romantic affairs with princesses and kings and handsome captains of the guard involved in its make-up.

Gloria is the lovely princess of a Balkan miniature country and she is forced to marry the ruler of a neighboring kingdom, to save the life of a member of the King's guards, Captain Dushan. The love theme is emphasized in this production, against a background of royal intrigue and palace interiors. After the birth of a little prince, the queen is immured by her jealous husband in a lonely convent, where she pines for her child and her lover, banished from the kingdom. An element of reality is given a somewhat melodramatic story by the exceptionally good acting of the star and an excellent supporting cast. Although the king lacks a royal atmosphere, and the queen looks more like a Fifth Avenue beauty, for, with all her art, Gloria has not the cold detachment necessary to a thoroughly aristocratic presentation, there is plenty of interest and entertainment in "Her Love Story," which, by the way, ends happily for all concerned. Gloria Swanson is almost invariably entertaining. She neglects nothing that will add to the artistry of her pictures, and her role in the Capitol feature is one that will please her numerous admirers.

A feature of the big picture is the music that accompanies it. Particularly appropriate to the occasion seem all the selections. The strains of "Smilin' Through" make an inimitable atmosphere for the scene in the Australian grog shop, and "Mighty Lak a Rose" adds the last touch of artistry to the scene where the mother yearns over her baby. There is a touch of unusual interest, too, in the sub titles of a carefully-planned picture.

An interesting programme is rounded out by the inclusion of the always comical Will Rogers in an uproarious comedy, "Going to Congress."

FINE LOVE ROMANCE IN THRILLING FILM

Sweet Story Told in Superb Picture, "The Covered Wagon"

One of the most compelling and primitive love stories ever told on the screen, is embodied in "The Covered Wagon"— Emerson Hough's novel which was picturized by James Cruze for Paramount with a feature cast. The picture will be the feature at the Capitol theatre for three days beginning Thursday next.

The romance between Molly Wingate, "the belle of old Liberty town" and young Will Banion, late of Donophan's army in the war with Mexico with a clouded record which brings about near disaster for the loves of both, is not only beautiful but inspiring. There is all the strength of passion, the rugged charm and the wilderness sweetness that characterized the country in the days of '48.

A bitter rival in the character of Sam Woodhull causes untold trouble, but in the end all comes right. The production is one of exceptional massiveness. Thousands of persons appear in the varied scenes, fully one thousand being full-blooded Indians, all descendants of the savages who harassed the wagon trains as they crossed the plains during the gold rush period of 1849. There are many dramatic scenes, the chief of these being Indian attacks on the wagon trains, a real buffalo hunt and a thrilling prairie fire.

AT THE ROYAL.

"CUP OF LIFE," GOOD ADVENTURE STORY WITH SPLENDID CAST

Drawing on the cosmopolitanism of Singapore and the charm of East Indies for a background of striking allure, and a gripping story of father-love and Chinese vengeance for dramatic suspense. Thomas H. Ince has attained in "The Cup of Life," his latest production for the Associated Producers, which is now playing at the ROYAL Theatre, a degree of photodramatic perfection which has scarcely been equalled in his entire career.

In addition to excellent staging and an exceptional screen plot, Ince presents, in the forthcoming drama one of the most capable all-star casts which has been assembled in some months. Hobart Bosworth, Madge Bellamy, Tully Marshall, and Niles Welch contribute the quartette of featured players who portray, with real artistry, the four equally important roles.

The story deals with the sacrifice of Bully Brand, a daring and notorious pearl smuggler, in protecting his son, who does not know Brand to be his father, from the diabolical vengeance of Chan Chang a powerful Chinese merchant. The Oriental, through a series of logical misunderstandings, places the blame for the supposed mistreatment of his adopted white daughter upon Brand, who assumes the guilt for his son's sake.

The final scenes of the drama, in which Brand and the boy carry on a spectacular fight, are said to be unusually tense and vivid.

Bosworth, as Bully Brand, Tully Marshall as Chan Cang, Niles Welch as the son and Madge Bellamy in the role of Chan's daughter, offer equally excellent characterizations. The direction, by Rowland V. Lee, and the photography by J. O. Taylor are also to be commended.

BILLY SULLIVAN'S NEW ROLE IS INTERESTING.

Director of "Leather Pushers," Edward Laemmle, Made This Series.

Billy Sullivan, Universa pugilistic star who succeeded Reginald Denny in "The Leather Pushers," scores again in the starring role of "Get Away Day," which had its first local showing at the ROYAL Theatre last night."

The picture is the sixth of a series of Gerald Beaumont's famous race track stories of "The Information Kid," filmed by Universal under the title of "Fast Steppers."

Edward Laemmle, who guided the filming of the Sullivan boxing plays who made "The Victor," a champion of screen sports plays, and many worth while pictures, directed.

Sullivan is an excellent choice for the screen characterization of the whimsical carefree king of the paddock hustlers. Laemmle has created in the film the human atmosphere so vividly presented in the original story by the author.

AT THE REGENT.

John Trevor, a wealthy college senior, loves Mary Heath, who lives on a small, impoverished farm situated near the college town. Martin Freeland, an adventurer, posing as a country gentleman, also desires Mary. The burden of supporting the Heath family rests upon sturdy Dave, Mary's elder brother. Bob Heath, a slightly-built, younger, and much-petted brother, goes to college.

Martin takes Dave on a "sight-seeing" tour in the city, among the ultra-metropolitan followers of the bright lights.

John goes along to visit his mother, whom he thinks is independently wealthy by inheritance, but who really is dependent for her support upon a fashionable gambling den, about which John knows nothing. Dave is killed by accident in this place, and John learns the truth about his mother. His grief and shame nearly drive him mad. He leaves her, and takes a little cabin near the Heath farm.

Bob has to quit college and try to fit the heavy burden left him by Dave upon his own slender shoulders. He despises the farm work, and when Martin Freeland tells him that John Trever and his mother were responsible for Dave's death, he hunts up young Trevor and furiously denounces him. Mrs. Heath and Mary both place blame upon John, although the latter loves him.

John, tortured by his own mind, his love for Mary, and the hounding of Bob Heath, offers to pay the debt by taking up the burden of the man for whose death they hold him responsible—Dave. He binds himself out as a veritable slave upon the farm—for life—to atone. His offer is accepted, and the young, luxuriously inclined collegian enters his life servitude.

Bob Heath never misses a chance to add to his humiliation, and to the amount of toil he must perform. Martin Freeland gloats, and courts Mary before John's eyes. John works grimly, and his toil brings a little prosperity to the Heath family. He lives apart in a little shack, and his status is that of a servant or a slave, but he tries to keep a watchful eye on Freeland.

The following winter, a terrific snowstorm catches Bob and the lovable Heath twins—Mary's little brother and sister. Their horse runs away, breaks loose from an overturned sleigh, and Bob finds himself powerless to save them or himself by finding the ranch house in the storm. The arrival of the horse tells Mary, her mother and John that something has happened. John goes out into the blizzard to search for them.

Meanwhile John's mother, who has determined to find her son and affect a reconciliation, has attempted to walk from the railroad station to the farm in the storm. She finds the twins, and tries to shelter them with her fur cloak. John arrives, and when he sees that his mother may perish if he leaves her, he is confronted by a great problem. She helps him to decide. He saves the Heath twins and Bob, and returns for his mother. He is in time, and next spring brings happiness, and the union of the families in understanding, forgiveness and love.

MURDOCK CENSURED.

Labor Convention at London Takes Exception To Attitude of Minister.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 16.—(Canadian Press).—Following a heated argument in which twenty or thirty delegates from all parts of the country took part, a resolution was carried at the fortieth annual convention of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress here by an overwhelming majority, censuring Hon. James Murdock, Federal Minister of Labor, for his attitude towards organized and unorganized labor during the past year.

This resolution, which is number 2 in the list of 66 which await dissolution of congress was sponsored by the Toronto Local 27 United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

TO OMIT "OBEY" FROM CEREMONY

Struggling For Emancipation of Sisters of Marital Thraldom.

MARRIAGE SERVICE.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—That troublesome little word "obey" in the marriage service of the Church of England is again excepted from the ceremony and may raise a controversy, when the National Assembly of the Church meets in November.

The leaders of the church militant are determined that it shall be omitted and a systematic canvass is being made of the women of England to enlist their aid in the movement for the emancipation of the sisters of marital thraldom. The marriage service as it now stands is the advocation of the ideas of women of the 16th century to the 20th century.

Already attendants have been directed to have their luggage ready for departure Thursday night.

GOVERNMENT TO HELP MARITIME COAL MOVEMENT

Subsidy Of One-fifth of a Cent Per Ton-Mile Allowed.

GRANT OF $150,000.

Applies To Shipments To Central Canada Against U. S. Competition.

OTTAWA, September 17. Canadian Press. Shipments of Maritime coal to Central Canada is to receive government assistance, providing the railways make reductions in their present published freight rates on coal.

The Dominion Fuel Board will administer the grant, providing that the railway companies have already agreed to make a reduction in their coal rates, under an order-in-council which has just been passed by the Dominion Cabinet. Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of Mines, is enabled to pass a subvention of a fifth of a cent per ton per mile on coal shipped wholly by rail from the Maritime provinces to stations in Ontario and Quebec, west of Riviere Du Loup. On water-borne coal from these provinces the same subvention is allowed on the railway haul from the port of transhipment to the destination. This assistance will be given out of a few hundred thousand dollars voted last session of Parliament to aid in the transportation of western and eastern coal to central Canada.

At that time it was thought that with this aid considerable quantities of coal from Alberta would be placed on the markets in central Canada, but the prolonged strike in that province makes such a development unlikely this year.

Of the $200,000 voted, not more than $150,000, according to the terms of the order-in-council, may be used to subsidize the transportation of coal from Eastern Canada. An important restriction in regard to the subvention is that the government will not give more than 50c a net ton on any single shipment nor are payments to be made where Canadian coal is not in competition with United States coal. No grant will be given on coal for use in railway locomotives. The policy of the government, it is intimated, will be to grant the subvention only where the railways consent to make a reduction in the present published rates on coal.

POTATO YIELD IN EUROPE HIT

OTTAWA, Sept. 17.—(Canadian Press).—The European potato crop, the huge shortage of which last year entailed larger importations of wheat, is again threatened because of the weather conditions which have prevailed recently, according to reports received by the Ottawa branch of the International Institute of agriculturists.

A cablegram received Tuesday from the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome states that there is potato rot and a blight on potatoes in many districts in England, Wales and Scotland. In Ireland there have been rapid and destructive attacks of blight on the potato crop and a high proportion of diseased potatoes has resulted.

There have also been a good many attacks of blight on potatoes in Germany, Poland, Lithuania and Switzerland.

Official estimates of eight European countries indicate a production of 343,000,000 bushels of potatoes compared with 983,000,000 bushels, the average per year for the five years from 1918 to 1922.

Why live in where it's dark and murky,
Just buy a home and you'll feel perky.

FANATIC ARABS CAUSE TROUBLE

Wahabis Attack Transjordania, Are Repulsed and Turn Toward Hejaz.

BRITAIN WATCHES.

LONDON, eSpt. 17. —(Canadian Press Cable). Some uneasiness is felt concerning the intentions of Abrue Aziz Es-Sand, Sultan of Nejd and Hasa, one of the Central Arabian principalities, peopled by fanatical desert Arabs of Puritan tendencies who regard other Moslems who smoke tobacco and drink coffee as worse than infidels.

On August 14th Saud's forces attacked Transjordan which is the buffer state protecting Palestine from the Arabians. This places Husein, King of Hejaz, guardian of the Holy places, in an inevitable position. He cannot count on Egypt's support, and the Arabs in Iraq are too far away to afford him help. Britain, while not concerned in the rivalries of the different rulers of Arabia may find in the assertion of Saud's domination that her mandates over Iraq and Palestine are exposed and the Suez canal and bridgehead threatened. Transjordan government troops assisted by British aeroplanes and armoured cars have repelled the invading Wahabis and Saud forces. The ambitious Sultan of Nejd however has apparently now directed his attention against Hejaz and the town of Taif, 70 miles from Mecca, is reported captured by the Wahabis. Routes to the Holy places are in jeopardy including those from India and the Malay states. The fear for the welfare of pilgrims is not decreased by the knowledge that previous operations by the Wahabis involved wholesale indiscriminate massacres.

A Paris message alleging that British troops are being despatched against the Sultan of Nejd by way of Syria has been denied, but Britain is anxiously watching the situation and will not tolerate any action endangering her mandatory interests in Iraq and Palestine.

Reuter's Cairo correspondent reports that the Egyptian minister of public works has received a telegram from the superintendent of the Egyptian hotel for poor pilgrims at Mecca asking permission to transfer funds to Jeddah owing to the danger of Mecca falling into the hands of the Wahabis. It appears that all of King Husein's forces are concentrated in the region of Taif leaving only a small police force at Mecca and it is considered improbable that the tribes will rally on behalf of Husein if Mecca is attacked.

Mecca is the chief city in the Kingdom of Hejaz and has 70,000 inhabitants.

COUNTY BRIDGE WAS OFFICIALLY DECLARED OPEN

Concrete Structure With 50 Foot Span and 20 Feet Wide Steel Reinforced.

HAS LEGAL HISTORY.

Government Engineer Says Work Efficient—Cost Is $4,000.

Yesterday afternoon, the County Council officially declared open for traffic another bridge. This time the lucky township was North Monaghan. Reeve H. B. Rye, chairman of county roads, was the master of ceremonies, and pressed the button which, according to convention, operates to dedicate the structure to the public service.

Lockey's is the name of the new bridge, so called after the shabby wooden structure it replaced, which received it appellation from the late George Lockey, the owner of the adjoining property.

Built on the ninth line of North Monaghan over Hall's Creek, the bridge is the product of economy in the expenditure of public money. Concrete throughout with reinforcing steel it has a fifty foot span, and a width of twenty feet, with massive overhead concrete arches of artistic design, and built for strength and durability. The bridge is of a modern style similar to several newly built bridges in York County. The upper arch is now generally used in County Road bridges throughout the Province, and is regarded of equal strength to the lower arch style, and in accordance with the better designs of efficient and artistic type advocated in bridge building.

So far, the bridge has cost the county $3129.18, and when the approaches are finished it is estimated that the total cost will amount to $4000.00. T. N. Smythe, government engineer for this district, said that the bridge was a good job, and commented on the excellence of the work.

Legal History.

Lockey's Bridge has been the subject of much discussion at North Monaghan Township Council meetings for a number of years, and several vexing problems, some of which are as yet unsolved, hinged upon its original construction.

According to the natural flow of Hall's Creek, which is a regular torrent in the spring, the creek crossed the ninth line in three places, the third time crossing where the bridge now stands. When the first bridge was built its course was diverted and by filling in along the road a breakwater was constructed and the creek in its flow only crossed the road once, thus necessitating the building of only one bridge.

In 1916, the late George Lockey brought action against the township and according to the judgment the municipality was compelled to construct culverts and allow the water to pass to the west side of the road on to the property of the plaintiff. This would permit a portion of the creek to maintain its original course and by the judgment the township had to maintain this convenience as a right of a riparian ownership to the late George Lockey and his heirs in perpetuity. By the diversion of the waters the plaintiff had been deprived of running water which he and his forbears had used for domestic purposes.

Unsatisfied with the decision, North Monaghan appealed in 1917, and by the new judgment the township was directed to maintain culverts from the north to the south side of the road, but without a guarantee of supplying water, so that the municipality would not leave themthemselves open to an action for damages in case of a dry-up due to natural causes.

Yesterday afternoon, Reeve Rye and Deputy-Reeve Lillico, with other members of the County Council, viewed the breakwater which is but a few hundred feet west of the new bridge. County Road Superintendent McFarlane and T. N. Smythe, Government engineer, were in attendance and suggestions were made as to the reconstruction of this part of the roadway to conform to the standing court decision. The ninth line has been designated a County Road and will have to be widened and filled in to tide the swelling waters in the spring. It was suggested that corrugated iron pipes replace the culverts, and that a stone foundation be provided for the roadway at this point, similar to the elevated approach on the west side of the bridge.

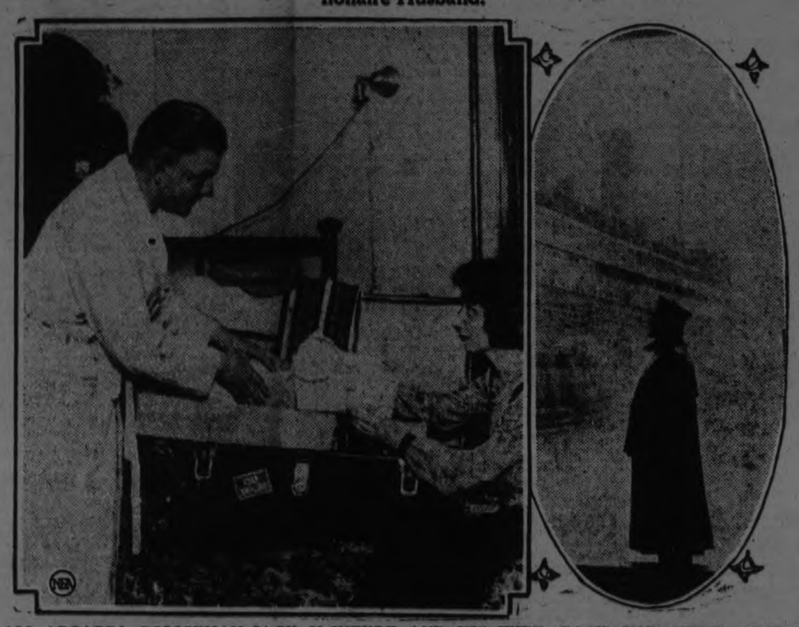
NEW YORK POLICEMAN AND HIS WIFE WILL TOUR EUROPE GUESTS OF PRINCESS XENIA OF GREECE

"Smiling Jack" McIntyre Who For Years Has Seen the World Come and Go Over the Cunard Pier at New York, Finds That Dreams Sometimes Come True—Says Most Notables Are Very Human—Pleased the Princess and Her Millionaire Husband.



ALL ABOARD! POLICEMAN JACK McINTYRE AND HIS WIFE PACK FOR THEIR TRIP TO EUROPE, WHERE THEY WILL BE THE GUESTS OF PRINCESS XENIA. POLICEMAN JACK HAS BEEN STATIONED AT THE DOCK (RIGHT) WHERE HE HAS MET MEN AND WOMEN OF HIGH RANK ON THEIR WAY TO AND FROM EUROPE.

(By Gene Cohn.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.— Policeman Jack McIntyre has smiled his way into a sort of fairy tale in which there dwells a lovely princess and a millionaire, and in the background there is a drop curtain of palaces and playgrounds such as might have been fashioned by Maxfield Parrish.

To "Smiling Jack," as he is internationally known, there has come an advenure such as O. Henry loved to write about—another Bagdad-on-the-Subway tale in which circumstances twist about to whisk someone away on a magic carpet.

It might have been named "The Policeman and the Princess," for smiling Jack is to be the guest of the Princess Xenia, of Greece, and her millionaire husband William J. Leeds, Jr., son of the famous tin plate magnate.

Knows Them All.

This is the way it came about:

For ten years Policeman Jack McIntyre has been bluecoat at the Cunard pier. In this capacity he has seen the world come and go. He has met the notables of Europe, the merchant princes, the travelling school teachers—he has seen men arrive in de luxe cabins and return in steerage. He has met actresses, salesmen, tourists—the whole cross section of life.

He is a veritable human "Who's Who." He knows practically everyone who travels.

And upon them all he has smiled, either congenially, humorously or sympathetically.

"You see," he explains, "They're all human. Their names may sound big, but I've noticed that they like to get out of role, as they say on the stage. They all like to relax. I've heard some of the biggest men and women burst into slang and even use bad English just to relax from the parts they have to play in holding their positions or stations. Underneath they're pretty much all alike. You've got to meet them though to appreciate it."

And "Smiling Jack" has met them all. He has given them a handshake and a smile. When a boat arrived or left. He has chatted with them congenially and he has made many friends.

Such social intercourse has resulted in a simple philosophy based upon congeniality. Policeman McIntyre's residence is decorated with little signs reading "Keep Smiling." There is one on the mirror, another faces the bed and there are more on the trunks that he and the Mrs. will take with them.

He has written it on his face as he stood at the gangplank. But had you told him he would one day be climbing the plank, his wife on his arm, for a six weeks European jaunt with a princess as his hostess he would have searched your hip pocket.

Goodbye America!

Yet that's just what happened.

For several years he has met young Leeds as the millionaire came and went from Europe. A mutual liking resulted and when Leeds and his bride, the former Princess Xenia, returned from abroad an invitation was issued the policeman and his wife to be their guests on a tour of Europe.

"And it couldn't have come at a better time," smiles the officer. "You see the wife hasn't been in very good health and needs a sea trip. Things come out this way somehow.

"The Princess is a very wonderful woman," he continued. "She has the reserve and dignity of her aristocratic past, but once you meet her she is very pleasant. As I've said, they're all human. Only she seems so delicate you hate to shake hands for fear of breaking something."

So its palaces and playgrounds for "Smiling Jack and his missus in this modern fairy tale.

$32,000 MISSNG FROM TREASURY

Warrant Issued For Arrest of Hamilton Civic Employee.

WOMAN IN CASE?

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 17.—Harold S. Forbes, for ten years an employee of the City Treasurer's Department, disappeared over a week ago and a warrant has been issued for his arrest charging the embezzlement of $32,000. Forbes is supposed to have gone to the United States. While overseas he married a hospital nurse, a native of Wales. There are two young children and his wife is now in the hospital. Police authorities are working on the theory that there is another woman in the case.

The alleged defalcations were so ingeniously arranged that it was only with difficulty that they were located. On August 23 Forbes asked the city treasurer for four days' holidays, mentioning that he expected a new arrival in the family. As he was entitled to the usual two weeks' holidays, Mr. Davis immediately acceded to the request. Forbes told him, and also Mr. Dempster, that he would be back by the end of the week to make out the monthly statements. According to Mr. Davis

ARREST JOHN TROTT.

Two Year PoliceSearch Ends In Arrest of Man Wanted For Murder.

THOROLD, Sept. 17.—(Canadian Press).—Following a man hunt which began two years ago when Police Chief Joseph Truman of Merriton was shot and killed on street, near depot of the Niagara St. Catharines, and Toronto Railway police officers arrested John Trott, former Italian resident of Merriton at Niagara Falls, N.Y., on charge of slaying. Murder of Truman which occurred on night of Dec., 17, 1922, was mysterious one and the murder disappeared completely.

Following police investigation, however, search was instituted for John Trott, but no clue as to his whereabouts was discovered until quite recently when trail led to Niagara Falls, N.Y.

SHANGHAI'S FIRST LINE DEFENSE UNBROKEN UNDER NIGHT ATTACK

Vicious Assaults By Kiangsu Armies On All Fronts Were Checked.

FIGHTING AT DAWN.

City's Volunteer Corps Called Out, But Was Not Needed.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 17. — Artillery duels continued all along the eastern front of China's civil war all through last night, dawn finding the Chekiang and Kiangsu armies still fighting, the struggle for possession of Shanghai still unsettled.

Head-quarters at the arsenal at Lungwha of the Chekiang forces defending the city issued a bulletin early to-day saying that the Kiangsu armies had attacked viciously on all fronts Liuko, Kiating, Hwangtu and Ihing, but that in each case the Chekiang line had held. The Shankhai volunteer corps was called out again late last night, after fears had been expressed that the fighting would come closer to the city and the international settlement. The city remained quiet, however, throughout the hours of darkness. The volunteer corps is held ready for emergenies.

SUICIDE WITH A VINE.

A Delaware Farmer Hangs Himself in the Woods in Novel Manner.

NEWARK, Del., Sept. 17.—Using a grapevine for a rope, John M. Starr, a tenant on the farm of Thomas G. Samworth, Pike Creek, four miles from Newark, committed suicide by hanging himself from a tree in a woods near his home. Ill health is thought to have been the cause of his act.

Careful plans were made by Mr. Starr to avoid chance of failure. A slipknot was tied on the end of a thick grapevine and this fastened around his neck. He then climbed up the trunk of the tree to a limb fifteen feet from the ground. He crawled out five feet on the limb, tied the other end of the grapevine around the limb and jumped off. His neck was broken. Starr is survived by his wife and one daughter, aged seven.

RAILWAY RATES UNDER ENQUIRY

Complaints of Discrimination Under Crow's Nest Pass Agreement.

BEFORE THE BOARD.

OTTAWA, Sept. 17.—What may develop into a lengthy battle over railway freight rates began to-day when complaints of discrimination resulting from the restoration of the Crow's Nest Pass agreement are presented before the board of railway commissioners of Canada from east and west, as well as from part of Ontario— charges of discrimination growing out of the agreement which came into existence twenty-seven years ao. The Crow's Nest Pass agreement was entered into by the government of Canada and the Canadian Pacific railway in 1897. It provided for the payment of a subsidy to the railway in return for which the latter undertook to grant rate reductions on certain classes of freight moving both east and west. East bound rates on grain and flour were reduced under the agreement, while reductions in west bound commodity rates covered such goods as green and fresh fruit, coal oil, cordage and binder twine, agricultural implements iron, wire, window glass, building and roofing paper, paint and oils, live stock, etc.

The agreement which was suspended during the war came into force again on July 6th, last. Then certain provinces and municipalities began to complain of discrimination. The C. P. R. took the ground that the rate set forth in the agreement applied only to lines in existence in 1897. British Columbia complained that Okanagan fruit was discriminated against because it was not granted reduced rates to the east, while eastern fruit came to the west on the low rate provided in the agreement. The city of Brantford charged discrimination because it was not granted reduced rates which were given to Toronto and Hamilton.

A MOTOR ACCIDENT.

Two Cars Collided and Landed in the Ditch.

LINDSAY, Sept. 17.—A motor accident occurred on the county highway near Hill Head, South Ops, on Monday night, when a truck driven by Henry Austin, Peterborough, and a Sedan driven by C. McLean, of the same city, came together at a small bridge. It appears that Mr. McLean, who was on his way to Peterborough, was nearing the bridge, when another Sedan shot past him and obstructed the view of the approaching truck. Both came together and then toppled over into the ditch, badly damaged. The occupants of the two cars escaped unhurt. The driver of the other Sedan, who was really responsible for the accident, continued on his journey and failed to render assistance, although he warned the driver of an approaching car to watch out for the wreck ahead.

FORTUNE DAZES SUNSHINE GIRL

Willed $200,000 By Aunt For "Sacrificing Pleasures" —Shuns Publicity.

A BIG SURPRISE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17. — Miss Gladys Stevenson, a very pretty and very natural young woman of perhaps twenty-five, spent Monday in seclusion behind the massive grilled-iron doors of her own imposing house at No. 1367 Dean Street, Brooklyn, much overcome by two big surprises.

First—Overnight, as it were, and without foreknowledge, she had inherited a sizeable fortune.

Second—She had been plunged and also without knowledge, into a sea of publicity.

Sacrifice Rewarded.

By reason of three paragraphs attached to the will of her aunt, Miss Virginia I. Leman, leaving almost the whole of her estate to Miss Stevenson, the girl was pictured as having brought "sunshine and happiness" into the life of the elder woman and to have "sacrificed many of the pleasures that young people enjoy" in her devotion to the aunt.

Explaining this part of the will, Phelan Beale of the law firm of Bouvier, Caffey and Beale and a long friend of Miss Leman, said:

"Really, I feel responsible, for that was my language, and we didn't dream of the publicity it would attract."

Love Her Urge.

And with a show of amusement:

"Miss Stevenson, you know, is a perfectly normal, natural girl and the only sacrifices she made were those that any girl would make out of affection.

"She was devoted to her aunt, and this will, making her the principal heir, was a complete surprise. She had never seen the will and she had no knowledge of what it contained."

Mr. Beale corrected the published reports that Miss Stevenson would inherit a million dollar fortune, giving his own estimate of the inheritance as about $200,000.

33 BOTTLES OF FILTHY BOOZE

Seized By Local Police, An Example of Product of Peterboro Bootleggers.

IN CHIEF'S OFFICE.

If no one has seen what is commonly called swamp whiskey, the kind of concoction that has caused men to see a world upside down and to experience made fits and trying struggles with all sorts of creeping things and an unsteady mind, nourished by some bootlegging death mixture could imagine there is in Chief Newhall's office at the Police Station, thirty-three bottles, that affords a good example of the type of fire water sold by Peterboro bootleggers.

It is not The Examiner's intention to injure the flourishing trade of any local bootlegger, but the fact remains that the stuff seized by the local police some time ago is so unfit for human consumption, it cannot pass without comment.

"My, what stuff," said Justice of the Peace Harry Rush, as Inspector Reid held one bottle up to the light in an upturned position. Of a dirty yellow color, it is filled with circles of slimy substances, gathered at the bottom of the bottle, which can be seen floating through the mixture, when the bottle is upturned. It is of such an unusual color and content that it's impossible to say of what it is composed.

Patrons would no doubt hesitate before touching the offerings of any bootlegger if they had one glimpse at this stuff.

POINTS OF VIEW.

Regional Agreements Between States Discussed at Conference.

GENEVA, Sept. 17.—(Canadian Press).—The different British and French points of view on the question of regional agreements between states, authorized by the draft protocol presented yesterday by Foreign Minister Benes, of Czecho-Slovyakia, before the Disarmament Committee of the League of Nations, were set forth at the committee's forenoon meeting today. The representatives of twelve League members, who comprise the committee, listened attentively to Paul Boncour of France, who defended the assertion that the pact of special military agreements has served to strengthen the pact as a guarantor of world peace. The French position. Monsieur Boncour is certain, was that special military accords between the particular states could not be preserved and that it was best frankly to have them component parts of the general protocol for the outlawry of war.

On the other hand, the British representatives raised certain points concerning the regional alliance as regards the authorization of them in the protocol, which indicated that agreements had not been reached on Article Eight of the draft protocol, which deals with this subject. They doubted the wisdom of the special accords in view of the proposed general agreement on mutual assistance.

TEMPERANCE MEETING.

Good Meeting Held In Toronto Last Evening—Workers Wanted.

TORONTO, Sept. 17.—Dry forces in Toronto lined up for organization purposes last night all over the city, and made a fine start in the battle to hold what Ontario has in the way of prohibition.

Nine meetings were held. Half a hundred speakers enthused the workers gathered to organize. There were about two thousand persons, it is estimated, who offered their services to not only pray but work to roll up a vast majority against the wets. For the prohibition orators frankly say that plebiscites are not won by prayers alone.

The dry leaders were quite optimistic about the outlook. Rev. T. Albert Moore, campaign organizer for the Ontario committee; Rev. Ben Spence and Mrs. R. G. Smythe, president of the Ontario W.C.T.U., sped around in a car to all the meetings, dropping in for a few words at each to enthuse the workers.

They were delighted with what they found. "Never in all my experience as a temperance campaigner have I seen such widely attended or enthusiastic initial organization meetings in Toronto," declared Mr. Spence.

After exactly eight years of a dry Ontario the voters were asked to choose between the O.T.A. and a return of the liquor traffic in the guise of Government sales. The leaders had un as a slogan: "Make it half a million," holding that it was not too much to hope for that Ontario should roll up a margin of 500 000 for the retention of the O.T.A.

BIG CONVENTION KIWANIS CLUBS AT HAMILTON

PETERBORO THERE.

Local Club Stood Second In Efficiency Contest at Convention.

The sixth annual Ontario-Quebec District Convention of Kiwanis clubs, held in the city of Hamilton on September 4th and 5th, proved a very successful affair, according to the reports contained in The Hamilton Herald, which featured the doings of the convention during its sessions, and published a special twelve-page section devoted exclusively to Kiwanis and its work, on Thursday, September 4th.

Approximately 600 members of Kiwanis clubs, which number 27 in the two provinces, assembled in the Royal Connaught Hotel at Hamilton, which was the city that made Kiwanis international. It was the first club to be organized in Canada, and was the first Kiwanis club in the world. Now there are more than 1200 Kiwanis clubs in existence, including 46 in Canada alone. The clubs scattered over the continent, have a total membership of over 90,000.

Peterboro was represented at the convention by about 20 of the members of the local club, who had a good time at the various events arranged for the entertainment of the visitors. These included luncheons and dinners, at which such speakers as Lt.-Governor Cockshutt, Premier Ferguson, M. Victor Johnson, president of Kiwanis International, and Edward G. Tanguay, governor of the distirct organization, were present; a theatre party at the Savoy, a drive on the mountain top and a dinner dance at the Royal Connaught Hotel. For the ladies, there was additional entertainment, in the form of several automobile sight-seeing drives, with Thursday afternoon tea at the Glendale golf club and luncheon at the Brant Inn, on Friday. Hamilton's famous singing organization, the Edgar Choir, and the Hamilton Symphony Orchestra, provided vocal and instrumental music at the theatre party in the Savoy Theatre. One of the features of the Friday afternoon programme was the presentation to the city of Hamilton of a 100 foot flagpole of Douglas fir, erected in Gore Park, Hamilton, and presented to the city by the convention.

At the Thursday luncheon, Lt.-Governor Harry Cockshutt spoke. He made a strong plea for empire unity, told briefly of his trip throughout the Empire, of Australia, New Zealand and all the colonies, and concluded his remarks with the statement that "The time will come when we will realize our strength, now lying dormant, and when that time does come we will be true people."

Continuing, he said: "Quebec and Ontario, which are assembled here, are sister provinces of which we are all very proud. Sometimes because of race and creed there are little misunderstandings.

"The main trouble is about languages. Quebec was here first. They have a beautiful language and they have a right to it. We must make up our minds to that. It is a good thing we have two races, for it gives us two different points of view. In days to come we may be very glad we have the staunch bulwark of Quebec."

At this luncheon, the occasion was enlivened by each club in turn singing its favorite song or chanting its slogan, and plenty of pep was put into the various efforts.

An efficiency contest is held at each Kiwanis convention. The last percentage adopted by the committee in charge of the contest, a percentage based on many years' observation and work on the part of the committee, and representing the best Kiwanis standard of relative value, was as follows: Public affairs, 40 percent; attendance, 25 percent; social activities, 20 percent; inter-club relations, 10 percent; relations to district and international, 5 percent. In the judging for this contest, Peterboro Kiwanis Club ranked second in the section devoted to clubs less than 100 members.

It was decided at the Friday concluding session to hold the next convention in Ottawa.

J. R. Marshall, president of the local club, was elected as Deputy Lieut-Governor for the Central district of the Ontario-Quebec section, which is divided into three districts, as follows: Western, Hamilton to Windsor; Central, Toronto to Kingston; Eastern, Ottawa and East.

A FREAK ANIMAL.

Guelph Man Has Tabby Cat Which Is Part Rabbit.

GUELPH, Sept. 17.— (Canadian Press).—In an animal which travels like a rabbit and evinces taste for milk like an ordinary house cat, Georges Greenway, 32 Surrey Street, has one of the strangest freaks that ever inhabited this vicinity, His tabby cat, which differs not at all from general run of felines, gave birth to a freak. It lives and thrives, despite its curious anatomy. It has hind quarters like an ordinary rabbit and hops over the ground in same manner but forepart of animal is plain cat. Jet black all over, animal has short button tail of the hare.

SEASON FOR COMMON COLDS

Dr. Hastings, M.O.H., Says No Epidemic of Grippe.

TORONTO, Sept. 17. — "I have heard nothing of grippe being prevalent and not one case of influenza, which is the same thing, has been reported. But just at this season there is likely to be a small epidemic of common colds," said Dr. C. J. Hastings, M.O.H., yesterday.

Dr. Hastings said that he had often warned citizens that the worst time for colds is just before furnaces are lighted and just after they are let out. People sit about in homes that have a temperature far below what they would consider comfortable during the winter season, and consequently suffer.

GRIM FAREWELL MESSAGE

Sailor Wrote That His Ship Had Gone To Her Death.

NAGASAKI, Japan, Sept. 17. — (Associated Press).—A grim message of farewell from the Nippon Yusen Kaisha freighter Matsuyama Maru, which foundered and went down with 57 men the night of July 11 about 150 miles southwest of Nagasaki, has been picked up off Kyushu. A lifebelt, almost the only trace of the ill-fated vessel picked up by searching ships, was found, bearing the words, "The Matsuyama Maru has gone to her death."

There was only one survivor of the Matsuyama Maru, a stoker named Fukuoka, who was picked up off a raft after eight days with no food and little water.

$32,000 MISSING

he did not show up on Saturday, August 30, as he had promised, but under the circumstances nothing was thought wrong, and it was presumed that he was completing his holidays. When he did not show up on Tuesday, September 2, Mr. Davis onquired by telephone at his house, and then made the discovery that he had been missing for a week.

Mayor Notified.

Mr. Davis immediately notified Mayor Jutten. The city treasurer and the city auditor, assisted by Assistant Treasurer Bower and Mr. Ellis, commenced a careful investigation of Mr. Forbes' accounts, but at first the shortage seemed trivial. However, Chief Coulter was notified. On Saturday afternoon and evening the search was continued and the searchers were astounded to find irregularities and alterations in the books which, they allege, cover up a $32,000 shortage.

From Tax Receipts.

The city treasurer, Mr. Davis, stated that his theory as to how the money was taken was that it was extracted in several lump sums from tax receipts. Mr. Forbes' particular work was to check over the daily tax receipts as they were sent up from the tax office, and to deposit these receipts in the bank. Examination of the books disclosed that several large items were entered in the receipt column in the wrong month. For instance, it is claimed that $22,000 or more taxes received on June 29, from the tax office, and deposited the following day in the bank, are not shown as among the receipts until a day or so later, which puts these amounts in the next month's figures.

COUNTY BRIDGE

speaker, in a brief address, expressed his appreciation to the Reeves of North Monaghan, to whose efforts in advancing the requirements of the township, the county had seen fit to build the bridge. His impressions were fully better than expected and his observations had convinced him that the project was effected in an economical manner.

Reeve Morley Smithson of Otonabee, introduced by Chairman E. M. Elliott, as the representative of the richest township in the County, also spoke, stressing the gratifying results of the expenditure from a financial standpoint.

Reeve Bert Middleton touched upon his township's requirements and hoped that Smith would be the next in line for county improvements. He complimented William Brown, chairman of County Bridges, on the success of the work.

Deputy-Reeve William Brown said that much credit was due the Reeves of North Monaghan who had sponsored the proposal in the first place, and kept in close touch with the work while under construction.

Speaking of the approaches, Deputy Reeve Torrence Lillico, spoke of the intention of the county to widen and construct a highway on both sides of the bridge. This will take care of a fairly heavy traffic and mean considerable expenditure in widening the somewhat narrow road through the swamp from the Provincial Highway to the new bridge.

As a conclusion to the formal opening Reeve H. B. Rye in a few words expressed his pleasure in having the honor to declare Lockey's Bridge open for traffic.

It was pointed out by County Treasurer E. M. Elliott the various costs of the structure to the county. The sum of $3129.18 has already been expended, inclusive of wages and material. The engineer's expenses have been estimated at $150.00, the cost of the approaches $400.00, and sundries and unforseen expenses, until the approaches and bridge are complete in every detail, at $250.00. This will bring the total cost to $3929.18.

The county bridge builder, Rock Gordon, who supervised the work, and the County Engineers, A. W. Connor & Co., of Toronto, along with County Road Superintendent D. McFarlane, were highly complimented by the various speakers for the efficiency and the financial success of the bridge and the approaches now near completion. The old bridge was beyond redemption, and the replacement by the new modern brdge will relieve the county of chronic repairs. The durable concrete piers will withstand the forces of the swelling waters in the spring, and provide the county with a permanent structure of modern artistic design that will everlastingly bear testimony to the skill and enterprise of its builder.

NEW MEMBERSHIPS.

Fish and Game Association Gives One Reason For Poor Fishing.

The President of the Peterborough Fish and Game Association received a cheque from Mr. Perry Alexander for fifty-five dollars for fifty-five new memberships for the association. He has sent in over eighty this year and certainly takes a great interest in helping to conserve our fish. The association appreciates Mr. Alexander's efforts and are with him in several of his ideas for the conservation of our game and fish.

This year the fishing has not been as good as previous years and several reasons have been given, but nothing definite has been decided as to what the real cause of it has been. One reason is that people are not using good judgment in taking fish out during the spawning season, which means the loss of millions, and the sooner our own residents and settlers realize this the better it will be for the fisherman.

CROSSING ACCIDENTS.

In spite of the effects of newspapers, motor leagues and the railways to educate motorists to the need of caution at railway crossings, automobile accidents at such crossings are on the up-grade, both in the United States and Canada.

They are increasing, in fact, faster than is the number of motor cars in use.

Statistics show that in 1919 in the United States 1,232 occupants of cars were killed and 3,558 injured in accidents at railway crossings.

In 1923 the fatalities numbered 1,759 and the number of injured had reached 5,416.

The onus in nearly every case must rest with the driver.

The more dangerous a crossing is the more careful should be the approach of the car.

Yet investigations reveal the fact that in some cases fatal accidents have been caused by cars running into standing trains, and in others fast moving motor cars have crashed into the centre of trains in motion.

The old advice, "Stop, look and listen," had it been followed, would have prevented all these accidents.

The trouble is to get motorists to see the value of the admonition.

A KIND-HEARTED COUNCIL.

They must have a wonderfull kind-hearted City Council out in Saskatoon, judging by a motion recently passed at a meeting of the city fathers who put themselves on record as favouring the deportation of all unemployed men who have not been residents of Saskatoon for at least five years.

There is a simple solution of the unemployment problem—just drive the jobless out of town and let them starve somewhere else.

It is a wonder they did not suggest executing the lot as a still more effective and uncomplicated way of dealing with the question.

The Saskatoon Aldermen surely do not correctly interpret public opinion in advocating such a drastic step as this, and their motion reflects little credit upon the Council.

It is annoying, of course, for city legislators to feel that many unemployed from other centres have been dumped in upon them to be taken care of—most large places have this complaint and sometimes it is justified.

But when a City Council proposes that a five-year residence be established before anything will be done to assist men, who, through no fault of their own, find themselves out of employment, its members are showing that the Golden Rule has no place whatever in their scheme of things.

Men cannot be allowed to starve in Saskatoon simply because they have not lived there for five years, nor can they in justice be deported as criminals or lepers.

GET ON THE LISTS.

The first duty of all citizens who are eligible to vote on the O. T. A. plebiscite next month is to make sure that their names appear on the lists.

There is no use arguing about the respective merits of the two proposals unless you are in a position to support your argument by a vote.

And you can't vote unless your name is on the list.

It does not matter how thoroughly qualified you are to exercise the franchise; your name must appear in the official role before the Deputy Returning Officer will give you a ballot.

Taking it for granted that you are listed is a dangerous proceeding.

At every election names of persons fully eligible are inadvertently omitted.

Many of the victims did not know until voting day that the omission had been made.

There is no need of you, Mr. Voter, or Mrs. Voter, or Miss Voter, as the case may be, experiencing a similar disappointment on October 23rd.

You have plenty of time in which to find out if you are protected by having your name on the list or to have it added, should it happen to have been left off.

The necessary machinery is being provided for the correction and revision of the lists, and no person who possesses the necessary qualifications need find himself disenfranchised when polling day arrives.

The plebiscite is Ontario's opportunity to express itself upon a public question of the most vital importance.

No elector should be without the power to actively participate in this expression of the public will.

THOSE ANNOYING DETOURS.

The Examiner called attention some time ago to the fact that the detour at Bowmanville caused by paving operations on the Kingston road was rough and in places narrow enough to be dangerous, especially for drivers inclined to take a chance.

The Toronto Star, in referring to this detour and to others on the Provincial system, points out the necessity of speeding up the construction work.

The point is well taken.

To require all the motor traffic on a trunk road like this to detour for months over a road never intended to carry such a volume of traffic is putting a heavy strain upon the patience of motorists and an equally heavy strain upon their automobiles.

It has been suggested that one-half of the roadway should be built at once, but this would not solve the problem.

It would merely hamper the contractors, without helping the motorists to any great extent.

But the work should be hurried; in view of the inconvenience to the public caused b ythe long tie-up, night and day shifts should be employed and every effort made to rush the job to completion.

The average road construction contract is carried forward at too leisurely a pace, and the army of motorists has to suffer.

Detours cannot be avoided, if our road system is to be kept in shape, but at least the period during which they have to be used might reasonably be shortened.

THE PROHIBITION ISSUE MADE CLEAR.

Whether one be more "dry" than Mr. Raney or more "wet" than a charter member of the Liberty League, The Journal cannot imagine any exception that can be taken to the form of questions which the Ontario Government puts to the public for the plebiscite of October 23, says the Ottawa Journal. Most of the liquor plebiscites taken in the past have been models of incoherence and confusion. Too many questions, many of them either overlapping each other or blurring each other, bewildered the public, with the consequence that nobody was ever quite sure just precisely what it was that a majority of people wanted.

The questions devised by the Ontario Government are simple, lucid, decisive. People are first asked the clear question: "Are you in favor of the continuance of the Ontario Temperance Act?" If a majority answer "Yes," that settles the matter. Ontario will continue prohibition. If, on the other hand, people don't want to continue prohibition, they can simply answer "No" to the first question, and then reply to the second: "Are you in favor of the sale as a beverage of beer and spirituous liquors in sealed packages under Government control?" Nothing could be more clear-cut than that.

The sort of Government control which Mr. Ferguson has in mind differs from the Government control in the Province of Quebec. In Quebec the Government licenses hotels and clubs and other places to sell beer and wine by the glass. These, in other words, are middlemen between the Government and the public.

Mr. Ferguson has in mind simply the sale of beer, wine, and other liquors in sealed packages by Government vendors only. There would be no possibility of going into a tavern or hotel and buying beer by the glass—let alone a return of the bar.

Whether the people of Ontario prefer such a system to the Ontario Temperance Act remains to be seen. But in any case the choice before them has been made abundantly clear.

SIR ARTHUR CURRIE RIPS THE ROOF OFF.

The country is bound to be shocked and aroused by the startling charges of waste—waste of effort and waste of money—directed against our War Governments by Sir Arthur Currie, our war general, last night.

Sir Arthur charged, first, that "one hundred thousand men were enlisted and sent to England who were of no use to us in the field."

This, it will be kept in mind, is the considered judgment of the man who commanded our armies in the field, and who thus knew exactly and by direct contact what men were of use and what men were not. His testimony is expert and practical testimony of unequalled weight. Yet he tells us soberly, six years after the war is over, that our authorities sent him 100,000 men who were of no use to the fighting forces in the field.

It is not too much to say that so grave and far-reaching a charge simply stuns. Sir Arthur calculates that each useless man cost the country $1,500. He is in a position to give us exact information on that subject. His estimate ought to be accurate. So we find no comfort in any hope that he may be wrong as we add up the astounding total and discover that this single category of blunders cost this nation one hundred and fifty million dollars.

* * * *

Nor is this the whole story. The withdrawal of 100,000 men from productive activity in Canada during whatever time they were in uniform, must have been of immense loss to the Dominion. War-time industry was pressing every possible man into employment. Thousands who were rejected as unfit for the actual fighting, were gladly allowed to "do their bit" in the munition factories. Women were employed.

What a boon it would have been to have had the services at home of these 100,000 men who were fit enough to pass the examination—and so must have been better than the unfit who did man the factories? Yet these men were taken away from useful employment, clothed, drilled and fed at the expense of the country, shipped to England at our cost, and maintained there unproductively—a charge on the scanty food supplies of war-time Great Britain—and all because, as Sir Arthur says, expert advice was not taken or accepted.

It was a terrible price to pay for ignoring the disinterested expert.

* * * *

Sir Arthur mentioned another case of which the public have already heard a great deal. He declared:

"Expert advice at the beginning of the war said that the Ross rifle was no good, and it was no good. Yet succeeding units came over to us armed with the Ross rifle."

This is almost unthinkable, but it is true. Our readers who date back to the decade before the war will remember that the Star published a complete exposure, in a series of articles written by experts, of the total unadaptability of the Ross rifle to the hard conditions of actual fighting. Our expert investigators then showed that the Ross rifle would break down under the rough usage of warfare exactly as it did break down in the hands of our soldiers in the Great War. When the news came back that our boys were throwing away their Ross arms and picking up any British rifle dropped by British killed or wounded, they were acting exactly as the Star had predicted they would act a decade before.

All this waste—undoubtedly implying in some cases waste of priceless human life—would have been avoided if the authorities had done as Sir Arthur Currie urges and listened to the experts.—Montreal Star.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—(Canadian Press). — Something of a jolt to friends of higher prices for wheat resulted yesterday from the fact that unofficial Canadian crop estimates, which were expected to be bullish, turned out to be bearish instead. The wheat market closed unsettled, 1-4 to 7-8 net lower, December 1.33½ to 1.35 5-8 and May 1.40 1-8 to 1-4, with corn 1-8 to 3-8 off; oats 1-4 to 1-2 down and provisions varying from 5c decline to 12 cents gain.

Although it had been predicted that the new Canadian crop figures would indicate a yield of only 250,000,000 bushels for the three prairie provinces as against a Government forecast of 267,000,000 bushels, the new private estimate totalled 265,000,000 bushels. As a result, the market opened here under considerable selling pressure and underwent a material set-back. On the downturn on price, buying increased, and rallies ensued. The rallies though failed to hold well, when buyers attempted to realize profits.

Demand for wheat appeared to come largely from houses with seaboard connections, but was confined to downturns. On the other hand a fresh estimate of wheat acreage in Argentina totalled 1,000,000 acres smaller than had generally been expected.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Sept. 17.—(Canadian Press).—The export business in grain here yesterday was reported to be much quieter owing to the fact that foreign buyers were not disposed to respond to the higher prices asked by the exporters overnight. There was a fairly good enquiry for Canadian Western barley from local exporters in the domestic market. A steady business continues to be done in spring wheat for export account and prices were unchanged. There was no change in the condition of the market for winter wheat flour, prices being well maintained. The trade in white corn flour was steady and prices were firm. There has been a very good demand from American buyers for all lines of mill feed here, and some sales of very large lines were made for September. October shipment at unchanged prices yesterday. There was no change in price of standard grades of rolled oats. A good business was done on baled hay yesterday and the tone of the market was steady.

There was no change in the local egg situation, prices being steady. A small volume of business was done in the butter market and prices were slightly easier. On moderate demand from foreign buyers, the cheese market was fairly active and prices were well maintained.

HASTINGS AND THE DISTRICT

Car Turns Turtle on the Hastings Road.

WEDDING BELLS

HASTINGS, Sept. 16.—A sedan car turned turtle in the road on Sunday after about a mile out of Hastings. The car was coming down a long grade and was being urged forward by another auto from the rear, and the driver not being able to slacken speed used considerable force on the brakes, the sudden jerk causing the car to turn over.

A lady occupant of the car had her shoulder broken. The auto was badly damaged but has since been taken back to Havelock where the owner lives.

Wedding Bells.

A very pretty wedding took place at St. Paul's Anglican Church, Lindsay, on Wednesday afternoon at 3:30, when Annie, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Langley, formerly of Hastings, became the bride of Mr. Clarence Blackborne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vr. Blackborne of Hastings. Rev. J. McConnchie performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given away by her eldest brother, Fred, was charmingly gowned in white crepe de chene with flowing veil which was fastened to the head by a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried pink Ophelia roses and wore the gift of the groom, a rope of pearls. The bride was attended by her sister, Rose, who was attired in powder blue crepe de chene with rose bud trimming and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. Two little girls acted as flower girls, Violet Langley, sister of the bride and Marjorie Blackborne sister of the groom, frocked in pale blue organdie, each carrying pale tinted bouquets of flowers and fern.

The groom was supported by Mr. Eddie Joyce of Lindsay.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a bar brooch in white gold set with pearls and to the groomsman a tie pin.

After the ceremony a wedding supper was served at the home of the bride's parents to about forty guests.

The bride's travelling suit was of navy blue poiret twill and black velvet hat. After the happy couple return from a trip to points east they will reside in Lindsay.

MUSKALUNGE FISHING AT FRENCH RIVER CAMP.

In the fall when the 'lunge become voracious and the life of a young fish is worth practically nothing, the fisherman comes into his own. Fighters to the last gasp, the 'lunge is the one fish that one prays, will rise to the plug or minnow and when he does—well, try and yawn. A hot shore dinner in the heart of the 'lunge territory, French River, a rest and then a recounting of the day's sport around the open fire, is something one never forgets.

The beauty of the woods in autumn, the snappy morning atmosphere when one's blood runs faster, good fishing, warm bungalows electrically lighted and a clubhouse with a huge fireplace, music, dancing—all these may be had at French River Bungalow Camp, which will remain open this year until October 15th, following the request of patrons of the camp. The camp is only 215 miles north of Toronto, and any Canadian Pacific agent will gladly supply all information, make your reservations, etc. An hour's communion with a hungry 'lunge is worth a life-time listening to the other fellow tell about it. Think it over.

The photograph was taken during the Western tour of the scientists, just concluded.

ORGANIZE FOR THE CAMPAIGN

Meeting of the Temperance Interests Held at Warkworth—Officers Elected.

By STAFF REPORTER.

WARKWORTH, Sept. 17.—Every municipality in East Northumberland was represented at a meeting of the temperance workers of the riding held here last night to organize for the plebiscite campaign, and the basement of the Town Hall was filled by friends of the cause, who unanimously endorsed the O. T. A. and pledged their support. The riding was organized and the following officers were elected: B. C. H. Becker of Brighton, President; Gordon Lapp, Brighton, Secretary; J. A. Irwin, Campbellford, Treasurer. Each municipality will form its own organization and chairmen for these branches were selected.

When the temperance workers of Northumberland finished their work in 1921, following on the vote then taken on the question of importation, and adjourned sine die, they were of the opinion that prohibition was a fixture in Ontario and that their labors on its behalf were ended. In a little over three years they find themselves again called to arms.

In 1921 the entire county was organized as a unit and Rev. W. A. Brenner of Cobourg was Chairman. It was felt at the time that on account of the size of the territory covered the organization was too cumberous. Anyway, the temperance forces this year are expected to organize along the lines of the Legislature ridings. West Northumberland has already got into fighting array, and now the east riding has followed the example.

The Meeting Last Night.

The meeting last night was called to order by B. C. H. Becker of Brighton, who has been appointed organizer for the riding, and W. J. Harper of Warkworth was called to the chair. On motion of Rev. A. K. McLeod of Brighton, seconded by E. Nelson of Murray Township, a committee composed of one resident of each municipality was appointed to nominate permanent officers. Those selected were: J. A. Irwin of Campbellford, Rev. W. A. Moore of Colborne, George Bowen of Percy, R. C. Doxsee of Hastings, E. Nelson of Murray, B. C. H. Becker of Brighton, Fred Barnum of Seymour and M. Murphy of Cramhe. The committee retired, and in a short time returned, recommending that the permanent officers be the three whose names are given above. The report was adopted and Mr. Becker took the chair.

Municipal Chairmen.

The chairmen chosen for the different municipalities were as follows: Campbellford, W. J. Armstrong; Brighton Village, W. Bellamy; Colborne, F. M. Brintnell; Warkworth, W. J. Harper; Hastings, R. C. Doxsee; Murray, E. Nelson; Seymour, Rev. D. C. Daniels; Crambe, S. A. Clarke; Brighton Township, J. J. Milton.

Fred. Barnum was first nominated to represent Seymour, but his amendment that the position go to Mr. Daniels was carried.

Campaign Outlined.

There was a long discussion as to what lines should be followed in the coming campaign. Rev. J. T. S. Wilson of Brighton believed that a personal canvass, rather than public meetings, are needed. While meetings may be inspiring, it is the canvass that gets the votes. The arguments used by the antis this time are more subtle than ever, and the temperance people are confronted by a situation they have never faced before. There are some former members of the party who believe that prohibition has been a failure, and these are the ones the workers must try to convince to the contrary. Every available vote will be needed to save prohibition.

Power of the Press.

Rev. Wesley Elliott of Campbellford believed in using the press right up to the last day of the campaign so as to be able to meet any roorbacks that the liquor party might spring.

The general opinion was that a great deal depended on the women voters, and it was proposed to hold meetings for the ladies exclusively, as well as mixed gatherings.

Rev. G. S. Hammond of Warkworth said that in Percy Township it had been decided to bring in speakers who would stay a week each and who would hold a meeting for women only every afternoon.

The arrangement finally agreed to was to hold a series of public meetings, as well as to carry on a vigorous personal campaign.

Votes Are Needed.

On taking the chair, Mr. Becker, selected as head of the general organization, said that there is sentiment enough in the Province to uphold prohibition by an overwhelming majority, but it is votes that are needed as all the sentiment in the world would not carry an election. The temperance people must not be over-confident; every vote in the country districts is needed as the cities will go strongly against the O. T. A.

J. A. Irwin of Campbellford said he believed the people as a rule are well satisfied with the Act, and that in time it will be enforced.

Ministers Speak.

Short addresses were made by every minister present, these including Revs. S. A. Kemp and G. S. Hammond of Warkworth; Revs. D. A. Thomson and H. M. Hinton of Hastings; Revs. J. S. I. Wilson and A. H. McLeod of Brighton; C. F. McIntosh and Rev. Wesley Elliott of Campbellford; W. A. Moore, Colborne; H. W. Folley, Hilton; J. R. Bick, Wooler; J. Beckel, Castleton; J. Everson, Norham, and C. D. Daniels of the Seymour circuit.

Just before the meeting adjourned Alex. Winter submitted a resolution, which was seconded by Mr. Wilson of Brighton, endorsing the Ontario Temperance Act. This was carried unanimously.

Percy Organized.

The work of organizing the municipalities will now be taken up. Percy has already taken the lead, the officers in that township being: W. J. Harper, President; Mrs. T. Allen, Secretary; Mrs. Wm. Barringer, Treasurer.

There is no doubt as to the interest that is being taken in the coming plebiscite by the people. The large attendance last night and the keen interest taken in the discussion was taken by the leaders as an encouraging sign. Among the audience were a large number of women, who followed the proceedings with the closest attention, although they took no active part.

INFORMAL LONDON LABOR CONFERENCE

To Be Held in British Capital To-morrow—Dominions Represented.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The Times' idea of upholding an Imperial Labor Conference in London this autumn had to be abandoned, because Colonel Creswell, Minister of Defence and Labor in the South African Government, and other prominent Labor leaders in the Dominions could not attend.

It has been decided, however, to take advantage of the presence of a number of Labor leaders in London and to hold an informal conference here to-morrow.

Hon. George Lansbury, Minister of Labor in the British House of Commons for the London Division of Poplar, Bow and Bromley, who is chairman of the Labor Commonwealth group, will preside at the conference to-morrow.

DRIVE IN CHINA TO TAKE PEKIN

Terrific Battle Raging In the North—Chang's Troops Advance.

INHABITANTS FLEE.

OSAKA, Japan, September 16. —A terrific battle raged to-day in the north of China where Chang Tso Lins Mukden troops came into contact with the Chili army of Wu Pei Fu on Monday.

The Manchuran war lord's forces were everywhere successful in the initial clash, according to the Ooka Mainichis correspondent who is on the battlefield.

Chang's troops now completely control the town of Patu Ying Tse, 12 miles east of the important city of Chao Yang where the fighting began.

This conflict in the north is the start of the Manchurian leader's drive for Pekin and of warfare that is likely to prove far more decisive in China's civil war than the fighting around Shanghai, the correspondent telegraphs. Chang Tso Lin denies taking the initiative.

The correspondent cables a dramatic picture of the confusion in the batle area which is within the border of Pei Chi Li province, as follows:

"Towns and villages in the vicinity have been completely deserted by their inhabitants who fled carrying household goods with them, as though avoiding a pestilence or an earthquake. Stations along the Pekin-Mukden Railway along which the fighting centres are crowded with refugees whose plight is pitiful.

"Shanghai Kwan, where the railroad pierces the great wall of China, had become the centre of the Chi Li forces. Three thousand trained fighting men already have arrived from the capital. Their stolid demeanor contrasts with the terror of the refugees.

"Wu Pei Fu is rushing his troops northward All available troops north of Tien Tsin are expected to arrive at Shau Hai Pwan within a few days. The Chi Li forces will number about 30,000 at this point. A desperate and decisive battle is expected to take place soon at this important railway point, and it is here that the fate of Wu Pei Fu or Chang Tso Lin probably will be settled.

"Another centre of battle will be Jehol, where 2,000 Wu Pei Fu troops are concentrated."

NURSES BOB HAIR.

All Right At Kingston Hospital To Have Your Hair Bobbed.

KINGSTON, Sept. 16— (Canadian Press).— There is no law against 'bobbed hair" among the Kingston nurses. In Ottawa, "bobbed hair," among nurses has been banned, but not so at the local institutions.

Inquiry made at the Kingston General Hospital showed that about one half of the nurses at that institution had their hair "bobbed". Miss Baillie superintendent of nurses said it did not go very well with the cap but it did not disqualify them. It is to be noted that Miss Baillie is not "bobbed," although she admitted that it looked well with some girls. At the Hotel Dieu there is no law on the question.

In Ottawa, the new three million dollar civic hospital, to be opened shortly, has printed across the bottom of nurses' application forms for positions on the staff, a note stating specifically that applicants having their hair bobbed will not be admitted. It is stated that the majority of the hospitals in the capital have a similar regulation but that in many cases it has not been enforced.

"For years before I learned of Tanlac I was in such an awful run-down condition that at times I would get so weak and nervous I couldn't do my house work. I was down to almost a skeleton and still losing weight all the time. Headaches nearly drove me mad and I had a sickly, sallow complexion.

SECURE CURRENT FROM MINERALS

Inexhaustible Stock of Electricity Discovered by a Denver Man.

By MARK H. KNIGHTS

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 17.—(United Press).—Invented, and awaiting only perfection, according to F. R. Woodward, is a method of extracting the inexhaustible electrical energy of the earth and distributing it among all civilized nations.

"When my method of extracting electricity from mineral viens of the earth is perfected," Woodward said, "all the wheels of industry, all the light and heat required to provide the luxuriies required by a billion persons, will be furnished by storage batteries perpetually charged from beneath the earth's surface.

Although an angle Woodward has not studied in his 25 years of experimentation with harnessing the earth's untold electrical energy, he said he believed transmission of the power would be carried by wireless.

Transmit by Wireless.

"I have no doubt," the inventor of the electrical storage battery process declared, "that within a few decades—possibly by the time my idea is developed to the practical stage—all long distance electrical transmission will be done by wireless."

At the present, Woodward believes, his process has become practical for individual home use. "In the near future," he told his interviewer, "I intend to demonstrate the practicability of furnishing electric lights and power for a home from storage batteries charged by the earth."

Guarded Secret.

Although Woodward still guards closely the secret of his process, he said that several electrical engineers are familiar with his experiments and can testify to the reliability of his statements.

Woodward has for 38 years worked in mines of Colorado. Twenty-five years ago, he said, an accidental discovery of electrical energy emitted by a rich vein of gold and silver ore, started him on the path of research which has led his present announcement.

"I am not at liberty at this time to tell much of my experiments," Woodward said. "Nor can I give the location of the ground where I have carried on my experiments and I still am working.

"Electrical energy comes from the rays of the sun, and is distributed throughout the earth. Naturally, the energy follows the path of least resistance, and this path is mineralized.

"Gold, silver and copper are natural conductors of electricity, and therefore carry the largest charges. I have been successful in taking the electricity from such veins and storing it in a battery. The earth offers an inexhaustible supply of electrical energy—a supply that never can fail."

FLOAT BIG LOAN.

Rumors of $100,000,000 Loan To Meet Victory Bonds and Treasury Bills.

OTTAWA, Sept. 16.— (Canadian Press).— Rumours are current here of the early announcement of a Dominion Domestic Loan especially to meet maturing Victory Bonds and to take up Treasury Bills. The rumour gives $100,000,000 as the figure of the Domestic Loan with an interest rate of probably 4½ per cent.

A total $200,000,000 is required to be raised to meet the Victory Bonds and Treasury Bills. The Balance over the Domestic Loan would probably be floated in New York.

There is at present no official confirmation of the rumour.

HARD LONG WINTER SAYS U. S. RANGER

Blackbirds and Deer Among Harbingers of Severe Weather.

YELLOWSTONE PARK, Wyo., Sept. 17.—(United Press).—It's going to be an early winter and a hard one, says Joe Douglas, old timer and weather sharp.

Joe ought to know the signs, and he says they all point to it. Joe is a ranger at the Yellowstone Lake station, and his keen eyes have been observing things in this part of the world—particularly the ways of nature and nature's children, the birds and animals—for many years.

"The blackbirds are flocking together earlier than usual; the deer are already coming down from the high places; the squirrels are unusually active; ducks are glying in formation, like they were getting ready to go south; the coyotes are howling nights, and everything points to an early winter and a long, cold one," says Joe.

Cold Nights.

"Doug" says he never say a summer when the nights were so uniformly cold as this year. No Yellowstone visitor has suffered from hot nights.

Every month this year snow has fallen in the park. Even June, July and August had their snowstorms, out of which tourist visitors got quite a thrill. Singularly, these summer blizzards weer almost exactly a month apart, the first occurring on June 19, the next on July 21, and the third on August 20. Each time a considerable snowfall occurred in the higher altitudes, the mountain peaks being deeply covered, and the whole territory around the canyon having from half an inch to two inches of snow.

Sam Woodring, chief park ranger, doesn't share "Doug's" fear of an early winter, but just the same, he is making his winter plans, getting his ranger force organized for the long, cold spell when the permanent ranger force will hunt down predatory animals and look out for poachers.

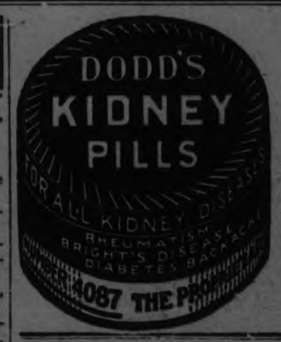
DEBATE FREEDOM OF FREE SPEECH

French Cabinet Faces Charge of Abetting Bolshevism.

PARIS, Sept. 17.—Whether the right of free speech ought to be interpreted liberally enough to permit extremists to preach civil war, is a question that will be debated in parliament when the Chamber of Deputies convenes after the summer vacation.

The opposition to M. Herriot's government will endeavor, in this discussion, to rally to it a considerable number of deputies now supporting the cabinet, but who are the enemies of subversive agitation. The question will arise on the interpellation of M. Bonnefous of the Seine et Cise department; this deputy will demand of the government an explanation of the action of the Minister of Public Works in placing 15 special trains at the disposal of Communists who met recently in the suburb of Garches, where the doctrine of civil war was preached openly by several orators, including a Communist member of the German Reichstag.

The adversaries of the government will take the view that official tolerance of such manifestations is outright encouragement of Bolshevism.



ATTACK CORSETS TO REMAIN FREE

Fashion Editor Declares That Waists Should Be Kept Low For Comfort's Sake.

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, N.Y., Sept. 17.—(United Press).—

Slender waists are in they say
Bring on reducers and the corset stay!

Now is the time for all good women to come to the aid of the low waistline! For high waists are slowly but surely creeping back into style again. And that means corsets! And discomfort! and eventually perhaps the hideous hourglass figure.

Waistlines seem to be following the 'high water' vogue set by hems, bobs, sleeves and what not, but rather endure the high cost of living, my dears, than a high waistline. Should the normal waistline actually return there will be weeping and wailing and rolling on floors for most of us will find that we have curves that we never suspected when we tie a string belt about our no-longer wasp-like equators. We will appear as matronly as our mothers. We will have to shorten our paces when dancing with the young sheiks of our own age ere we disclose to onlookers too clumsy hips.

We will face a Winter of stravation with flapper figures as our goal. And even the flappers will turn away the dish of marshmallow ice-cream as they begin to add up their callories. Maiden ladies with clothespin figures will look like 1924 Belles compared to many of us "under-twenties" who have been breathing deeply through uncorseted diaphgrams these last few years.

Collapsible 'Fronts'

Even now we find the "collapsible" figure making its appearance, the figures with the straight "back" line and the collapsible "front" effect.

Those who can manage the collapsible front are in luck as many of us lack the powers of the contortionist. However, we see among the recent sponsors of the high-waist line, girls, who manage to flatten out the cupid-like abdomen at a women's notice. Of course, one can flatten the front figure somewhat by standing up straightly with shoulders erect but that is bound to add 'chest' to one's figure—a disastrous effect in these days of prominent shoulder blades and flat chests.

Watch the Mirrors.

Let your mirrors be your guides, my sisters! If you wish to remain uncorseted stick to the low waistline or the beltless frock. For if we begin to develop waistlines again we will surely return to the long-boned corset which restricts our freedom while restricting our surplus avoirdupois. Why go back to the days when we tied our corset strings to the doorknob as we pulled like dray horses in the opposite direction?

None but the brave deserve the—highwaistline. And certainly none but the very slender will attempt to elevate the waist which now occurs any place between the knees and the hips. Women have not dressed so sensibly in years as they do now, with the entire weight of frocks falling from the shoulders and with no confinement about the body which restricts its natural freedom. Also women have never appeared so youthful in figure. Even very stout persons have achieved a straightline effect in the modern silhouette where formerly, in years past, they bulged out like potatoes from the Great Northwest. It has been said, by designers who are urging resumption of the high waistline that tube-shaped frocks make all women look exactly alike. This may be true but if we return to pinched-in waistlines every girl will look like her own bother, in figure, at least.

NEWS OF BAILIEBORO

New Fall Wheat Crop is Being Planted—Foxes Hard on Chickens.

BAILIEBORO, Sept. 17.—The recent rains have moistened the soil and put the land in excellent condition for the farmers to plough and work in shape for their fall wheat. Throughout this district is a large quantity of fall wheat being sowed. Some farmers already have quite a lot of their land sowed, while others have not got any sowed as yet. There will be a large quantity of the fall wheat sowed next week, if the weather continues favorable.

Buckwheat which is an excellent crop this year in these parts, will be in good shape to commence to cut the latter part of the week. Throughout South Menaghan there is a large acreage to harvest.

The season for cutting corn is somewhat later this season than usual. Very few of the farmers will fill their silos before the week after next or next week at the earliest.

There is not a big crop of plums this year. The majority of orchards are only growing enough to supply the owners' needs.

Tomatoes seem to be a good crop and splendid quality this season, and in most cases are selling out of the fields at seventy-five cents per bushel.

Chickens Killed.

Many of the farmers residing in this district have been troubled greatly with their fowl disappearing from the farm yards, and surrounding fences that the chickens use to roost on. W. Hibbard had the misfortune to loose fifteen of his peking ducklings, and he blames this work on foxes which he claims to have seen prowling near his barn. R. Falls lost eight or ten fine spring roosters, and found the dead birds laying around a field a considerable distance from the fence on which they had been roosting. Mr. Falls thinks possibly that a number of skunks had located the chickens and killed them during the night.

GOOD BUSINESS

An indication that Canadian-made furniture is gaining fame in far-away lands is contained in a letter received by the Kroehler Manufacturing Co., of Stratford, from its representatives in England, announcing the sale to Her Royal Highness, Princess Fatma Fazil, of Cairo, Egypt, of a Kroehler Davenport Bed. The Krochler exhibit at Wembley, which was the place of this sale, attracted careful inspection by members of the British Royal family, including Queen Mary the Prince of Wales and the Duchess of York. The company reports "some nice business" as the result of exhibiting at Wembley.

With the servants who met them in the hall they dealt in the same swift silent fashion as they had dealt with the gatekeeper, and such was the speed and caution of their movements that Sir John and his company had no suspicion of their presence until the door of the dining-room crashed open before their eyes.

The sight which they beheld was one that for some moments left them mazed and bewildered. They imagined that here was some mummery, some surprise prepared for the bridal couple by Sir John's tenants or the folk of Smithick and Penycumwick, and were encouraged in this belief by the circumstance that not a single weapon gleamed in all that horde of outlandish intruders. Although they came full-armed against any eventualities, yet by their leader's orders not a blade was bared. What was to do was to be done with their naked hands alone and without bloodshed. Such were the orders of Sakr-el-Bahr, and Sakr-el-Bahr's were not orders to be disregarded.

Himself he stood forward at the head of that legion of brown-skinned men arrayed in all the colors of the rainbow, their heads swathed in turbans of every hue. He considered the company in grim silence, and the company in amazement considered this turbaned giant with the masterful face that was tanned to the color of mahogany, the black forked beard, and those singularly light eyes glittering like steel under his black brows.

Thus a little while in silence, then with a sudden gasp Lionel Tressilian sank back in his tall chair as if bereft of strength.

The agate eyes flashed upon him, smiling cruelly.

"I see that you, at least, recognize me," said Sakr-el-Bahr in his deep voice. "I was assured I could depend upon the eyes of brotherly love to pierce the change that time and stress have wrought in me."

Sir John was on his feet, his lean, swarthy face flushing darkly, an oath on his lips. Rosamund sat on as if frozen with horror, considering Sir Oliver with dilating eyes, whilst her hands clawed the table before her. They, too, recognized him now and realized that here was no mummery. That something sinister was intended Sir John could not for a moment doubt. But of what that something might be he could form no notion. It was the first time that Barbary rovers were seen in England. That famous raid of their upon Baltimore in Ireland did not take place until some thirty years after this date.

"Sir Oliver Tressilian!" Killigrew gasped, and—

"Sir Oliver Tressilian!" echoed Lord Henry Goade.

"Not Sir Oliver Tressilian," came the answer, "but Sakr-el-Bahr, the scourge of the sea, the terror of Christendom, the desperate corsair your lies, cupidity and false heartedness have fashioned out of a some time Cornish gentleman." He embraced them all in his denunciatory gesture. "Behold me here with my sea-hawks to present a reckoning long overdue."

Sir John leapt to snatch a weapon from the armored walls.

Sakr-el-Bahr barked out a single word in Arabic, and at that word a half dozen of his supple blackamoors sprang upon the knight like greyhounds upon a hare and bore him writhing to the ground.

Rosamund, white to the lips, continued to look on, whilst Lionel, overcome, covered his face with his hands in sheer horror. One and all of them expected to see some ghastly deed of blood performed there, coldly and callously as the wringing of a capon's neck. But no such thing took place. The corsairs merely turned Sir John upon his face, dragging his wrists behind him to make them fast, and having performed that duty with a speedy, silent dexterity they abandoned him.

Sakr-el-Bahr watched their performance with those grimly smiling eyes of his. When it was done he spoke again and pointed to Lionel, who leaped up in sudden terror with a cry that was entirely inarticulate. Lithe brown arms encircled him like a legion of snakes. Powerless, he was lifted in the air and borne swiftly away. For an instant he found himself held face to face with his turbaned brother. Into that pallid, terror stricken human mask the renegade's eyes stabbed like two daggers Then deliberately and after the fashion of the Moslem he was become he spat upon it.

"Away!" he growled, and through the press of corsairs that thronged the hall behind him a lane was swiftly opened and Lionel was swallowed up, lost to the view of those within the room.

"What murderous deed do you intend?" cried Sir John indomitably.

He had risen and stood grimly dignified in his bonds.

"Will you murder your own brother as you murdered mine?" demanded Rosamund, speaking now for the first time, and rising as she spoke, a faint flush coming to overspread her pallor.

She saw him wince; she saw the mocking lustful anger perish in his face, leaving it vacant for a moment. Then it became grim again with a fresh resolve. Her words had altered all the current of his intentions. They fixed in him a dull, fierce rage. They silenced the explanations which he was come to offer and which he scorned to offer here after that taunt.

"It means you love that—whelp, that thing that was my brother," he said, sneering. "I wonder will you love him still when you come to be better acquainted with him? Though, faith, naught would surprise me in a woman and her love. Yet I am curious to see—curious to see.

He laughed.

"I have a mind to gratify myself. I will not separate you—not just yet."

He advanced upon her.

"Come thou with me, lady," he commanded, and held out his hand.

Face to face stood now Sir Oliver with Rosamund—face to face after five long years, and he realized that in every moment of that time the certainty had never departed from him of some such future meeting.

"Come, lady," he bade her sternly.

A moment she looked at him with hate and loathing in the clear depths of her deep blue eyes. Then swiftly as lightning she snatched a knife from the board and drove it at his heart. But his hand moved as swiftly to seize her wrist, and the knife clattered to the ground, its errand unfulfilled.

A shuddering sob escaped her then to express at once her horror of her own attempt and of the man who held her. That horror mounting until it overpowered her, she sank suddenly against him in a swoon.

Instinctively his arms went round her, and a moment he held her thus, recalling the last occasion on which she had lain against his breast, on an evening five years and more ago under the gray wall of Godolphin Court above the river.

He shifted his grip to her waist, heaved her to his mighty shoulder as though she was a sack of grain and swung about, his business at Arwenack accomplished—indeed, more of it accomplished than had been his intent, and also something less.

"Away, away!" he cried to his rovers, and away they sped as fleetly and silently as they had come, no man raising now so much as a voice to hinder them

Through the hall and across the courtyard flowed that human tide. Out into the open and along the crest of the hill it surged, then away down the slope toward the beach where their boats awaited them. Sakr-el-Bahr ran as lightly as though the swooning woman he bore were no more than a cloak he had flung across his shoulder. Ahead of him went a half dozen of his fellows carrying his gagged and pinioned brother.

Once only before they dipped from the heights of Arwenack did Oliver check. He paused to look across the dark shimmering water to the woods that screened the house of Penarrow from his view. It had been part of his purpose to visit it, as we know. But the necessity had now been removed, and he was conscious of a pang of disappointment, of a hunger to look again upon his home. But to shift the current of his thoughts just then came two of his officers—Othmani and Ali, who had been muttering one with the other. As they overtook him, Othmani set now a hand upon his arm and pointed down toward the twinkling lights of Smithick and Penycumwick.

"My lord," he cried, "there will be lads and maidens there should fetch fat prices in the Sok-el-Abeed."

"No doubt," said Sakr-el-Bahr, scarce heeding him; heeding, indeed, little in this world but his longings to look upon Penarrow.

"Why, then, my lord, shall I take fifty True Believers and make a raid upon them? It were an easy task, all unsuspicious as they must be of our presence."

Sakr-el-Bahr came out of his musings.

"Othmani," said he, "art a fool, the very father of fools, else wouldst thou have come to know by now that those who once were of my own race, those of the land from which I am sprung, are sacred to me. Here we take no slave but those we have. On, then, in the name of Allah!"

But Othmani was not yet silenced.

"And is our perilous voyage across these unknown seas into this far heathen land to be rewarded by no more than just these two captives? Is that a raid worthy of Sakr-el-Bahr?"

"But reflect, my lord; there is another who will judge. How shall our Basha, the glorious Asad-ed-Din, welcome thy return with such poor spoils as these? What questions will he set thee, and what account shalt thou render him for having imperilled the lives of all these True-Believers upon the seas for so little profit?"

"He shall ask me what he pleases, and I shall answer what I please and as Allah prompts me. On, I say!"

And on they went, Sakr-el-Bahr conscious now of little but the warmth of that body upon his shoulder and knowing not, so tumultuous were his emotions, whether it fired him to love or hate.

They gained the beach; they reached the ship, whose very presence had continued unsuspected. The breeze was fresh and they stood away at once. By sunrise there was no more sign of them than there had been at sunset, there was no more clue to the way they had taken than to the way they had come. It was as if they had dropped from the skies in the night upon the Cornish coast, and but for the mark of their swift, silent passage, but for the absence of Rosamund and Lionel Tressilian the thing must have been accounted no more than a dream of those few who had witnessed it.

Aboard the carack, Sakr-el-Bahr bestowed Rosamund in the cabin over the quarter, taking the precaution to lock the door that led to the sternalley. Lionel he ordered to be dropped into a dark hole under the hatchway, there to lie and meditate upon the retribution that had overtaken him until such time as his brother should have determined upon his fate—for this was a matter upon which the renegade was still undecided.

Himself he lay under the stars that night and thought of many things. One of these things, which plays some part in the story, though it is probable that it played but a slight one in his thoughts, was begotten Othmani had used. What, indeed, would be Asad's welcome of him on his return if he sailed into Algiers with nothing more to show for that long voyage and the imperilling of the lives of two hundred True-Believers than just those two captives whom he intended, moreover to retain for himself? What capital would not be made out of that circumstance by his enemies in Algiers and by Asad's Sicilian wife, who hated him with all the bitterness of a hatred that had its roots in the fertile soil of jealousy?

This may have spurred him in the cool dawn to a very daring and desperate enterprise which Destiny sent his way in the shape of a tall-masted Dutchman homeward bound. He gave chase, for all that he was full conscious that the battle he invited was one of which his corsairs had no experience, and one upon which they must have hesitated to venture with another leader than himself. But the star that never led to aught but victory, and their belief in him, the very javelin of Allah, overcame any doubts that may have been begotten of finding themselves upon an unfamiliar craft and on a rolling, unfamiliar sea.

This fight is given in great detail by my Lord Lenry from the particulars afforded him by Jasper Leigh. But it differs in no great particular from other sea fights, and it is none of my purpose to surfeit you with such recitals. Enough to say that it was stern and fierce, entailing great loss to both combatants; that cannon played little part in it, for, knowing the quality of his men, Sakr-el-Bahr made haste to run in and grapple. He prevailed, of course, as he must ever prevail by the very force of his personality and the might of his example. He was the first to leap aboard the Dutchman, clad in mail and whirling his great scimitar, and his men poured after him shouting his name and that of Allah in a breath.

Such was ever his fury in an engagement that it infected and inspired his followers. It did so now, and the shrewd Dutchman came to perceive that this heathen horde was as a body to which he supplied the brain and soul. They attacked him fiercely in groups, intent at all costs upon cutting him down, convinced almost by instinct that were he felled the victory would easily be theirs. And in the end they succeeded. A Dutch pike broke some links of his mail and dealt him a flesh wound which went unheeded by him in his fury; a Dutch rapier found the breach thus made in his defences and went through it to stretch him bleeding upon the deck. Yet he staggered up, knowing as fully as they that if he succumbed then all was lost. Armed now with a short axe which he had found under his hand when he went down, he hacked a way to the bulwarks, set his back against the timbers, and hoarse of voice, ghastle of face, spattered with the blood of his wound, he urged on his men until the victory was theirs—and this was fortunately soon. And then, as if he had been sustained by no more than the very force of his will, he sank down in a heap among the dead and wounded huddled against the vessel's bulwarks.

Grief-stricken, his corsairs bore him back aboard the carack. Were he to die then was their victory a barren one indeed. They laid him on a couch prepared for him amidships on the main deck, where the vessel's pitching was least discomfitting. A Moorish surgeon came to tend him and pronounced his hurt a grievous one, but not so grevious as to close the gates of hope.

This pronouncement gave the corsairs all the assurance they required. It could not be that the Gardener would already pluck so fragrant a fruit from Allah's garden. The Pitiful must spare Sakr-el-Bahr to continue the glory of Islam.

Yet they were come to the straits of Gibraltar before his fever abated and he recovered complete consciousness, to learn of the final issue of that hazardous fight into which he had led those children of the Prophet.

The Dutchman, Othmani informed him, was following in their wake, with Ali and some others aboard her, steering ever in the wake of the carack, which continued to be navigated by that Nasrani dog, Jasper Leigh.

When Sakr-el-Bahr learned the value of the capture, when he was informed that in addition to a hundred able-bodied men under the hatches, to be sold as slaves in the Sok-el-Abeed, there was a cargo of gold and silver, pearls, amber, spices and ivory, and such lesser matters as gorgeous silken fabrics, rich beyond anything that had ever been seen upon the seas at any one time, he felt that the blood he had shed had not been wasted.

Let him sail safely into Algiers with these two ships, both captured in the name of Allah and his Prophet, one of them an argosy so richly fraught, a floating treasure house, and he need have little fear of what his enemies and the crafty, evil Sicilian woman might have wrought against him in his absence.

Then he made inquiry touching his two English captives, to be informed that Othmani had taken charge of them and that he had continued the treatment meted out to them by Sakr-el-Bahr himself when first they were brought aboard.

He was satisfied and fell into a gentle healing sleep, whilst on the decks above his followers rendered thanks to Allah the Pitying the Pitiful, the Master of the Day of Judgment, who Alone is All-Wise, All-Knowing.

CHAPTER XIII

THE LION OF THE FAITH

Asad-ed-Din, the Lion of the Faith, Basha of Algiers, walked in the evening cool in the orchard of the Kasbah upon the heights above the city, and at his side, stepping daintily, came Fenzileh, his wife, the first lady of his harem, whom eighteen years ago he had carried off in his mighty arms from that little whitewashed village above the Straits of Messina which his lowers had raided.

She had been a lissom maid of eighteen in those far-off days, the child of humble peasant folk, and she had gone uncomplaining to the arms of her swarthy ravisher. To-day, at thirty-six, she was still beautiful, more beautiful, indeed, than when first she had fired the passion of Asad-Reis, as he then was, one of the captains of the famous Ali-Basha. There were streaks of red in her heavy black tresses, her skin was of a soft pearliness that seemed translucent, her eyes were large, of a golden brown, astream with sombre fires, her lips were full and sinuous. She was tall and of a shape that in Europe would have been accounted perfect, which is to say that she was a thought too slender for Oriental taste; she moved along beside her lord with a sinuous, languorous grace, gently stirring her fan of ostrich plumes. She was unveiled. Indeed, it was her immodest habit to go naked of face more often than was seemly, which is but the least of the many undesirable infidel ways which had survived her induction into the Faith of Islam—a necessary step before Asad, who was devout to the point of bigotry would consent to make her his wife.

He had found her such a wife as is certain he could never have procured at home; a woman who, not content to be his toy, the plaything of his idle hours, insinuated herself into affairs demanded and obtained his confidence, and exerted over him much the same influence as the wife of a European prince might exert over her consort. In the years during which he had lain under the spell of her ripening beauty he had accepted the situation willingly enough; later, when he would have curtailed her interferences, it was too late; she had taken a firm grip of the reins, and Asad was in no better case than many a European husband—an anomalous and outragcous condition this for a Basha of the Prophet's House.

It was also a dangerous one for Fenzileh, for should the burden of her at any time become too heavy for her lord there was a short and easy way by which he could be rid of it.

Dauntless was she now as she paced there in the cool of the orchard under the pink and white petals of the apricots, the flaming scarlet of pomegranate blossoms and through orange groves where the golden fruit glowed amid foliage of sombre green. She was at her eternal work of poisoning the mind of her lord against Sakr-el-Bahr, and in her maternal jealousy she braved the dangers of such an undertaking, fully aware of how dear to the heart of Asad-ed-Din was that absent renegade corsair. It was this very affection of the Basha's for his lieutenant that was the fomenter of her own hate of Sakr-el-Bahr, for it was an affection that transcended Asad's love for his own son and hers, and it led to the common rumor that for Sakr-el-Bahr was reserved the high destiny of succeeding Asad in the Bashalik.

"I tell thee thou'rt abused by him, O source of my life."

"I hear thee," answered Asad sourly. "And were thine own hearing less infirm, woman, thou wouldst have heard me answer thee that thy words weigh for naught with me against his deeds. Words may be but a mask upon our thoughts; deeds are ever the expression of them. Bear thou that in mind, O Fenzileh."

"Do I not bear in mind thine every word, O fount of wisdom?" she protested, and left him, as she often did, in doubt whether fawned or sneered. "And it is his deeds I would have speak for him, not indeed my poor words and still less his own."

"Then, by the head of Allah, let those same deeds speak, and be thou silent."

The harsh tone of his reproof and the scowl upon his haughty face, gave her pause for a moment. He turned about.

"Come!" he said. "Soon it will be the hour of prayer."

And he paced back toward the yellow hubble of walls of the Kasbah that overtopped the green of that fragrant place.

He was a tall, gaunt man, stooping slightly at the shoulders under the burden of his years; but his eagle face was masterful, and some lingering embers of his youth still glowed in his dark eyes. Thoughtfully, with a jewelled hand, he stroked his long white beard; with the other he leaned upon her soft, plump arm, more from habit than for support, for he was full vigorous still.

High in the blue overhead a lark burst suddenly into song, and from the depths of the orchard came a gentle murmur of doves as if returning thanks for the lessening of the great heat now that the sun was sinking rapidly toward the world's edge and the shadows were lengthening.

Came Fenzileh's voice again, more musical than either, yet laden with words of evil, poison wrapped in honey.

"O my dear lord, thou'rt angered with me now. Woe me! That never may I counsel thee for thine own glory as my heart prompts me, but I must earn thy coldness."

"Abuse not him I love," said the Basha shortly. "I have told thee so full often already."

She nestled closer to him, and her voice grew softer, more akin to the amorous cooing of the doves.

"And do I not love thee, O master of my soul? Is there in all the world a heart more faithful to thee than mine? Is not thy life my life? Have not my days been all devoted to the perfecting of thine happiness? And wilt thou, then, frown upon me if I fear for thee at the hands of an intruder of yesterday?"

"Fear for me?" he echoed, and laughed jeeringly. "What shouldst thou fear for me from Sakr-el-Bahr?"

"What all Believers must ever fear from one is no true Moslem, from one who makes a mock and travesty of the True Faith that he may gain advancement."

The Basha checked in his stride, and turned upon her angrily.

"May thy tongue rot, thou mother of lies!"

"I am as the dust beneath thy feet, O my sweet lord, yet am I not what thine heedless anger calls me."

"Heedless?" quoth he. "Not heedless but righteous to hear one whom the Prophet guards, who is the very Javelin of Islam against the breast of the unbeliever, who carries the scourge of Allah against the infidel Frankish pigs, so maligned by thee! No more, I say! Lest I bid thee make good thy words, and pay the liar's price if thou shouldst fail."

"And should I fear the test?" she countered, nothing daunted. "I tell thee, O father of Marzak, that I should hail it gladly. Why, hear me now. Thou settest store by deeds, not words. Tell me, then, is it the deed of a True-Believer to waste substance upon infidel slaves, to purchase them that he may set them free?"

They were much more interested in the Prince than in polo.

HOLLAND OUT TO TELL THE WORLD

Antiquated Ideas of the Land of Dykes Will Be Officially Exploded.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 17.—Antiquated ideas about Holland that prevail abroad, and often move the present generation of Dutch people to mild resentment, have at last been tracked to their origin.

A learned society which has made a thorough investigation into the current geographical text books and manuals used in elementary and secondary schools in all civilized countries of the world, has published a report which discloses that most of them are about 100 years behind the times.

Horse drawn canal barges, for instance, are still given as the popular mode of locomotion in Holland, and while references to cows and windmills are plentiful, the books are silent on the development of modern Dutch dairy farming and other industries of the country. In one instance, a text book drew a picture of Dutch conditions as they existed 300 years ago.

The society in question has appointed a committee to remedy this state of things by vigorous efforts abroad to bring knowledge about present-day Holland somewhat more up to date.

DRIFT FOR YEARS ON ARCTIC OCEAN

Explorer Will Set Out With Seven Years' Supply Of Food.

WASHINGTON, September 17. — (Special.)—A trip of 2700 miles through the pack ice the Arctic from Bering Sea across the North Pole to Spitzbergen, is being planned by Robert A. Bartlett, the explorer.

He hopes to raise $100,000, build the kind of ship he wants at Seattle, and sail forth in the spring with a crew of ten hardy men, most of them Newfoundland fishermen, who are accustomed to cold, and two scientists to look after the laboratories and the specimens of flora and fauna.

His experiences on the Coast Guard Cutter Bear in Alaskan waters this summer and his previous studies of water currents and ice drifts, have convinced him that he can float by the polar tides over the North Pole, and to a point in Spitzberg, where he can make it back to civilization.

Bartlett estimates that it would require three to five years to make the voyage, and that to be on the safe side he would need to carry provisions for seven years, a larger amount of provisions than has ever been taken on an expedition of this kind and size before.

LUNGE AND BASS LEAVE OTONABEE

Carnivorous Pickerel Responsible For Extinction Say Fishermen.

RICE LAKE AFFECTED

Fishermen are learning with regret that the Otonabee River below Peterboro is gradually becoming bereft of its bass and 'lunge, particularly the latter.

Their extinction in this part of the River is attributed to the pickerel, whose effect is noticeable even in Rice Lake, where, it is claimed, the 'lunge are scarcer this year than ever before.

According to H. B. Rye, who is closely in touch with the movements of anglers in this section of the Trent waters, pickerel eat the young 'lunge and bass. Good-sized pickerel have been caught with 7-inch mud cats in their stomachs, and any fish that will tackle a catfish will go after anything.

Mr. W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., said that some pickerel fry were placed in Rice Lake a few years ago. However, the real source of the Otonabee's supply with pickerel is the Bay of Quinte. Since the lock was opened five years ago, pickerel have been gradually wending their way to the north.

Three years ago, they were very plentiful at Hastings, and not until this year were they numerous here. In May and June, the Otonabee was swarmed with a large number of anglers every evening, and hundreds of pickerel were caught. Strange too, at this time very seldom were 'lunge or bass caught, when the pickerel were swarming up the Otonabee.

As another evidence of the destructive forces of the pickerel, anglers have noticed that the droves of minnows that in other years could be seen coming up the Otonabee along the sand banks have presumably disappeared. The conclusion drawn is that the carnivorous pickerel destroyed the minnows before their accustomed migration up stream.

Bass and 'lunge are the game fish, the kind that attract the tourists. They are certainly the anglers' delight, while the long-nosed pickerel is not a fighter, and figure little better than suckers in the estimation of some fishermen. No doubt in time they will become plentiful in Stoney, Pigeon, Clear and other northern lakes, and with the result that the chief attraction to the influx of tourists that annually come to this district will be lost. 'Lunge and bass are none too plentiful now, and the pickerel are without doubt responsible for their marked decrease in the Otonabee.

It hardly seems possible that a remedy could be affected that would result in the extinction of pickerel in these parts, but it could be done. Mr. Rye opined that by netting the fish as they come up the locks in the spring and throwing the bass and 'lunge out, the pickerel could be caught. In the early months they always go up stream, and it seems reasonable that without a great cost the Government could take this measure, to protect the bass and 'lunge, the greatest allurement to the tourist in these waters.

This year bass fry were placed in Stoney, Pigeon, Otonabee and Chemong Lakes by the Provincial Government.

This one remedial measure to save the 'lunge and bass has been suggested. Probably there are others who have opinions on this matter.

CARE URGED UPON TRADES CONGRESS

Brownlee, Representing British Labor, Declares For Caution.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press). —Fraternal greetings to Canadian Labor men from their fellow workers in Great Britain and United States were conveyed to-day to the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress by J. P. Brownlee, representing the British Trade Union; Walter Britain of the American Association of Labor and Miss Mabel Leslie of the Womens' Trade Union of America.

Mr. Brownlee brought a strong message from overseas. He outlined the progress of the labor movement in Great Britain during the last generation and urged the younger men of the congress to give thoughtful consideration to the efforts of the older men who have built up Trades Unionism before they attempted a change to a new order of which they knew little.

NAVAJOES GROWING WITHOUT GOVT. AID

Only Indian Tribe Showing Any Increase in Population.

NAVAJO, Colo., Sept. 13 (United Press).—With the financial assistance given all other tribes of Indians in the United States, and on probably the poorest land occupied by any, the Navajoes present the remarkable paradox of being the only tribe showing a steady increase in population.

Battling the combined forces of jagged sterile mountain flats, drouth and a government with which they have never treated for peace, the Navajo Indians present the most striking example of thrift in the nation to-day.

From the cliff dwellings of Mesa Verde, where their forefathers of thousands of years ago somehow eked out a livelihood, down into the desert regions of Arizona, the Navajoes till their dry farm lands, while women of the tribe turn out a considerable portion of the livelihood with their nationally famous Navajo blankets, pottery and trinkets.

In the generations since the white men began to encroach on lands of the Indians, treaties have been negotiated everywhere but in the Navajo section. So worthless are the Navajo lands that no attempt has ever been made in Washington to reach an agreement to obtain their property.

Theoretically, peace has never been declared between the Navajoes and the United States Government. No thought of hostilities has existed on either side for decades, however. Peaceful by nature, the Navajoes have never waged warfare on their white neighbors.

Yet, while other tribes fast dwindle and decay, the Navajoes prosper on their meagre holdings, making the scanty living which is all they desire, residing in contentment unknown to the others, and steadily increasing in numbers.

World Is Reeking With Stench of Civilization Says Bishop, Who Declares He Is An Optimist

TORONTO, September 17. — Ignorance and the neglect of religious truth was characterized by the Right Rev. Jos. Schrembs, Bishop of Cleveland, at a meeting of the Catholic Truth Society in Columbus Hall last night, as a fundamental evil of the day. This ignorance and neglect he said, was reflected in the decadence of civilization. "The world is reeking," exclaimed the Bishop, "with the stench of our so-called modern civilization. The general unwholesomeness was mirrored in the modern press, with its chronicles of murder and horrible crimes, in the phosphorescences of an obscene and loose stage man had forgotten God, His law and His revelation," he continued.

Comparing the decadence of the twentieth century with that which resulted in the fall of Greek and Roman civilization, Bishop Schrembs pointed out the possibility of a similar fate overtaking present day culture. "Yet," said the speaker, "I am not a pessimist, but an optimist. I merely recognize a state of affairs which must be righted."

Six Natives Killed In Religious Strife—Troops Called Out.

ALLAHABAD, India, Sept. 17. — (Canadian Press Cable, via Reuter's —The possibility of further trouble in India, because of the recent race rioting in Kohat, where three Moslams and three Hindus were killed, is indicated in despatches form Lucknow, where the opposing religions are on the verge of an outbreak because of the news which has been coming through that many people were killed in the riots. Hindus are leaving their homes and going in hiding. British and native troops are controlling the situation at Kohat now and the curfew is being enforced for all except European residents.

CATTLE MARKET LOW AND DRAGGY

16,000 Head Held Over From Yesterday in Toronto—Hogs and Lambs Steady.

TORONTO, Sept. 17. — In the cattle market, 16,000 were held over from yesterday when the market was low and dragging, with the buyers showing little interest in the offerings. Just a few hundred head were weighed up at noon. Exporters were taking a few to fill out. Exporters brought up to $7.25 with some bulls at $3.75 to $4; stockers and steers are moving slowly. Prices for light heifers $3.60 and $5 for steers of fair weight. Good class of steers brought $5. The calf trade opened slowly with prices for good ones ranging from $10 to $11 per cwt, grass calves selling at $4.25.

The hog market was steady, $10 to $10.25 being paid for slick, smooth and select off car bringing $11 to $11.25.

Lambs were slow and steady ranging from $11.75 to $12 Good breeders brought up to $8 for butcher sheep and $6.50 for killers to $8 for colored.

THE CONSTABLE WAS SURE HE WAS RIGHT

PARIS (United Press.—"Perhaps he's not dead; he may be alive still."

So starts the chorus of an old French song that children sing at picnics, and all French people know it. It is a story of a man hanging himself, and various officials, appealing one to the other, cannot go to his aid because they cannot establish whether he is dead or alive, and a solemn question of authority is at stake.

And now it has happened. Charles Deschamps, aged 65, was discovered by his servant preparing to hang himself. The servant rushed to the constable of the hamlet of Chambiere, one Monsieur Gernais. The constable or town guard, stopped to debate the question of procedure. If the man was dead, it was a case for the coroner. If not, he was committing a serious crime by attempting suicide; and therefore it was a case for the district gendarmes, above a guard's authority. He rushed to the nearest gendarmeerie, some kilometers way. When he returned with the proper officials M. Descamps was successfully hanging dead from a tree.

WAR IS SPREADING.

Rival Armies Deadlocked In Fierce Battle on Long Front.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 17.—Canadian Press).— Renewed evidence of the spread of China's sectional civil war to the Manchurian Chi-Li front was contained in Pekin reports received here yesterday, telling of a battle at Chang Yang, where the forces of General Chang Tso-Lin, Manchurian war lord, were said to be clashing with those of General Wu Pei, military leader of the Pekin quarter. As the contestants in the Manchurian forces are taking sides in the fighting between rival military governors for possession of Shanghai, military observers expected that opening of hostilities would have a direct effect on the battling near here. For the past thirty-six hours, the rival Kiangsu and Chekiang armies have been deadlocked in fierce battle waged along a front approximately one hundred miles long, west of Shanghai fighting continued throughout the night and the Shanghai volunteer corps was called out when it was believed the firing line might be drawn closer to the city.

EXTENDED POLICY.

Proposal Made at Religious Education Board Meeting.

TORONTO, Sept. 17.—(Canadian Press).—An extended policy of imparting religious knowledge and instruction in Bible in Canadian public schools was proposed by Archbishop Thorneloe of Algoma Metropolitan of Ontario, at yesterday's meeting of the General Board of Religious Education of the Church of England in Canada.

Archbishop Thorneloe suggested extending the teaching of Scripture passages and making religious education part of the regular curriculum. Negotiations had been entered into with previous and present Ontario Governments, he said, and assurances had been gained from Premier Ferguson that any recommendations made through the Board would be considered. His Grace had had a letter from Dr. Chown of the Methodist Church, indicating a slight waning of interest, and Archbishop Thorneloe was of the opinion that the Methodist body was centering on the adoption of church day schools.

LONG SEARCH AT RICE LAKE FAILS TO LOCATE BODIES.

COBOURG, September 17. — For thirteen hours yesterday Officers Lang and Kelly of the Toronto Life Saving Service, Provincial Police Officer Cousins and R. C. Wood, father of one of the victims, dragged Rice Lake in a vain search for the bodies of Gerald S. Wood and Alfred Davies, who perished on Saturday, when their canoe capsized. After their arduous search the party went to a hotel in a nearby village where the proprietor refused to give them anything to eat on the ground that the dining room was closed. They were forced to motor to Cobourg, 14 miles away.

MOTORS 2,800 MILES TO WED A LOCAL GIRL

His "Flivver' Averaged 235 Miles a Day and Carries 800 Pounds of Baggage.

A MAN'S TRIP.

Peterboro girls are held in high regard and a Peterboro bride can inspire the chivalry in modern men as fair maidens inspired the great knights of old to bring valour and victory upon the battlefield.

Just recently a local girl, Miss Bertha Marie Wylder, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wylder, caused Archie Skinner to come all the way from Phoenix, Arizona, at the rate of 235 miles a day, carrying 800 pounds of luggage in his "flivver." That was two weeks ago. To-day, the happy "honeymooners" are on their way to the Far West, taking an uncle of Mrs. Skinner's with them.

Yesterday, in Toronto, they attracted a great deal of attention with their transportation outfit. They are returning as the groom came in a flivver, which carried 800 pounds of baggage 2,800 miles without a spare tire, and only causing the fast east-bound groom three punchers. On the right-hand fenders is a wooden crate, plenty of bedding and two suitcases. On the left fender is all the tent equipment, bedding and other baggage. At the back, fastened on by ropes, is a big truck, an oil stove and shovel, and in the rear seat is another big trunk, parcels and suitcases.

The wedding took place on Tuesday, September 2, in St. James' Methodist Church, when Mr. Archie Lafayette Skinner, of Phoenix, Arizona, and Miss Bertha Wylder were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. W. H. Buckler. It was a very pretty wedding and the church was beautifully decorated with gladioli.

Before her marriage Miss Wylder was a Sunday School teacher in St. James' Church, and was quite active in church work. She is well known in Peterboro, and her friends will be glad to join with The Examiner in wishing the young couple a "bon voyage."

VOICE OF PEOPLE

TO THE REV. R. POGUE

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Sir, Having heard of the able discourses delivered recently by the Rev. R. Pogue on Prohibition I would respectfully suggest to him that he should discuss the principle of Prohibition as applicable to all ob jectionable things and not to liquor only. If it were not for the beneficial character of liquor which is in universal use at hospitals to which indeed all confiscated alcoholic liquors are sent for use and consumption, I do not suppose that the question of liquor consumption apart from the personal liberty involved would excite much comment. The question is therefore not one of pleasure but of use and necessity. It is in fact a serious question. I would offer therefore to Mr. Pogue that he and I and others if possible should discuss in public this matter of general prohibition of things which we do not like. In this way the whole problem can be raised in the eyes of the people to that degree of importance and finality which it deserves. Such a discussion would I think help to clarify public opinion here and our own and might double the Prohibition vote. A friendly clash of some sort is needed to arouse popular interest and I would suggest that Mr. Pogue call a public meeting for that purpose and so far as my part of it goes I will be glad to attend and to help to discuss Prohibition in all of its aspects. The question is too important to the public welfare to be treated as is being done at present by indirect fire and at very long range at that.

USE BRITISH NAVY.

To Make Stubborn States Come To Terms—Public Opinion.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—(Canadian Press).—A section of public opinion here has taken alarm over the repeated proposals of the League of Nations Assembly in Geneva that the British navy be placed at the disposal of the League to enforce the latest decision by blockading stubborn states in certain contingencies. The dismay expressed in some quarters is accompanied by scepticism as to whether, as stated, the head of the British delegation, Lord Parmoor, really assented to the suggestion, but the newspaper commentators are not waiting for verification to voice their strong disapproval. The Times asks what are the guarantees that the use of the navy to enforce sanction could not place Great Britain in the embarassing danger of conflicts with neutral maritime states and urges restriction of the navy's use to purpose in accord with the interests of the Empire. An editoral in the Morning Post says the very stomach of the English people turns at the mere idea of handing over the control of their beloved navy to the foreigners.

CLERK WAS FIRED.

Refused To Sign Home Bank Statement For His Superiors.

TORONTO, Sept. 17.—(Canadian Press).—Another little sensation was sprung in the Home Bank case to-day when John H. Kennedy told how he was fired by the late J. Cooper Mason, general manager of the bank, because he refused to sign a bank statement.

Kennedy entered the bank's employ as assistant manager of the Toronto branch in May, 1915, and he was suspended on January 16, 1016. He said that accounts were in such a complicated condition that he hardly knew how to take charge. He had refused, at the request of O. G. Smith, the now accused chief accountant, to sign the bank's statement because he knew it was not correct. Later he was called before Col. Mason to explain why he had refused to sign.

"And what happened?" asked Crown Counsel D. L. McCarthy, K.C.

"I was suspended."

"How long afterwards?"

"Right then and there."

The Judge and lawyers smiled at this reference to "autocrat" of the Home Bank.

Then Mr. McCarthy drew out of witness that O. G. Smith knew of his being suspended. "I went downstairs and took my keys and got out," said Kennedy. He told also of an inspection of the bank which did not bring any results.

CORN DROPS 6 CENTS.

Rush To Sell Helps Debacle —December Delivery Down To $1.07 1-2.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17. —(Canadian Press).— Several decreases on the price of corn took place in the Board of Trade accompanied by heavy selling to stop losses. A decrease of the warm sunny weather left the market without adequate support from buyers. Shortly before the close values had broken almost 6 cents a bushel to $1.07½ for December delivery.

FABLES ON HEALTH.

"Why don't you try a little tennis now?" the physical trainer asked Mr. Mann.

"That's an old woman's game. It's a kid's game."

"Yes, it is! Just try it. I mean seriously," chided the trainer. "The trouble is that you'll have to play like an old lady for a while until you get in shape. If more men would get the old lady notion out of their heads, there would be fewer old ladies among the old men."

Tennis, as a matter of fact, whether played easily, or with the terrific force that marks great skill, is a pleasant and stimulating exercise.

The mere matter of swinging a racket is comparable to work with Indian clubs or dumb-bells, while reaching, dogging and hopping gives good play to many of the body muscles.

It takes wind to play a good game of tennis and for building up wind and for breathing generally swimming and tennis are good partners.

Tennis is for the quick of eye, foot and hand if it is to be well played and should be included in the recreation of anyone needing and desiring sprightly exercise in which to play element figures.

CROP REPORTS

PERCY SOCIETY HAS HONOR OF PIONEER FAIR

Origin of Warkworth Fair Unknown—Probably 80 Years Ago.

HIGH STANDING.

Seventeenth In Fairs of Province in Amount of Prizes Paid.

(By A STAFF REPORTER.)

WARKWORTH, Sept. 17.—If there is a man living in Warkworth to-day, or anywhere in Percy Township for that matter, who attended or can even recall the date of the first fall fair held here, no one has been able to locate him. That date has been set in the mists of antiquity, although it is generally placed at 80 years ago. The first official record that the Examiner representative was able to locate was the list of members of the Percy Agricultural Society in 1876, 48 years ago, but at that time the fair was in a vigorous stage of adolescence. Of the long list of members of that year there are only three or four survivors, the last death being that of Joseph Beswetherick, who passed away in Warkworth recently.

Is Pioneer Fair.

But if the natal day of the Warkworth Fair cannot be exactly ascertained the fact remains that the Percy Agricultural Society was the first ever organized in the Counties of Northumberland and Durham, and that fair has through all these years held the proud position as leader of all its competitions. This assertion is no idle boast as it is backed up by the cold figures contained in the blue book that is issued every year by the Ontario Agricultural Department, as well as by the financial records of the two counties.

The County Grant.

The council of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham makes a grant of $1,500 a year to the agricultural societies within its jurisdiction, and this is divided in proportion to the amount paid out in prizes by each. The Percy society has always received the largest share of this annual grant.

Seventeenth on List.

In addition to being the premium fair of the two counties, the Percy Township, or Warkworth fair, ranks seventeenth among the fairs of Ontario in the amount paid each year in prizes. This is exclusive of the three big exhibitions at Toronto, London and Ottawa, but the list includes all the smaller cities where fairs are held. In that list Warkworth stands sixth in the amount paid in prizes for horses in 1923.

Last year the total paid out for prizes at Warkworth was $2,035.45. Campbellford stood second on the list in the two counties with a total prize award of $1,677.55. In a word, Warkworth started off in the lead and has maintained it on every lap ever since.

The Tragedy of 1862.

There is one year that is memorable in the annals of the Warkworth Fair, 1862, when the gathering of farmers and others from all parts of the district was marred by a tragedy. William Wilson, who resided on the English Line, and who was father of Henry Wilson, who now resides in Warkworth, was so severely kicked by a horse that he died on the grounds. The animal was a fine stallion owned by H. Grosman of Burnley and was led by William Craig.

The Fair in the Sixties.

Men of 70 years or more can recall attending the Warkworth Fair in the early sixties when they were mere lads. The society had no grounds of its own so that the cattle and horses were shown on an open field, now belonging to Mrs. John Leonard. There was not even a fence to which the cattle and horses on exhibition could be tied. No admission was charged, the only revenue being that derived from the fees of the members who then paid $1.50 a year as against the $1 that is now charged. The fruits and fancy work were shown in the Orange Hall and the grain and vegetables in the Methodist Church shed. Every fair night there was a public concert and which R. P. Hulbert, who for years was secretary of the society, announced the winners and distributed the prizes.

Pioneer Horse Racing.

Even as long ago as 50 years there were good horses in Percy Township, and these were shown on the Campbellford Road in front of the residence of the late I. Humphries, whose son, I. A. Humphries, of Campbellford, is now solicitor for Percy Township. There was always a horse race, the course being the half-mile stretch from the bridge to Mr. Humphries' gate, a slight upgrade from start to finish. All were running races, and it is recalled by some of the old timers that a farmer whose name has been lost to posterity, showed a team at the fair. A dispute as to speed arose between him and a neighbor and the result was a race. The first farmer was afraid to separate his team, as the latter had always been used to go together, so he rode one and led the other. He won the race.

Pure Bred Stock.

The pure bred stock industry in Percy was then in its infancy, but there were some fine animals on exhibition. George Reddick had a pure bred Durham herd sire, remembered as one of the finest types of that breed ever seen in the township. For several years this animal was one of the main attractions for farmers who visited the fair.

The late Charles Honey, father of Richard Honey, the well-known breeder of Holsteins, used to show grade Durhams in the sixties. Other prominent exhibitors of pure bred stock were I. Humphries, his brother William, and John Douglas.

Bought Present Site.

The society bought the present site for their fair from the late I. Humphries in the eighties. The buildings, now among the best in Central Ontario, were put up gradually year by year. John Douglas, one of the few Liberals who ever represented Northumberland in the Legislature and who now resides in Toronto, built the grandstand, taking in payment the receipts from that source for three years. Mr. Douglas was one of the early presidents of the society. But the record of the Douglas family goes back further than that, as the late Donald Douglas, John's father, and grandfather of Don. W. Douglas, of Campbellford, was also an officer and an exhibitor of Ayrshire and Durham cattle and Leicester sheep. If Donald Douglas was not the first president of the Percy Agricultural Society then the memory of some of the oldest residents is at fault.

Officers, Past and Present.

Richard Honey, whose father before him was an officer and an exhibitor, has been a director continuously for the past 40 years, and held the presidency for two terms. One rule of the society has been to pass the honor around by changing the president every year. This custom was departed from at the local annual meeting when J. F. Freure was re-elected to the position for 1924, on account of the success of his administration.

The director who, next to Mr. Honey, has been longest in harness is Wilbert S. Nelson, who has served 16 years without a break. He was president in 1920. It may have been his breezy personality or live, untiring energy, but that was a record year for the society, and a large chunk of the mortgage was paid off. So highly was Mr. Nelson's services appreciated that his associates presented him with a gold-headed cane at the close of his term. He never carries the cane, having no use for outside support, but with characteristic forethought is carefully preserving it for old age, due to overtake him 20 years or so hence.

P. S. Ewing, clerk of Percy Township, was secretary of the fair from 1903 to 1918, inclusive. J. A. Armstrong, who at present holds that position, and who is a tireless worker in the interests of the society, is in his fifth year.

Sam. Black, who is in his 93rd year, is the oldest living ex-president, but even he was not connected with the fair from the beginning as he did not settle in Percy until about 10 years after the society was organized.

George Poole, the vice-president and heir-apparent to the presidency next year, is an ex-reeve of the township, and at present a member of the Percy Council. Just what kind of a farmer Mr. Poole is may be gathered from the fact that in the recent standing field crop competition he captured first prize for oats.

Enterprise That Counts.

It is the enterprise of the directors and the harmony in which they work that in a large measure accounts for their success as promoters of a fair. They never hesitate to take a chance when there is any prospect, and it is seldom that they are out in their calculations. The best horses in Ontario compete in the trotting and pacing events at the fair, and this is due to the inducements offered, as well as to the generous purses hung up. Horsemen are given free stables while training their racers, and the drivers get free board while preparing for the different events.

DYNAMITE "DON'TS"

The list should be memorized by any one who uses explosives. Before handling any dynamite, glance over this list to refresh your memory.

Don't smoke while handling explosives and don't work with them near a light.

Don't leave explosives where stock can get at them. Cattle like the taste of soda and saltpeter, but other ingredients might make them ill or even kill them.

Don't tamp in a charge with a metal bar.

Don't be in too big a hurry to see why a charge didn't explode.

Don't use chilled or frozen powerful explosives.

Don't cut or break a frozen cartridge.

Don't carry blasting caps in your pocket.

Don't try to remove the wires from an electric blasting cap.

Don't dig out a hole that holds a charge that failed to go off. Dig another hole for another charge at least two feet distant.

Don't force a primer into a bore hole.

MORE WOOL AND MEAT

Two tailless lambs bred at the South Dakota Agricultural College experimental station.

BROOKLINGS, S. D., Sept. 17.—Because sheep's tails absorb a lot of fat and vitality which should go into their wool and meat, agriculturists are trying to breed a tailless sheep.

Professor Wilson found the sheep; South Dakota Agricultural College here, virtually has accomplished that. He has a breed of sheep with tails less than two inches long and these sheep carry more flesh and wool than the ordinary breeds.

Professor Wilson found the sheep used in the cross-breeding at the college experimental station, in Siberia and carted them several hundred miles across country in order to bring them to America.

The breed, in addition to lacking tails, is believed to be more hardy, due to having been accustomed to extreme heat in summer and extreme cold in winter.

Cultivates Potato Tree To Avoid Digging Labor

ELMIRA, Sept. 16 (Canadian Press).—A few weeks ago an Elmira gardener, August Voisin, boasted of a new variety of potatoes, a stalkless variety which he had grown in his garden with the idea of abolishing the potato bug nuisance by starving the bugs to death. Now, however, the announcement is forthcoming of the discovery of a variety that would eliminate the arduous task of digging the "spuds." Rev. Mr. Prudham, of the nearby village of Drayton, is exhibiting several potato stalks which had a number of perfectly-formed potatoes growing on them several inches from the roots. In the hills there was only one large potato. Mr. Prudham intends to keep a number for seed, and will see what his new discovery will bring forth another season.

HAROLD TATE WINS

South Monaghan Man Takes First Prize At Ottawa.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 17.—Harold Tate, South Monaghan, won first prize with his fall wheat at the Central Canada Exhibition held in Ottawa this week. The wheat exhibited (in sacks) was that grown in connection with the annual Field Crop Competition, under the auspices of the Millbrook Agricultural Society, in which Mr. Tate won first prize this season with 93 points out of a possible 100. Mr. Tate has realized an average of 45 bushels to the acre from his wheat crop this year.

Many farmers in this vicinity are held up with threshing on account of the wet weather. Some have had their peas cut for about two weeks and the delay will mean considerable loss as the pods open with the wet, and the necessity of turning the crop in the effort to get it dried means that some of the grain is dropped each time. Others have not yet cut their peas, being delayed with the unfavorable weather. Full barns in many cases mean that other grain still out must be threshed in the fields. The threshers could have kept up comparatively well with the demand for their services had the hoped for fine weather prevailed. As it is there is a "waiting list" which will keep them busy for some weeks to come.

Apparently the oats are now practicly in the barns, and where threshing has been done a good yield has been realized. There is some complaint of loss through "dirty" grain which will require considerable cleaning, while in other cases it is stated to have given satisfactory results.

Mrs. W. Rutherford, of Otonabee Township, purchased a stabling outfit recently upon the completion of the new building on her farm premises; Messrs. W. Smith and J. Spratt, of Manvers, whose farm adjoin, have jointly bought a potato digger; A. Kennedy, of Cavan, a plough, and D. Lunn a binder for delivery next season, W. E. Ball, Millbrook, being the sales agent in each case.

FARMERS IN QUANDRY

Problem is to Harvest This Year's Crop and Sow 1925's at Same Time.

BETHANY, Sept. 17.—The very catchy weather of the past week has been responsible for the amount of grain still in the stook. Otherwise harvest would be completed. H. Bigelow has several fields of oats still to be cut but as they were very late being sown, they are not suffering any. The farmers in this community who have not completed harvest are in a quandary how to get it in the barn and get the fall wheat sown at the same time.

Potatoes still show a green top, except in the case of the early ones, and they have turned out a fair yield. Other roots and corn are all showing that a splendid yield will be taken. Now is the time to cull the poultry flock. The early moulters and other fowl showing weak points as to heavy production should be fattened and disposed of.

SMUT EFFECTS SMALL SECTION DISTRICT CROP

Millers Say Impossible to Make Flour With Smutty Wheat.

FARMERS CARELESS

South Monaghan is Singularly Free From the Disease.

BAILIEBORO, Sept. 17.—The grain buyers who are buying a grain for the local elevators at Fraserville, Millbrook and Port Hope, state that a great quantity of the fall wheat throughout the country is badly smitten with smut. In some cases the smut is so bad that it is feared that the wheat will not be of any use for grinding purposes, unless some system can be arranged to wash the grain before it is used for milling purposes.

Millers state that it is impossible to make wheat with smut in it into flour, as it gives the bread a sour and bitter taste. Some threshers advocate threshing the wheat in the winter time when the weather is cold, and this prevents to a certain extent the spreading of the smut through the rest of the grain.

It is an easy task for almost any fanning-mill to separate the smut balls from the good wheat, but when the grain is threshed in the warm weather, before the grain is threshed in the before the grain becomes firm and dry, the smut balls break much more easily, and thus spread over the rest of the wheat.

In the majority of cases where farmers are troubled with smut in their grain, it is due to their own carelessness. Grain should be pickled or treated at least every other year to prevent smut from growing in the wheat. Some farmers imagine that if wheat is treated to prevent smut every year the growing germ of the wheat will eventually become weakened, and that it is a better plan to only treat the grain every other year, but this has not been proven to be the truth, and some farmers in South Monaghan have pickled their fall wheat annually for the last ten years and have never been troubled with a smutty crop in that time.

W. D. Moncrief, grain buyer for the Peterboro' Cereal Company's elevator at Fraserville, who buys the greater portion of the wheat in this district, states that although other townships are troubled to a great extent with smut this season, still there is scarcely a crop in South Monaghan Township that is damaged to any great extent with smut. This is a record which the farmers of South Monaghan are very proud to hold.

Potatoes Blighted Early.

A great many of the crops of potatoes in this district have been smitten with a blight, possibly owing to so much damp, cool weather. Potatoes promised to be a bumper crop in most cases, but during the past week a great many crops in this part have been visited by the ground worm, which have eaten the potatoes badly in the ground.

DULL DAYS WILL DELAY FALL WORK

Omemee Farmers Held Up—Better Yields Than Were Expected.

OMEMEE, Sept. 17.—The rains of the past week have hindered harvest and threshing operations in this district. Many farmers would have finished harvesting had the fine weather continued a while longer, but as it is, fall ploughing is being delayed owing to the fields not being cleared of the grain, and should there be an early fall much land will be left uncultivated.

Threshing machines are busy and better yields are reported than were anticipated.

The corn and root crops are rapidly stretching up, and the potato yield is excellent. The damp dreary weather is hindering the ripening of tomatoes, but where the land is suitable for their growth they are reported as an excellent crop.

Butter and eggs remain about the same as last week. Dairy butter is still a scarcity, retailing at 32c to 35c, while creamery is 36c per lb.

THOROUGHBREDS SHIPPED

Racers From Cobourg Farm Go To Thorncliffe.

COBOURG, Sept. 17.—Sixteen of the thoroughbred horses from Pontiac stock farm here, which is owned by Mrs. L. A. Livingstone, were shipped to the Thorncliffe race track this week, and another fifteen or so are to be shipped there shortly, it is stated. After the races at Thorncliffe the horses will go to the Woodbine, it is expected. Mrs. Livingstone has one of the finest stables in America at her farm here.

CANNING UNDER WAY

Factories Around Cobourg Employ Many Hands.

COBOURG, Sept. 17.—The canning factories in different parts of East Northumberland are very busy at the present time, and the rush is expected to continue for a fortnight or more. A number of women and girls are finding employment in them.

MEXICANS KILL BIRDS PASSING TOWARD CANADA

Annual Slaughter Among Migrating Game Birds is Appalling.

USE BATTERIES

Shoot Down 2,000 Birds With One Round From "Armada."

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 17.—(Associated Press).—Mexican sportsmen, in their fight to preserve the country's diminishing flocks of ducks from pothunters, who hundreds of times yearly slaughter as high as 2,000 birds at a single discharge of their "armadas," have again lost. Publication of the 1924 hunting regulations by the Fish and Game Bureau of the Department of Agriculture shows that the hunting of wild duck by means of "armadas," or great batteries of shotguns, will be permitted from November 1 to February 30. While only two shots a week from each "armada" are permitted, this is considered a minimum restriction as the fowl will not return to the same lake in sufficient numbers to make the firing of more than two armadas a week profitable.

Throughout the valley of Mexico are scores of shallow lakes where every variety of duck that summers in the United States and Canada can be found during the winter. Dotting the shores of these lakes are Indian villages whose inhabitants eke out a precarious existance during the summer by cultivating their patches of corn and beans, but who live easy during the winter by means of their "armadas." By giving from 1-3 to 1-2 of their spoils to the owners of the lands in which the lakes are situated they are able to secure permission to make enormous bags. Some of the landowners, it is estimated, receive as much as 30,000 pesos a year as their share.

Sportsmen who have shot over the greater part of the valley declare that not less than 50 of these "armadas," each with an average of 150 barrels, are shot at least twice a week for four months each year and, with hundreds of ducks to an average bag, the total number slaughtered each winter reaches a staggering figure.

In placing their batteries, the Indians throw up a low breastwork of mud and plants at a strategic point in one of the shallow lakes and imbed in the ramparts as high as 200 barrels of all kinds, ranging from those of ancient shotguns to blunderbusses. These are loaded with black powder and all sorts of missiles and their touchholes connected by a train of powder to an old flintlock which is discharged by means of a string from the marksman's hiding place.

When the "armada" is loaded and the ducks begin to feed in the lake, generally about noon, the entire population of the village operating the "armada" begins, with infinite patience and without frightening the game, to drive the ducks within range. When this has been done the "armada" is discharged and the hunt for the victims, hundreds of them only crippled, begins. As many as 2,000 ducks have been shot down in a single discharge of the great "armada" at Penon Viejo, near the capital. After the game is sold the village celebrates with a big carousal and then waits until new victims gather.

Despairing, after repeated attempts, of limiting pothunting through local regulations, Mexican sportsmen are planning to address an appeal to game commissions and gun clubs in the United States and Canada in the hope that, by combined action, it may be possible to halt the annual massacre. They declare that the funds and efforts being expanded by Mexico's northern neighbors to protect migratory game in those countries are wasted if, when the birds reach Mexico in the winter, they are bagged almost without restriction. The practice, they declare, is as unsportsmanlike as the trapping of quail, shipments of which totalling as high as 18,000 are not uncommon in northern Mexico, and will send the ducks after the vanished wild pigeons unless regulated.

Pin tail make up most of the bags, but canvass backs, mallard, widgen, blue bills, red heads and teal of all kinds are also shot down by hundreds of thousands.

REPORTS NOT ROSY.

But Marmora Farmers Have a Record Crop of Hay.

MARMORA, Sept. 17.—Harvesting reports for the Marmora district for the past few days are not so rosy as could be wished. Large quantities of oats remain out in stoop. Through the continual heavy rains, much of this has rotted or commenced sprouting out. It is feared that the excellent potato crop will be attacked with blight or rot if much more wet weather is in store.

Praise of the hay yield is universal. Mr. James Hammond, who has a fair-sized dairy farm, has secured about 100 tons of hay from 35 acres.

WARSAW GRAIN WEIGHS HEAVY

Rain Stopped Hauling To Barns—Potatoes Generally Good.

WEATHER COOL.

WARSAW, Sept. 17.—Grain, especially oats, is weighing very heavy. There is still quite a lot of grain out. Many hoped to have finished last Wednesday or Thursday, but Tuesday's downpour stopped that, and since then there has been little chance to get in more than two or three loads at a time, and that perhaps might be drier.

The heavy rains have made the roads quite rough; hills are quite apt to be pebbly—all loose earth is washed off.

Naturally, with so much cool weather, garden stuff is not maturing rapidly, but there is a great growth, and the vegetation is crowded in gardens.

Potatoes generally are reported a good crop, and large tubers, but those who have them on flat, clay soil are a little afraid of rot with so much moisture. Those on slopes, especially if sandy, do not seem to dread the rot so much.

PLOWING MATCH

Prince Edward County Will Have Event in Fall.

COBOURG, Sept. 17.—It is interesting to note that at a meeting of Prince Edward County Advisory Board, improved plowing was emphasized as a means of improving agriculture in the county. A committee was accordingly appointed to organize a plowing match, and one of these old-time events is expedited to be a feature of the fall season in Prince Edward County.

STAR BUCKWHEAT

Cobourg Farmers Expect Late Sown Grain To Turn Out Well.

COBOURG, Sept. 17.—Farmers who were in town to-day expect that buckwheat of which considerable was sown owing to the lateness of the spring, will be one of the best crops of the season. It has come on well of late, it is stated, and is filling out fine.

The rains also, although they are hard on the late harvest, are proving to be just the right thing for the root crop.

HAD OVERLOOKED THAT.

Irate Customer: I've worn these calfskin shoes only two months and now look at them.

Salesman: My dear sir, you must remember the calf had already worn that skin five months, making seven months' wear, which is very good, I think.

A SONG OF GOOD FEED.

A handful of grain while on pasture
May seem like a terrible waste.
But the cow will return it all later
If given of grain a slight taste.

SMALL GARDEN PAYS ITS WAY

James Leonard Has 50 Acres That Return Good Profit.

ON HAVELOCK ROAD

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 17.—Here is a striking example of what the owner of a small farm, which he works properly, can accomplish in one season.

James Leonard has fifty acres of land, just beyond the Mount Pleasant Cemetery, on the Havelock Road. His returns for the year were as follows:—30 loads (approximately that number of tons) and 795 bushels of oats and barley. He kept six cows, and has yet to cut a field of millet, from which he expects nine loads.

All that Mr. Leonard paid out in wages during the year was $8. He owns a handsome pair of general purpose horses that he shows at the Fairs, and which have the graceful action of standard carriage animals, and with these he has, in his spare time, since January 1st earned $600 teaming in town.

Mr. Leonard has refused an offer of $7,000 for his farm. No prospective buyer with less than $8,000 will be taken seriously by the owner.

RECORD FOR DISTRICT.

Haldimand's Highest Yield Was 52 Bushels To Acre.

COBOURG, Sept. 17.—It remained for two Haldimand Township farmers to set the record so far this season in this district for splendid yields of fall wheat. J. H. Beatty, who resides near Centreton, has threshed and his crop went fifty bushels to the acre, while Thomas Gall, who resides in the same locality, has fifty-two bushels to the acre.

NO RECORDS BROKEN.

Douro Farmers Have Yield of 30 Bushels To Acre.

DOURO, Sept. 17.—Threshing is going ahead satisfactorily. Wheat is yielding generally up to thirty bushels. No one had heard of a 63 bushel yield such as Campbellford boasts. Oats and rye continue to yield well, and almost every farmer has the same dismal story of the pea yield—lucky yo get the seed back. A few farmers have not finished harvesting and from present weather indications it may be some time before they will finish. Corn is reaching great heights, and the root crop is wonderful.

RECORD NORWOOD GRAIN

Ralph Cuthbertson Had Oats Run 60 Bushels To Acre.

NORWOOD, Sept. 17. — Ralph Cuthbertson had a field of oats which yielded sixty bushels to the acre.

Tomatoes are being brought into the village and sell for $1.25 a bushel. Local dealers are asking 50 cents a basket.

SLAYERS FIND NO ARISTOCRATS AMONG ANIMALS

Pure Bred Stock Herded To Abbatoir With Scrubs.

VALUE DECREASES.

William Bland's Famous Pure Bred Sire Has Gone.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 17.—Death is the great leveller among the lower animals, just as it is with members of the human family. During life, the rich may ride in high-powered cars, while the poor, on foot, dodge them at the street intersection; but rich and poor alike often take their last ride to the cemetery in the same auto-hearse.

The pure-bred Ayrshire or Holstein is taken to the big exhibition, or fall fair, in a car specially fitted up for its comfort, and receives careful attention on the trip; but when its day is over, and it is slated for the abattoir, it is ingloriously punched into a stock car with the scrubs that can show no lineage.

William Bland's famous pure-bred Ayrshire herd sire, winner of many a premium at the fairs, was, on Monday, shipped from here to one of the packing companies in Toronto. It was weighed on the same scales, and brought the same price as superannuated grades of all breeds—two cents a pound. The animal brought its owner about $40, a drop from the high price which it commanded in its youth. And the sausages or bovril into which he will be converted will bring no more on the market than that furnished by the carcass of his brother of humble descent. But that is the end of even the best of the pure-breds.

This bull had become dangerous with his advancing age. He was led to the depot through the streets by a long iron rod fastened to a ring in his nose, his attendant keeping at a safe distance at the end of the rod. The animal was blinded with a gunny sack bound over his eyes, and roared defiance to the world at intervals on his slow journey, a honking auto being his special aversion.

WHEAT AND CHAFF

Contention for the last word is like a growling dog fighting for a bare bone.

Wives must be petted, or they will not be quite happy.

The oldest peach-packer in the United States says the peach crop this year will be large. When asked regarding the probable size of baskets this year, he changed the subject.

How time changes The very ones who used to demand the full dinner pail are now shouting for more parking space.

GROW CHEWING GUM.

Well, folks here's a new crop to harvest. One of the chewing-gum manufacturers tells us there is a market for sap of the sweet-gum tree, and that farmers should be cashing in on this crop. Have you any of these trees?

FEAR GIPSY MOTH

The federal government has placed a quarantine against importation of Christmas trees and greens from certain parts of Quebec, due to the presence of the gipsy moth, a destructive insect pest, in northern Vermont near the Canadian border. It is expected shortly to invade Canada and then spread to the United States.

WASHINGTON RESUME LEAD WHILE YANKS LAY OFF AND TIGERS LOSE

The Athletics Nick Detroit's Chances—Giants and Pirates Divide Their Doubles.

DODGERS BEATEN.

St. Louis Trounced Brooklyn By 17 To 3—Race Tightens in Each League.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—Washington regained undisputed possession of the American League pinnacle yesterday by defeating Cleveland, 6 to 3 while the Yankees were kept idle in St. Louis by rain. The Tigers suffered a decisive set-back at the hands of the Philadelphia Athletes, 14 to 3 and dropped further back in their quest for season's honours in Ban Johnson's circuit.

Washington now leads New York by half a game but the Yankees will have a chance to get back this margin to-day when they play a double-heder against the Browns.

The complexion of the National League standing changed somewhat on Tuesday when the leaders found the pace rather fast for their tiring caravans. The Giants were forced to split up their twin bill with the Reds, winning the first game, 5 to 1, but losing the decision in the nightcap 3 to 1. At the same time, Brooklyn absorbed a terrific beating at the hands of St. Louis Cardinals. The easterners being on the excursion end of a 17 to 3 count.

The Pirates, the west's lone candidate for premier honors in the National, were forced to split with the Phillipes, losing the opener 6 to 5, but landing on top in the second session 13 to 7.

IS BIBLE READER AS WELL AS COAL DEALER

MT. CARMEL, Ill., Sept. 16 (United Press).—Reading the Bible doesn't get tiresome for W. P. Habberton, a coal dealer here.

At the end of 1924 Habberton will have completed the Good Book for the 48th time. This is a record as far as is known, although Dwight Modoy, famed evangelist, was reputed to have gone through the book 50 times.

Friends of Habberton brought up his name when read stories of a Madison, Wis., man having read the Bible 30 times.

Habberton reads the Bible on schedule —three chapters daily on week days, and five on Sundays. This makes exactly one reading a year.

'DOC' WOOD PRES. OF RUGBY CLUB

Practices Starting This Week —Plans For Season Not Decided.

M. SLOAN, MANAGER.

Rugby will likely loom up large in the city this fall. At an enthusiastic meeting held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms the following were elected as an executive to handle the rugby situation here. President Dr. Wood; Vice-Presidents, Chris C. Graham, Manager Max Sloan; Secretary Treasurer, L. Brown; Executive R. Dobbin, Major Gifford, J. Deannard and R. Abbott.

At the meeting the rugby outlook was reviewed and it was evident that the outlook this season is bright. Several Old Country players who are very keen about the game will likely turn out with the team and try to make a place. These men are all big and would make great line plungers and they will receive special coaching as to the rules if they come to the practices.

The first practice will be held at Central Park to-morrow evening at five o'clock and all those who desire to show their interest in rugby should be on hand even if they cannot come out in uniform for there is some important business on which the executive desires to get the opinion of the local rugby players and would-be players.

Peterborough may be represented in the Junior and Intermediate groups of the O.R.F.U. or again may only have a Junior team and a strong city league. This must all be decided immediately and this will be the chief topic on the boards at the workout to-morrow evening.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

The Giants are having a hard time trying to make it four straight championship wins. Maybe they will come through and maybe they won't. Shaking off Brooklyn with its fine pitching staff is not going to be an easy assignment.

The Giants were picked in the spring by expert obesrvers to be the class of the league. Barring accidents it was figured they would have little trouble beating the rest of the field to the wire. McGraw's pitching was admittedly a bit erratic, but it was figured he would get enough hitting strength to offset any noticeable slab weakness that might develop.

The dope did not pant out as per expectations. McGraw's vaunted batting strength failed to assert itself, and that explains the Little Napoleon's present predicament.

Billy Southworth was obtained from the Braves last winter with the hope that he would prove a hard and consistent hitter in center field. Southworth proved a disappointment. McGraw gave him a lengthy trial and then benched him in favor of "Hack" Wilson, a newcomer. Wilson was a sensation for several weeks. His long and savage hits won many games for the champions. Here lately though he has not been hitting. The pitchers seem to have found his weak spot.

"Irish" Meusel, too, has been hitting far below his usual standard. As a cleanup hitter the former Philadelphia star has failed to clean up with his customary regularity.

The Giants have been using Bill Terry at first base, and George Kelly in the outfield. This change is not as drastic as it might seem. Terry is a hard hitter and can play the bag. Kelly is no stranger in the outfield The change gives McGraw another hard hitter for daily use. It is a wise move by a resourceful leader. It may give the Giants just the added touch they need at bat to save the day.

Nehf, Barnes and McQuillan have been McGraw's best bets in the box. A little more help from Bentley, Baldwin and Ryan would make the Giants' task easier.

Of greater interest to us than mixed bouts are bouts in which the noble tin ears show a willingness to mix it.

THE ONLY WOMAN FIGHT PROMOTOR IS A LONDONITE

LONDON, Sept. 16 (United Press).—There is only one woman boxing promoter in the world—and she belongs to London.

She is Mrs. Dick Burge. Since the death of her husband she has been the owner and manager of the famous Ring of Blackfriars. She has the reputation of being almost the only English boxing promoter who has made boxing pay.

"I am very sorry for Major Arnold Wilson," said Mrs. Burge, referring to the promoter of the Gibbons-Bloomfield fiasco, which cost its too-sanguine impresario $30,000 over and above its receipts. "His mistake was in trying to do things American-style. Our boxers must learn that such purses are not for them. But our sportsmen, carried away by the extravagant American way of doing things, seem to have lost their heads."

She was very severe in her criticisms of English boxers.

"We can't expect to get champions when our boys do not fight more than twice a year. Naturally, when they get into the ring, they are knocked around like shuttlecocks. They need hard training and hard fighting; then they may amount to something."

The Ring is noted for notorious, for the stern relentlessness of its East End audience, which insists upon a real fight and no shamming; if not, it demands, and sometimes gets, its money back. Mrs. Burge never hesitates to issue "rain checks" when her show has proved a fizzle.

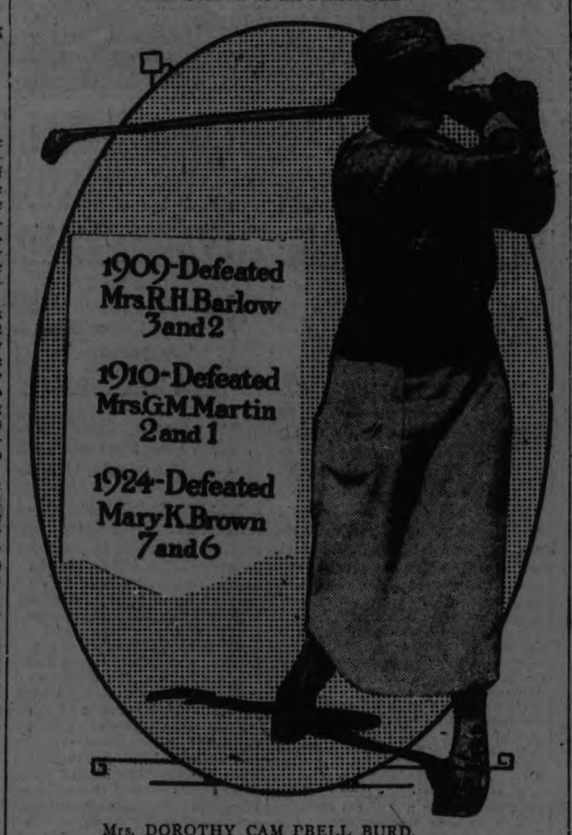
WINS FOR THIRD TIME

But This Year's Golf Victory Is First Mrs. Hurd Has Scored as an American.



Mrs. DOROTHY CAMPBELL BURD.

By defeating Mary K. Browne of California in the finals of the recent woman's golf championship at Providence, R. I., Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd became the American champion for the third time.

It was, however, her first triumph as an American representative. In 1909, playing as a representative of Great Britain and as Miss Dorothy Campbell, she won the event for the first time, defeating Mrs. R. S. Barlow of Philadelphia in the finals 3 and 2.

The following year as a representative of Hamilton, Canada, she won again her opponent in the finals being Mrs. G. M. Martin of Tavistock, England, 2 and 1.

Incidentally that was the only American golf championship in history which brought together two alien representatives in the finals.

Since those days Dorothy Campbell has become Mrs. Hurd and has joined the ranks of American players.

Always a consistent and steady golfer, capable of matching shots with the best, yet Mrs. Hurd was unable to pass the outer edge of the championship circle since her spectacular bow to the American public 14 years ago.

An exception was in 1920 when she went to the finals only to lose to Alexa Stirling, 4 and 3. Mrs. Hurd's record of returning to the heights after a lapse of 14 years is almost without parellel in golf.

COMMONS SEEKS OLD STATUETTE

Apparently Ordinary Carvings Reveal Inside Historical English Scenes.

U. S. GOT IT

LONDON, Sept. 17.—(United Press).—The House of Commons, looking steadily in the direction of the U. S. A., desires to know:

Who is the American gentleman who purchased from an antique dealer in Meran, the old capital of Tyrol, some time in December, 1922, an old English, 17th century, ivory statuette representing Mary, Queen of Scots?

The House of Commons, as it happens, is deeply interested in the ivory statuettes produced in the 1600's and representing English historical scenes. These little figures, about 15 inches high, are peculiarly made. To outward view, ordinary statuettes of Charles the First, or Cromwell, or Mary, Queen of Scots, they open and reveal in the centre an English historical scene.

They are very scarce. The House of Commons possesses only three. Two of them, carved to represent Charles the First, open and show a picture of Cromwell dissolving Parliament. The third, a figure of Cromwell, conceals a picture of the Battle of Naseby.

And Now, a fourth statuette, traced to an old Tyrolese art dealer, was picked up by an American from somewhere around $150.

WOMAN OUTCAST HAS NO COUNTRY

Sadie Champion Refused Admission To Canada—U. S. Can't Unload Her.

STAYS IN JAIL.

BUFFALO, September 17. (Special.) — Sadie Champion is the woman without a country. No place to go or stay, except in jail. That is the position Sadie finds herself in. So Uncle Sam in the person of the Federal Immigration Chief is seeking a country which will accept her as a citizen.

Sadie has been in Buffalo jail since last November. Nothing could be proved aagainst her and she was turned over to the government for deportation. Uncle Sam decided to send her to Canada but the Dominion government raised its hand and sternly said: "No; you must not send her over here."

So Sadie's status still is undetermined. She is callied an alien, illegally in the United States. For ten months Immigration Chief Arthur J. Karnutt has been tryng to send her somewhere. He says that Sadie is illiterate and because of that and her illegal entry into the country the United States does not want her.

Sadie says that she remembers nothing of her parents except that a Mrs. Marcia took her from Newfoundland to Boston, Mass., where she worked in a cotton mill at Fall River, Mass. From there she wandered to Utica, and then roamed into Canada, buffeted here and there by coldly disinterested fate. For a while she lived in Welland, Ont., but later returned to the States.

"PRAIRIE LAW" PERMITS ON TURKISH OPEN SEASON EDITORS WHO ANNOY YOU

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 16 (united Press).—"Prairie law" they call it in Turkey, by which they mean the "law" which permits you to shoot an editor when he annoys you.

Deputy Kilidjali Bey coined the phrase in describing calmly his justification for shooting Deputy Djelal Nouri Bey, who wrote unkindly of him in his newspaper.

The prosecutor general demanded that the assailant appear before him and stand Turkish trial but Deputy Kilidjali Bey said nay, nay. He based his act on "prairie law", not on Turkish law, and he intended to continue shooting all editors who "write against me".

Both Constantinople and Angora are distinctly awed at the new and peculiar jurisdiction, and there is talk of convoking the National Assembly at once to pass a special act for the protection of Turkish editors.

RODENTS ARE FILMED

Lemmings of Lappland Cover Land During Their Migration.

GOTHENBURG, Sweden, Sept. 17.—(Associated Press).—American scientists have just taken the first film ever obtained of the migration of lemmings, mole-like animals, one of the most unique phenomena of the animal world.

Dr. Clyde E. Fisher, a curator of the American Museum of Natural History, and Carveth Wells, now here from a recent trip to Lappland, say that a curious and absolutely unique film is that of the lemmings. These rodents seem to multiply in teeming numbers at irregular intervals, and are now more multitudinous than they have been for 18 years. A wanderer above the tree line in the Lappland mountains may suddenly see the ground covered by them for miles. They come by the millions, swimming rivers and climbing over mountain ridges. Then either for lack of food or in conflict with natural enemies, they perish in masses.

TO SELECT IRISH ANTHEM.

DUBLIN, Sept. 13.—The poets, William Butler Yeats and James Stephen, and the playwright-critic, Lennox Robinson, have been chosen to act as judges in a competition for the selection of the Irish National Anthem.

THE GREATEST THRILL PICTURE EVER MADE

HOW SHANGHAI LOOKS TO ALIEN

Name Means "Near The Sea" —Nations Have Concessions There.

20,000 FOREIGNERS.

"Shanghai" means "Near the Sea."

This is just what Shanghai is. It is on the Whangpu River bank, three or four hours' steaming above the small Chinese town of Woosung.

It is at Woosung that the waters of the Whangpu and the mightier Yangtse mix and empty, together into the Yellow Sea. Woosung is situated on the flatiron of land at the point where the two rivers meet.

Originally Shanghai was a place of little importance.

The Chinese word "fu" means, among other things, a "seat of government" of some sort. So this word "fu" is to be found added to the names of most Chinese cities of much consequence—for instance, Chi-fu.

Shanghai, as they say, was "not even a fu city" at first. That is, it was "not even a county seat." Then it became a "treaty port." The Chinese "treaty ports" are those places at which foreigners are permitted to trade and settle.

Each Has Own Courts.

Each important nationality was given a "concession" fronting on the Whangpu, about half a mile wide and extending inland some three miles. They were alongside and adjoining, and just above them up the Whangpu was the walled native city.

The respective nationalities administered their various "concessions" to suit themselves. They enjoyed extra-territoriality. The American concession, for instance, was considered American soil.

Such a condition naturally is humiliating to the Chinese. They never have liked it. Nevertheless it was the making of Shanghai commercially. It grew rapidly and prospered until to-day its population, native and foreign, exceeds 1,500,000.

During the Taipung rebellion in the 1850's and early 60's, Shanghai's foreign "settlements," with the exception of the French, were consolidated, for purposes of more effective defence. The French preferred to "go it alone."

To this day the consolidated 'concessions' remain the 'international settlement.' Their frontage on the Whangpu is three or four miles and they extend about three miles inland.

The "settlement" is run by a council of the foreign consuls. Each nationality, however, has a large measure of autonomy. An American, for instances, accused of any offence, is tried in his own court—a regularly constituted United States court, with its jail attached.

Population 20,000.

Besides the foreigners, a good many Chinese live inside the settlement limits, but they are subject to the settlement's regulations and to trial, if they violate them, in what are known as the "mixed courts."

In times of disturbance, like the present, there always is an influx of Chinese refugees into the settlement, where they are as safe as they would be on foreign soil anywhere in the world.

The foreign city's population is around 20,000, of every nationality on earth.

The Chinese city, however, is quite distinct and surrounded by a now much dilapidated wall.

Cruisers Always There.

Sandwiched between the international settlement and the Chinese city is the French concession, still run independently.

Steamships of considerable draft can ascend the Whangpu as far as Shanghai and some craft do, including light cruisers, a number of which always lie off the settlement, for its protection. However, crossing Woosung bar is ticklish business for large boats, so most of the big liners discharge passengers and cargo into tenders, outside, and leave without crossing.

Flowing through the international city between what once were the English and American concessions, is a tributary of the Whangpu, Soochow Creek, really a fair-sized river which carries considerable small native shipping.

The city of Soochow, about three hours by rail up the creek from Shanghai, has been mentioned considerably in despatches concerning recent fighting. It has a population of about 500,000 and is notable throughout China as the country's largest source of supply of "singsong girls," the Chinese equivalent of the Geishas of Japan.

Between the French and native cities is another but much smaller tributary of the Whangpu, the Wang King Pang, not more than a creek, though navigated by Chinese water-men to some extent.

VIENNA COFFEE PLEASED AIRMEN

VIENNA, Sept. 16 (United Press).—Vienne coffee is the best in the world! If you don't believe it, just ask any of the American round-the-world-fliers, or question those members of America's Olympic games competitors, who paid a post-Olympic visit to Vienna and to Budapest, in order to show the athletes in this neck of the woods just how it really is done in the good old U. S. A. and how the United States won the Paris event hands down.

Both the fliers and the athletes will vouch for the quality of Vienna's coffee, or else they deserve to be made honorary members of the Ananias Club. When in Vienna, all of these fine representatives of clean American manhood were treated to the most aromatic liquid which could be produced by the special coffee cook of Central Europe's largest coffee importer and chain-store dealer. Each of the fliers carried away with him a thermos flask of the steaming liquid; and each athlete received, on request, a good 16-ounce pound to take back to America and to mother.

And Vienna knows what the fliers and the athletes think of her coffee; for on the day following the departure of each group from her boundaries the coffee importer who stood them to drinks, gave their opinion to this city in a number of prominently placed newspaper advertisements. Being themselves too poor to afford any but the cheapest coffee which this importer has for sale, and using the brew which they obtain from such coffee as a standard of judgment, many Vienna housewives are now busy expressing sympathy over the unfortunate Americans who have such poor coffee back home.

LABOR CONGRESS REFUSES AUTONOMY AND WILL FOLLOW DICTATE OF U. S.

Many Branches Favored the Measure To Decide Canadian Strikes in Canada.

DECISIVE DEFEAT.

Other Discarded Resolution Would Have Made Congress Real Centre of Power.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 17.—(Canadian Press).—Labor's left wing opened a drive in two directions in yesterday's session of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress here on the consolidated positions of organized and established Labor organizations.

In the morning the upholders of the left wing views advanced under the banner of One Big Union and in the afternoon on the efficiency and effectiveness of the Labor of executive of congress at Ottawa. In each case after a lengthy debate they met with overwhelming defeat. Three resolutions, Nos. 36, 37, and 38, which were all groupedj together by the Resolutions Committee, were responsible for the morning's debate.

The committee recommended non-concurrence in all of them. These resolutions, which were sponsored by more than a dozen trades councils and locals of miners and railway carmen, chiefly from Edmonton and Glace Bay, urged very strongly autonomy for all Canadian unions, to decide alone all strike questions and an increase in per capital levy assessment so that the Dominion Congress might be the real centre of trade union power in Canada.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

The Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—It is quite unnecessary to notice the personal abuse contained in Mr. G. N. Gordon's letter which appeared in your issue of Tuesday. It is apparent that Mr. Gordon now realizes that the parcelling up of Peterborough County under the recent redistribution was done to serve his own selfish ends and the city especially, and the county generally has suffered, and will continue to suffer, a distinct loss. He knows full well that it was his duty to this riding to have properly represented the true situation to his fellow members and having failed in that duty, he now seeks to excuse his own neglect by abusing any and every one who exposes him. That shows on the face of it that he has a very weak case.

But when you make enquiries to find out what he has really done for the benefit of this riding, it is not to be wondered at, that he realizes that he has not really done anything at all. He has not one public work to his credit that shows the slightest effort to do anything for this riding. He is not entitled to the slightest credit for repairs, maintenance and replacements to public buildings and public works, because they have to be made and are made as a matter of course, and outside of these expenditures he is challenged to show that he has done anything during the last three years for the benefit of any part of this riding. He has jollied Ennismore over the Chemong bridge, but that township knows there has been no results. He has recommended the Government to buy a few yards of cloth, a few bags of bran, a few strips of carpet, some coal to heat the post offices and other trifling matters, but the ordinary member of parliaent would be ashamed to claim merit for such trifles. Not so Mr. Gordon. He has to have his name in the paper for every trifling thing he does, and not in any modest way either. It is always Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, has done so and so, and the smaller it is, the more blatant the boasting.

If Mr. Gordon is unable to do anything for the benefit of this riding, he should at all events not haye been a party to doing it a distinct injury by separating the eastern portion of the county from the rest, to the great injury of the industrial and commercial interests of this city and county as a whole.

You will note that in none of his letters, does he seek to justify his selfish course. His conduct cannot be justified and hence it is he resorts to abuse in which he excels and which clearly shows that he hates to have his shallow scheme exposed.

Yours truly,
ROLAND DENNE.

CRUX OF TRIAL OF OCEAN SMITH

Objections Raised By Defence Overruled—Session Was Dull.

HOME BANK CASE.

TORONTO, Sept. 17. — What Judge Coatsworth described as the very crux of the trial of Ocean G. Smith, former chief accountant of the Home Bank of Canada was reached yesterday afternoon when special crown prosecutor, D. L. Mc Carthy, K.C., attempted to produce evidence in support of the Crown's allegation that returns signed by the accused and rendered to the minister of finance were false and deceptive and not in accordance with the books of the bank.

Toward the close of a rather dull session, Mr. McCarthy called to the witness box Albert E. Nash, account ant of the firm of Clarkson, Gordon and Dilworth who had made an examination and report on the books of the bank.

Before many questions had been asked, and answered, Gordon N. Shaver, counsel for Smith, interposed with a lengthy objection against what he termed the admission of "opinion evidence". Ultimately Mr. Shaver's objection suffered the same fate as his former objections, being over ruled by His Honor.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

"RIDERS UP" COMES TO THE ROYAL TO-MORROW

Creighton Hale has had a long stage and screen career and has played a great variety of parts, but while work in "Riders Up", Universal's latest all star picture adaptation of Gerald Beaumont's Red Book racing story, "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," he vowed that he was impersonating a character he likes best of all—a youth of the people, with ordinary impulses and ordinary faults and ordinary good qualities. That the part happened to be that of a race track tout.

Hale shares honors with George Cooper, Robert Brower, Kate Price and Ethel Shannon in this picture. Irving Cummings directed and the picture was filmed in Tia Juana.

"Riders Up" tells the story of a youth who repeatedly puts off his promise to visit his mother and sister in the little New England village where he was born. He does it because he never has the money to take him there in the style he feels he should display for such an occasion.

A day came when the "dope" went right. He finds himself in funds greater than he had ever hoped for. Then he makes plans to go home. But an aged friend is confronted, although he does not know it, by what will prove the greatest tragedy of the old soldier's life. The tout carries out the arrangement his decision calls for, and the trip appears man nature that every one who sits through the performance comes away with a warmer sympathy for his fellow-man, a kinder point of view towards feelings and failings and a generally better outlook on life. New York critics agreed, during the run of the play at the Little Theatre, that "The First Year" was better than a sermon and funnier than a circus.

The Canadian production, under the management of Theatrical Enterprises, Limited, has been staged under the supervision of Mr. John Golden, famous producer of clean comedies, whose "Lightnin" was one of the outstanding hits of last season in Canada. Knowing that Canadian audiences have become fed up with bedroom farces and pyjama comedies, Theatrical Enterprises, Limited, turned to Mr. Golden, world's champion producer of clean plays, for their first production, entering the producing field at a time when the stage was glutted with adaptations of risque farces, mostly of French origin. Mr. Golden defied the pessimistic tradition of the theatrical wiseacres by presenting "Turn To The Right," which he brought to Broadway entirely at his own expense and chalked up a record-breaking run.

Following up that play came "Three Wise Fools," "Lightnin," "Thank U" and "The First Year," all of which have been astounding hits, "The First Year" breaking all records for an American comedy, the former record being that of 657 performances held by Hoyt's "A Trip To Chinatown" for a quarter of a century.

FINAL "FAST STEPPERS" AT THE ROYAL TO-NIGHT

To-night sees the last presentation of the final "Fast Steppers" series starring Billy Sullivan. This series of racing stories have made quite a name for themselves at the Royal. Next week a new series of "Leather Pushers" take their place.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"THE COVERED WAGON."

The course of true love ran anything but smoothly in the old pioneer days, judging from "The Covered Wagon," a James Cruze production for Paramount, which comes to the Capitol Theatre tomorrow for three days.

Will Banion, hero of the story, is under a cloud because Sam Woodhull, who was with him in the army during the war with Mexico, accuses him to the wagon train people of theft.

The great wagon train of 1848 sets out for Oregon. Molly Wingate, the heroine, is loved by both Woodhull and Banion. She favors Banion, but will not wed a man under a cloud. But during the journey, Banion saves her life several times and finally is enabled to prove his innocence.

The trip is fraught with great peril. The Indian attacks, the fording of rivers and prairie fires, add to the terrors of the great overland journey. But there is fun as well—the great buffalo hunt supplies sport and food.

These marvelous scenes are all contained in this epic drama of the time when the west was still unconquered.

Lois Wilson, J. Warren Kerrigan, Alan Hale, Ernest Torrence, Tully Marshall, Charles Ogle, etc., are in the cast.

TRUE TO TYPE IS CAST CHOSEN FOR SUPERB PICTURE

Roles of "The Covered Wagon" Are Portrayed by Noted Screen Artists

A cast selected absolutely for type was chosen for "The Covered Wagon," a James Cruze production for Paramount of the famous Emerson Hough novel which will be on view at the Capitol Theatre tomorrow, Friday and Saturday.

Lois Wilson plays the heroine—Molly Wingate, a typical girl of the frontier days, beautiful, big of soul and with the bravery and stamina that the wild experiences of the caravan times demanded.

James Warren Kerrigan is seen as Will Banion, the intrepid leader whose sterling qualities win through in the face of impending disgrace and hold the heart of Molly despite the efforts of a rival to blacken his character. The rival, Sam Woodhull, is portrayed by Alan Hale, noted screen villain. Mr. Wingate is played by Charles Ogle, noted member of Paramount Stock Company and Mrs. Wingate by Ethel Wales, who played Aunt Matilda in "The Old Homestead." Bill Jackson, Jim Bridger and Kit Carson, famous scouts, are interpreted by Ernest Torrence, Tully Marshal and Guy Oliver respectively while John Fox does the part of Jed Wingate, a boy.

This is one of the most ambitious efforts of Paramount pictures—and is expected to prove a pictorial historical document of immense value aside from a thrilling tale of the days when the west was untamed and largely in the hands of the redskins.

The picture was made in Utah and Nevada, and the preparations were epochal in their extent, as well as fidelity to the original characters, scenes, settings and properties used in the production.

WEDDING BELLS.

FLOWERS—HILL.

On Saturday, August 30th, 1924, at the Church of the Redeemer, Niagara Falls, N.Y., by the Rev. C. J. Burton, Vera Belle, youngest daughter of Charles Hill, St. Catharines, to Cyril Allan Flowers, of Peterborough, Ont.

McCABE—HAROLD.

The Quinte "Sun," published at Trenton, in its issue of Saturday, September 13th, contains the following account of the marriage of a well known local young man:

"The Church of St. Peter-in-Chains, Trenton, was the scene of a very beautiful wedding on Monday morning, September 8th, when Miss Jane Harold, youngest daughter of Mr. W. L. Harold, Minneapolis, Minn., and niece of Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Fortune, entered into the bonds of holy matrimony with Mr. Vincent M. McCabe, son of Mrs. John McCabe, Gilmour street, Peterborough.

"Precisely at nine o'clock the sweet strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus announced the coming of the bride, who entered the sacred edifice accompanied by her uncle, Mr. Fortune, former mayor of Trenton. The winsome bride looked radiant in a lovely French gown of white georgette and moire, her court train lined with petal pink. She wore the groom's gift, a rope of pearls with diamond and sapphire clasp. Her long tulle veil trimmed with real lace was caught with the traditional coronet of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of ophelia roses and lily of the valley.

"The bridesmaid, Miss Gertrude McAuley, of Toronto, looked charming in a French gown of tarragon green with a large picture hat, and carried a shower bouquet of sunset roses.

"The dainty little flower girl, Miss Estelle St. Croix, was attractively gowned in pink organdie and leghorn hat. Her flowers were pink and white asters. The petite train-bearers, Miss Leota St. Croix and Master Wayne Simmons, contributed greatly to the beauty of the scene as they gracefully performed their assigned function. The former was prettily attired in white organdie with tulle bandeau and pearls. The latter was typical little Lord Fauntleroy, costumed in white satin and black velvet.

"The groom's brother, Mr. John McCabe, acted as best man. The ushers were Mr. John McDonald, Mr. R. McCabe, Mr. L. Keane and Mr. F. Filion.

"The ceremony was performed and the nuptial mass celebrated by Rev. J. R. Creamer. In the sanctuary were Rev. Fathers Costello and Collins, of Peterborough, and Rev. K. Corkery of Cobourg.

"During the mass, Rev. J. V. McAuley, P. P. of Ennismore, rendered a solo in his usual excellent voice. Mascagni's "Ave Maria," in Italian, was sweetly sung by Miss Eileen McCabe of Peterborough.

"A reception was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Fortune, followed by a wedding breakfast, during which many felicitous speeches were made. Amid showers of confetti, Mr. and Mrs. McCabe left to spend their honeymoon in Detroit, Buffalo and other American cities.

"The bride's going-away costume was of cocoa brown, trimmed with real lace. She wore a small hat to match and cross fox fur.

"Upon their return, they will be at home to their friends after October first, at 364 Simcoe street, Peterborough.

"The out-of-town guests were the Rev. Father McAuley, of Ennismore, Rev. Fathers Costello and Collins, of Peterborough, Rev. Father Corkery, of Cobourg, Mr. and Mrs. John McCabe, Mr. and Mrs. Leo McCabe, Miss Eileen McCabe, Messrs. J. McDonald, J. McCabe, R. McCabe, all of Peterborough, Miss Mary Brophy and Miss Gertrude McAuley, of Toronto, Dr. and Mrs. J. Harold, Mrs. H. A. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Ketcheson and Miss Gertrude Ketcheson, of Belleville.

DORSETT—GRAHAM.

A very pretty wedding took place this morning, when Elsie Graham, eldest daughter of Mrs. Mary Graham, 512 Bolivar Street, became the bride of Harry Dorsett, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Dorsett, High Wycombe, England.

The couple were married in Trinity Parsonage, Rev. A. J. Langford officiating.

The bride was charmingly gowned in cut velvet with georgette, wearing fox furs and hat to match. She carried a bouquet of ophelia roses and was attended by her sister, Mrs. Everet Robinson. The groom was supported by Mr. Everet Robinson.

The bridesmaid wore a black velvet costume with fur and hat to match, carrying a bouquet of Columbia roses. The bride's travelling suit was navy blue tricotine, and following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Dorsett left by motor for Hamilton, Niagara and Buffalo and on their return will reside in Peterboro.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful string of Delta pearls, to the bridesmaid mahogany candle sticks, and to the groomsman a leather bound hymn-book.

SEPARATE ALLIANCES AGAINST AGGRESSOR NATIONS APPROVED

Some of World's Best Minds Wrestle With Problem of Disarmament.

BRITISH CHARY.

Fear Counter Alliances, But Principle of Regional Accords Is Made Clear.

GENEVA, Sept. 18.—(Canadian Press).—The Regional accord between states will continue to form one of the essential features of the draft protocol written by Dr. Edonard Benes. This action taken yesterday by the sub-committee on disarment is approved by the full commission and the assembly. Some of the keenest intellects in the world battled all day with this question of supplementary alliances which has always made the British and others careful, on the grounds that they would only engender counter alliances and tend to destroy that which the league of nations is trying to make lasting.

The agreement reached yesterday authorizes the separate accords but makes it perfectly clear that they will only operate when an aggressor state has declined to accept an arbitrator's sentence and the other states that are the signatotories have come forward with their punitive sanctions.

Further more there supplementary accords will not only be registered but will remain open for the signatures of all the nation members of the league with the desire to adhere to them.

Internal Questions

A formula which was approved by all the committee was framed by M. Boncour, of France, who is playing an important part throughout the present negotiations. Another important point discussed was that touched upon by paragraph eight of article 16 of the convenant which deals with the eventuality of a conflict arising, whether it be of entirely domestic or international in character. The French thesis is that when the conference is unanimous in declaring a question internal in nature the members of the league must accept this declaration and no nation will have the right to go to war because of any conflicts based on it.

Signor Fernadez of Brazil and Louis Loucheree of France and M. Politis of Greece, will iron out the definite text of this question.

Benes Confident.

Dr. Benes was exceedingly optimistic about the process of the work. He declared there was absolutely no difficulty regarding principle in sight He was confident that the various details would be worked out and that a preliminary plan could actually be arranged for the convocation of the disarmament conference.

France's proposal to found an institute of intellectual co-operation at Paris was the feature of the session which was beyond the expectations of any in its enthusiasm, Many of the delegates seemed to feel, however that such an institute would gradually develop into an entirely French organization embracing French ideas and dominated by French thought.

In order to prevent any misunderstanding the French proposed that the institute would be placed under the complete direction of the league of nations which would appoint a special commission of five persons of different nationalities to direct the institute under the supervision of the league committee and with its intimate co-operation.

EXHIBTS FALL OFF AT LINDSAY

Decline In Some Classes, But Others Well Filled—Small Circus Secured.

OPENED WEDNESDAY.

LINDSAY, September 18. — The Lindsay Central Fair had its opening yesterday. The attendance of course was very small, and although an admission fee was charged, no programme was run off. It was what might be termed preparation day, as the directors were all busy getting things in shape for the next three days.

The entries are large in a great many departments, but there is a decided falling off in exhibits in certain classes.

There is a big Midway, and this feature has been considerably augmented by the addition of Boyd and Linderman's big 26 car show. This attraction pitched its tents at the Ottawa Exhibition, and was induced to come to Lindsay. It is across the track from the grandstand and takes up so much space that things promise to be congested when the fair is under way. Those on the Midway are in a blue funk because of this attraction, as they claim that it will kill business on the Midway.

DECORATIVE PANEL.

Illustrates the Activities of Local Kiwanis Club.

A decorative panel that has been on display in the Grafton Company's windows during the past few days was the large panel that accompanied the local Kiwanis to the recent convention in Hamilton, where it was adjudged as one of the best of the collection on display there. This panel, with a background of green, blue bordered, yellow paint outlining the blue lettering, "Kiwanis, Peterborough, Activities," that centres the big piece. Excellent photographic reproductions of scenes from the Jackson Park camp, in which the Kiwanis Club takes such an active interest, are tacked to the panel. These represent the swimming-pool and the dam built by the Kiwanis Club, the dining-room in course of erection and when completed, the kitchen, and scenes under the tall pines, with happy children's faces looking out at the observer. There are photographs also of President J. R. Marshall and Kiwanians Ald. J. W. Meyers, Ald. W. Stocker and Mayor J. J. Turner.

LULL ON SHANGHAI FRONT FOLLOWS TWO DAYS AND NIGHT CONTINUOUS FIGHTING

Chekiang Forces Stubbornly Hold Their Positions—Reinforcements Rushed To Defenders' Lines—Chekiang Leaders Hold Conference.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 18.—Two days and a night of continuous stubborn resistence by the Chekiang soldiers defending Shanghai against the onslaught of troops from Kiangu Province were followed late last night by a lull in the fighting. Despite the heavy attack, the positions of the two armies were reported virtually unchanged.

Early this morning reinforcements were being rushed from the Chekiang head-quarters at Lungwha, six miles south of here ,to relieve the worn out men at the front, while on the battle line everything possible was being done to strengthen the defenders lines.

Shortly after the firing ceased, the leaders on the different sectors—at Liuho on the coast north-west of the city, at Hwangtu on the Shanghai-Nanking railway to the west, and at Kiating, between the other two points were called to head-quarters at Lungwha for a conference.

PIPE AND CANDY CHEER LEOPOLD

First Letter From Brother Urges Him To Be Model Prisoner.

IS MAKING CHAIRS.

JOLIET, Ill., Sept. 18.—Lifer 9305 sat in his cell the other night, a new corncob pipe in his mouth and a pound of candy by his side and opened his first letter from home. The letter was from his brother, Foreman Leopold, who has been his loyal confidant from the day he was first taken into custody.

The crime of killing Robert Franks was not mentioned in the letter. It was a note of encouragement and good cheer. "Try and become a model prisoner, Babe," said the letter. "Remember that you are entering upon a new life and it is up to you to make good as best you can. Do not be discouraged by the hard knocks that are bound to come your way and, above all, do not become despondent. Please let us know of any little favors we can do for you."

The note closed with a personal message such as could pass only between brothers.

Just Starting to Realize.

The guard who brought the letter to Nathan Leopold, Jr., was greeted by a hearty smile. But as he read the note the smile vanished and a look of pain came over his passive features. When he had finished he told the guard that he felt that he was just beginning to realize the enormity of his crime. He spent the rest of the evening reading a book he had borrowed from a prisoner.

Both Leopold and Richard Loeb, lifer No. 9306, were considerably cheered when they received their first week's rations of tobacco and candy—each boy will be allowed to spend $2 a week for tobacco and candy. Loeb ordered a pipe, three cans of smoking tobacco, cigarette papers, and a pound of candy. This cost him just $1.13 at the prison commissary. Leopold, however, ran over his allotment of $2. He ordered a corn cob pipe, three cans of tobacco, twenty-four packages of gum and a pound of candy.

Loeb told a guard that he expected to put in a comfortable evening at reading and smoking.

Quiz By Methodist Pastor.

The boys marched jauntily to work, knowing that this would be a half-holiday for them, for part of the afternoon had been reserved for the religious survey. The views of the boys toward themselves and their surroundings are to be sounded out by the Rev. A. W. Hamilton, Methodist prison chaplain, in an effort to make a dual contribution to theology and criminology.

The conference began shortly after 2 o'clock and took up most of the afternoon. The boys heard Father Leo talk Sunday in chapel. Monday they listened to Rabbi David Rosenbaum of Joliet deliver an address to the Jewish prisoners at the prison, and Tuesday they had their conference with the Rev. William Hamilton, completing a presentation of at least three great religions.

Both of the boys are doing extremely well at their work, according to the shop foreman in charge. Leopold has become so proficient in weaving rattan chairs that he works alone and is considered a valuable adjunct to rattan shop No. 2. Loeb is busy from morning to night boring holes in chair legs. He is considered an experienced worker, for he took enough manual training work in high school to enable him to run a boring machine.

RAILWAY RATES PROTEST OPENS

Powerful Legal Talent Arrayed In Appeal Against Crow's Nest Agreement.

OPENING SKIRMISH.

OTTAWA, Sept. 18.—(Canadian Press.) — Yesterday's hearing of protest against the discriminations resulting from the restoration of the Crow's Nest Pass rate was in the nature of a skirmish before the actual battle opened.

When the members of the railway commission, five in number, headed by the Acting-Chief Commissioner P. J. McLean, filed into the court room, they faced one of the most formidable aggregations of legal talent which has assembled at a rate hearing in a long time.

Among those who had come to defend the position which has been taken by the railways were Eugene Lafleur, K.C., and W. N. Tilley, K. C. Among those who are prosecuting the charges of discrimination, H. J. Symington, K.C., representing the Canadian Manufacturers' Association appeared. At the afternoon hearing, Hon. John Oliver, Premier of British Columbia, was present but did not participate. His province is represented by G. G. McGeer, K.C.

Hear Evidence.

It was decided that the first stage in proceedings, in what promises to be along drawn out battle, would consist in the submission of such evidence, documentary and other, which the complainants desired to have on record. Consequently after a number of short complaints had been voiced at the morning's sitting the hearing was devoted largely to the filing of tariffs by Mr. Symington, and to statements by S. B. Woods, representing the cities of Saskatoon and Edmonton, by Mr. Pitblado. The latter declared that there was not only discrimination under the present rate system but that there was "double discrimination" inasmuch as the Crow's Nest Pass rates were only refused by the railways at shipping points which were not on the Canadian Pacific Railway system in 1897, but also denied to goods shipped to a destination which was not on the C. P. R. when the agreement came into existence.

A. Woods pointed out discriminations which he said existed in favor of Calgary and Regina and against Edmonton and Saskatoon.

The Discrimination.

Isaac Pitblade, representing the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, described the situation arising out of the application of the Crow's Nest rate as intolerable. A shipper sending agricultural implements from Brantford to Regina paid $1.20 per 100 pounds on carload lots. Another shipper located in Hamilton and also shipping to Regina paid ninety-six cents per 100 pounds. There was not only discrimination at the points of origin of shipments but there was discrimination at the point of destination, Mr. Pitblade charged. It was impossible to go on doing business under the rtae structure which had been erected by the railways. There was "double discrimination."

If a shipment was made from a point which was not on the Canadian Pacific in 1897, the shipper did not get the Crow's Nest rate. Further, if the shipment was made from a point enjoying the Crow's Nest rate to a point which did not, again

TRENT TOURIST TRAFFIC HEAVY DURING SUMMER

Development Association Is Gratified at Tangible Results of Their Efforts.

COMPLETE CANAL.

Proposal To Urge Government To Build Last Locks on the Severn.

LINDSAY, September 18. — A meeting of the Trent Waterway Development Association was held in the Benson House yesterday with a good sprinkling of representatives from the different municipalities along the waterway, in attendance.

The presient, Gordon K. Frazer, of Burleigh, presided, and others in attendance were: Senator W. H. Bennett, Honorary President, Midland; F. D. Kerr, First Vice-President, Peterboro; Leon Fraser, Secretary-Treasurer; J. W. Fraser, Peterboro; J. Bruce Hanley, Midland; John McCrae, Lindsay; J. J. Thurston, M.P.P. A. J Gould, Fenelon Falls; J. A. Stafford, Midland; Reeve Tiers, Fenelon Falls; Reeve Moore and Captain Potts, Bobcaygeon.

All reports to the Association showed that there had been a sixty per cent. increase in the amount of motor boat traffic through the Trent Water way from American ports, averaging 45 to 85 feet. Although no corect estimate can be made of the increase in motor tourist traffice through this district, all the delegates present claimed this to be the banner year.

It is believed that this increase in tourist traffic has been due to the advertising of this, the only organization of municipalities in Ontario, whch inclued the issuing of descriptive pamphlets, and the exhibits placed at the New York Motor Boat show by the Dominion Government.

Request to Government.

A resolution was passed requesting the Federal Government to again send the exhibit of the Trent Waterway to the New York Motor Boat Show to be held in the Grand Central Palace in January.

A deputation will be named to interview the Provincial Government, with the object of securing an anuarium of fish for the New York Motor Boat Show.

A resolution was passed empowering the Association to compile a pamphlet containing government charts of the Trent Waterway, with descriptive matter, providing the consent of the government is secured. The estimated cost of this small pamphlet would be $1500. These could be sold at a nominal price, and will also be distributed at the New York Motor Show.

Complete the Canal.

Senator Bennett suggested that the municipalities along the route of the waterway should memorialize the government to complete the construction of the locks at Swift Rapids, on the Severn Route. This work had been undertaken but had never been completed. It would cost about $200,00 to complete the locks.

The secretary will get in touch with the different municipalities relative to this matter.

BRIDE ONLY FIFTEEN.

An Italian in Port Arthur Is Charged With Perjury In Marriage License.

PORT ARTHUR, Sept. 18—(Canadian Press).—Charged with perjury in stating to the issuer of marriage licenses that the bride-to-be was twenty years of age, Jos. Cardons, Italian, appeared in the Police Court yesterday and was remanded for eight days. The bride of two days, Carmelia Pinto, is said to be only fifteen years of age.

FALSE FIRE ALARM.

Jail Sentence of Six Months Imposed in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Sept. 18.—Mozart Larimas, 20, appeared in the prisoner's dock before Recorder Geoffrion, charged with sending in a false alarm from the St. Denis and Emery Street block early yesterday morning.

The prisoner admitted his guilt, was sentenced to six months in jail and fined one hundred dollars.

Larimas was picked up by the police who are plagued with an epidemic of false fire alarms.

SHE IS THE FAVORED ONE

And now that the Prince of Wales visit to the United States is nearing a close, it is time to take stock and see who was the favorite dancing partner of H. R. H. Undoubtedly it was Mrs. Richard Norton (above) often called England's most beautiful woman. She came over with the Prince's party.

CANTOR CUTS IN ON THE PRINCE

Comedian at Wanamaker Party Drags Prince Away From Beauty in Pink.

GREETED AS DAVY.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—No further conjecture seems to be necessary over the much discussed question of the Prince of Wales's favorite dancing partner.

At a party given by Rodman Wanamaker, 2nd, in the gaily decorated boathouse on his beautiful Long Island estate at Cold Spring Harbor, it seemed to be neither Mrs. Frederick Cruger, the dark-eyed beauty with whom the Prince has danced so much since his arrival, nor Mrs. Richard Norton, reputed one of the most beautiful women in England, a member of the Prince's party; nor any of the others who have been mentioned.

Mr. Wanaamker asked Eddie Cantor, the comedian, to come down to entertain the guests. Eddie came blackfare, and with him came George Oslen's band from "Kid Boots" and the Ziegfeld Follies. As the Prince was dancing with a gorgeous young thing in pink, Eddie rushed up to him, tanned him on the shoulder and said:

Eddie Dances With Dave.

"Dave, old boy, how about cutting in?"

The future ruler of the British Empire stepped back, a baffled smile on his face, ran a hand through his hair and was just about to answer when Cantor grabbed him in his arms and led him around the floor.

This to the evident amusement of His Royal Highness, and to the hilarious amusement of all the guests. When the music stopped the Prince and Cantor walked from the floor, arm in arm, both beaming broad smiles.

The party was an informal one, of the kind greatly to the Prince's taste, and he seemed to be enjoying himself to the utmost. Once, during a temporary halt in the music, he called Cantor to his side and asked him to have the band play "Going South," although they had played it a few minutes previous. Cantor said:

"Why, we just played that."

Wales answered: "I know, but let's have it again, I like it."

Wales Danced Every Dance.

During the second rendering of the piece, the Prince smiled, turned to murmur something to Mrs. Cruger and began to snap his fingers and sway his shoulders to the strains. Something Mrs. Cruger said in an undertone brought a vigorous nod and a broad smile from His Royal Highness.

TUBE-LIKE SHAPE IS FASHION EDICT

Milady May Wear Clothes Most Any Way, But Must Resemble Tin Can.

SLIMS DOMINATE.

CHICAGO, September 18. — The woman of fashion may have her sleeves long, or medium, or short—or have no sleeves at all—and still be in the mode. Her skirts may be at her knees, or her insteps, and nobody may say for a certainty that she is not the height of the mode. Her waistline may be at her hips, or at her normal waist, or up under her arms, or she may discard a waistline altogether, and still be the last word in smartness, but she has got to have the general silhouette of a tube of toothpaste.

Tubelike Silhouette the Thing.

The straight, slim, tube like silhouette is the distinguishing feature of the autumn and winter fashions, according to the gowns to be shown at the annual fashion show of the Fashion Art League of America, yesterday, at the Congress Hotel. The league is holding its annual convention at the Auditorium this week and dressmakers from all over the country are learning the latest methods in draping, cutting, fitting and applying embroidery.

ANGLIN CHOSEN SUPREME COURT CHIEF JUSTICE

And Chief Justice McKeown of New Brunswick Succeeds Late F. B. Carvell.

ON RAILWAY BOARD.

Judge McKeown Appointed as Chairman of Railway Commission of Canada.

OTTAWA, Sept. 18. —(Canadian Press).—The appointment of the Hon. Francis Alexander Anglin, puisne judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, to the position of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada was announced last night Chief Justice Anglin succeeds the Right Hon. Sir Louis Davies in this position.

Chief Justice Anglin was born in St. John N.B., in April 1855, a son of the Hon. T. W. Anglin, a former speaker of the House of Commons. He was called to the bar in 1888, created King's counsel in 1902 and appointed puisne judge of the high court of Ontario in March 1904. His appointent to the Supreme Court of Canada dates from Feb. 20, 1909.

To Railway Board

Chief Justice H. A. McKeowjn of the King's Bench division, Supreme Court of New Brunswick, has been appointed chief of the board of rail way commissioners for Canada. His appointment was made to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. F. B. Carvel.

Chief Justice McKeown is the Royal Commissioner appointed by the government to investigate claims for indenity made by depositors of the Home Bank. He conducted hearings at Ottawa and Toronto covering a period of some weeks and eventually brought in a report in which he found that representations were made to the department of finance in 1916 and 1918 which would have justified an investigation by the Minister of Finance under the Bank Act.

The new chief commissioner has been Chief Justice of New Brunswick since 1916. He was born in St. Stephen, N.B. on Nov. 28, 1868. He was admitted to the bar of New Brunswick in 1884 and became a judge of the supreme court of his province in 1909. He was elected to the Legislature of New Brunswick in 1890 representing St. John City and county and became a member of the government in 1899. From 1903 to 1907 he was solicitor general and from 1907 to 1909 Attorney-General of N.B. In politics he is a Liberal.

Grand Opera House,

"The First Year" opened a week's engagement at His Majesty's Theatre here Monday night to capacity audience. I do not remember ever witnessing such enthusiasm as was displayed. The critics acclaimed it the best comedy since some time back. Continual laughter from beginning of first act until last curtain. Four or five curtain calls—an unusual thing for a comedy-drama in this city. House practically sold out for balance of week. In my estimation "The First Year" is going to duplicate in Canada what it did throughout the United States, and feel confident that this will meet with the greatest success in your city. The cast is of the highest type and includes several well known Broadway stars. Attraction is beautifully mounted, and as to the entertainment value, I have never witnessed anything better. Understand attraction marked in your town, and there is no reason why you should not get as good business with it as I have.

THE FORDSON TRACTOR is absolutely indispensable at this particular time for the following reasons:

1. You have been unable to keep up with your work as you would like to have done.

2. Grass and weeds of all kinds are particularly bad, on account of so much wet weather.

3. The Fall is late and a Stiff Tooth Cultivator or Tandum Disc will solve the problem of first plowing in a reasonably satisfactory manner.

4. When the days are hot and the flies are bad, when most can be accomplished, the tractor is at its best.

5. For many reasons land requires much more cultivation than heretofore, without which the growing of good crops is impossible.

6. Power on the farm is becoming more and more an important factor.

WHALE CUT IN TWO.

Impact Felt Amidships on Board Large Ocean Liner.

MONTREAL, September 18. — (United Press.) — Whale hunting de luxe was practiced by the giant Cunarder "Berengaria," on her last trans-Atlantic voyage.

The "Berengaria" ran into a school of whales in mid-ocean, cutting one squarely in two with her huge stem.

The impact of the 50,000 ton ship against the whale was so strong that it was felt amidships in the "Berengaria."

ELECTION TALK STIRS BRITISH

Opinion Divided As To Date But Parties Are Already Preparing.

RUSSIAN TREATY.

LONDON, Sept. 18.— (Canadian Press Cable).—Those who "ought to know" in the political world appear to be equally divided in the opinion as to the probable date of the next general election. Some say there will be an election in November and others predict that the general election will take place early next year. There are few who do not believe that an election is inevitable in the near future. The difference of opinion being chiefly as to the likely date.

Whether the election is held this year or early next year the fighting organizations of the different political parties are being whipped into shape for the big battle of the ballots, whenever it comes.

Autumn Session.

Parliament will meet for its autumn session on Saturday then the Anglo-Soviet treaty will be considered. This question is much likelier to lead to a general election than the other leading question of the moment, the Irish boundary although the supporters of the government admit that the Anglo-Russion question will probably prove the less popular of the two with the electroate.

There is some talk of the government accepting amendments to the Anglo-Russian treaty. The attitude of the liberal party in this, as in most other matters that come up in parliament, will deceide the fate of the government's treaty proposal.

It was learned yesterday that the Liberal view on the Anglo-Russian treaty. The attitude of the Liberal party in this, as in most other matters that come up in Parliament, will decide the fate of the government's treaty proposal.

It was learned yesterday that the Liberal view on the Anglo-Russian treaty is that the treaty might not prove unacceptable to the Liberal members of the house of commons provided suitable amendments were made thereto. A few prominent Liberals have expressed their views on the treat but in the main the Liberal party is living up to the famous phrase of its leader, "Wait and see."

If the treaty is ratified by parliament the probability of dissolution in November will be considerably lessened of course, and unless some sudden crisis should arise there will be no need for an election in the immediate future. When the time comes the parties will be found to be well prepared for the fight.

In the Conservative circles there are unmistabeable signs of preparations for a November election.

The Liberal party organizatons also are active.

Premier MacDonald will address a meeting in Glasgow at the end of September.

Boundary Quesiton.

As to the Irish quesiton it is well known that the Conservative members of Parliament will seriously challenge the government bill to set up a boundary commisison without the assent of Ulster but it is regarded as highly improbable that the bill will be rejected by House of Commons Informed Conservative opinion no longer anticipates any move being made by the House of Lords which would precipitate an election and therefore there seems little likelihood of an appeal being made to the country on the Irish boundary question.

NORWOOD MEETING FOR ORGANIZATION

Temperance Workers Get Together In Interests of the Temperance Cause.

NORWOOD, September 18. — A largely attended and very enthusiastic meeting was held in the town hall Norwood yesterday for the purpose of organizing the electors of East Peterboro in support of the Ontario Temperance Act. Mr. Samuel Armstrong of Otonabee occupied the chair.

The meeting was opened by singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," after which Rev. J. P. McLennan of the Baptist Church, Norwood, lead in prayer.

Mr. Armstrong in a few words stated the purpose of the meeting.

Mrs. R. G. Lawlor, president of the East Peterboro branch of the Womans' Prohibition League, was called to the platform and gave an account of what had been done along that line. Branches have been organized in Lakefield, Keene and Norwood, Warsaw, Havelock and Westwood will likely organize very soon.

Mr. Carman Denike, of Havelock, was appointed secretary for the meeting, and also agent and secretary-treasurer for the society.

Rev. W. P. Rodgers, of Norwood, in addressing the meeting, said he believed the Ontario Temperance Act better than Government control. He believed in moderation in things that are good, and total abstinence in things that are evil. Government control has failed to control.

Rev. T. M. Wesley said: "We have met to get inspiration towards organization. We have five weeks' strenuous work ahead in opposition to the old liquor traffic." Some are dissatisfied with the O.T.A. It is the best temperance measure that has ever been, although not perfect, but let us go forward, not backward, and seek something better. Government control means Government sale. This will not do away with bootlegging, so we will have illegitimate sale and legitimate sale.

Mr. G. A. Brethen, M.P., was very much interestred in the cause which was the most important fight we have ever been in. The eyes of the whole world are on Ontario, and we cannot afford to fall down. He thought more could be done by organization than by speech-making.

Interesting addresses were given by E. N. McDonald, ex-M.L.A., Reeves Anderson of Otonabee, Scott of Asphodel and Hawthorne of Dummer.

Rev. A. McLaughlin of Keene gave an outline of the organization and stated that the Ontario Plebiscite Committee had decided to keep strictly out of politics. Men were being released from the Methodist, Presbyterian and other churches, also from other societies, to allow them to devote their time and energy to the cause.

The following officers were elected:

Mr. S. Armstrong, President of the Mens' Department.

Mrs. R. G. Lawlor, President of the Woman's Department.

Mr. C. Denike, Secretary Treasurer, with the following to represent the different municipalities:

Norwood, Mrs. John Weir.
Havelock, Mr. Thos. Wood.
Lakefield, Mr. F. J. Lillicrap.
Otonabee, Mrs. Wm. Anderson.
Asphodel, Mr. G. A. Brethen, M.P
Belmont and Methuen, Rev. H. Herrington.
Dummer, E. N. McDonald.
Douro, Mrs. Forsythe.
Burleigh, Mr. Brown.
Anstruther, Mr. Campbell.

Ways and Means were discussed to raise means to carry on the campaign. God save the King was sung and the meeting adjourned.

LOSS BECOMES PROFIT.

High Finance of the Home Bank Revealed at Trial.

TORONTO, Sept. 18. — Expert evidence as to how the books of the Home Bank were made up, so as to show profits at the end of the year instead of actual losses, was given at the trial of Ocean G. Smith, former chief accountant, yesterday, when Albert E. Nash, accountant, took the stand. As the profits were merely mythical, dividends were actually paid from the capital of the bank or from deposits, he stated. The witness showed that for 1923, $232,539 was set out to be net profit, but actually there was a loss of $41,817, and this without providing for bad and doubtful debts, for the 1922 loss was shown to be $156,261. "Profits" were made by transfers from the contingent account, by writing up of property, by addition of premiums and other methods.

The difference between the actual and book statues of securities held by the bank was placed at $2,602,000. There was a loss on loans and overdrafts of $1,315,000, and the witness stated that the capital of the bank would have been seriously lessened if this had been taken into account. The estimated deficiency in the Toronto branch call loans was $858,692.

STOPS JAY WALKING.

Effort Will Be Made To Prevent Accidents In Toronto.

TORONTO, Sept. 18.—(Canadian Press).—As a means of preventing "jay walking" in the busy downtown sections, the jury at the morgue last night recommended that a cable be strung along a devil strip of tracks. The jury also recommended that better regulations be made by the police to govern pedestrian traffic in congested districts.

Traffic regulations in Toronto are not only inadequate but are behind the times, Chief Constable Dixon told the Board of Control yesterday afternoon. The speed limit within the city — 20 miles an hour—was entirely too fast, he also stated.

The Chief appeared before the Board to urge the creation of more one-way streets, the further prohibition of parking during rush hours, and the adoption of a system of boulevard stops. The Board agreed to some of the measures but refused to sanction the boulevard stop system.

COCOA STAINS

Cocoa stains in linen should be washed first in cold water and then boiling water should be poured through until all traces of the stain are effaced.

NEWS CAMPBELLFORD.

Miss Jennie Beatrice Johnston Died Following an Operation.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 18. — Jennie Beatrice, daughter of James W. and the late Mrs. Johnstone, died Tuesday at Aurora, N.Y., following an operation. The deceased who was 23 years old was a trained nurse in the hospital in which she died. Her father left here Monday for the bedside of his daughter.

The remains were brought to the family home on Ranney street and the funeral will be held at 2.30 this afternoon to Mount Pleasant Cemetery. Rev. C. F. McIntosh will conduct religious services at the house at 2 o'clock.

September Brides

On Wednesday morning at half past nine there was a very quiet wedding in Christ Church, when Miss Maud West, second daughter of the E. C. and Mrs. West of Seymour West, was married to Major Robert P. Saunders, D.S.O.M.C., son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Saunders of Toronto. The Rector, Rev. G. C. Clarke, B.A., performed the marriage ceremony. They were unattended.

The bride was given away by her brother Mr. Marshall West. The young couple will reside in Toronto.

Only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present.

The second wedding was at four o'clock Wednesday afternoon in the Anglican Church, Rev. G. C. Clarke, B.A., officiating.

Miss Blanche Retta Potts, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Potts, of Seymour East, was married to Mr. Henry William Corkan, of Toronto. The bridesmaid was Miss Gladys Hankinson, and the groomsman, Mr. George Stephens. There were about thirty guests present at the wedding. The bride was dressed in royal blue crepe de chine, and carried a bouquet of roses and gladioli.

Mr. and Mrs. Corkan will leave on Saturday for Parry Sound, and afterwards to Toronto, where they will reside.

The friends of the bride are having a miscellaneous shower for her on Thursday night at her home.

FAIR AT BRIGHTON.

Competition Keen In All Departments—The Best Yet.

HILTON, September 18. — The annual Brighton Township school fair was held here to day and was in every way the best yet.

The exhibits far surpass the township fairs, and will keep the county fair stepping to keep even.

The Strathcona exercises were very closely contested, and the judges, Crews and Smith, found the margin very narrow between all the schools contesting.

The winners were: 1st, S. S. No. 17, Miss Helen Yeomans, teacher; 2nd, S. S. No. 13, Miss Marie McCullough teacher.

The greatest interest seemed to centre around the Latimer trophy, which is contested for annually, and every teacher and scholar left nothing undone to carry off the coveted prize.

S. S. No. 15, Codrington, Mr. G. Clark, winning by a close shave on total points, with S. S. No. 17, Miss Yeomans, teacher, a very close second, who were followed by S. S. No. 8, Miss Selby, teacher, and without doubt those who failed were very much in the race.

Separate points were S. S. 17, Marching, 1st, Singing, 2nd. Special features, S. S. 15, 1st Special Features, 2nd Singing, 2nd Marching, S. S. No. 8, Marching 3rd, singing 3rd, Marching 2nd. S. S. No. 8, Marching 3rd, Singing 3rd, and S. S. No. 9, 3rd in Special Features.

The magnificent portrait of the death of Minnehaha, was the feature of the contest and Mr. Calrk deserved the well earned trophy, and without a doubt every scot of Scotland was sure that Miss Selby's school should have been first and it would have carried off the palm in a Scotch community. The present generation need have no fears as to the future interest in farming, manual training and everything that goes to keep to the forefront rural Ontario.

FAITH NATIVE LAND.

Hon. Ernest Lapointe Addressed Large Audience In Toronto Last Night.

TORONTO, Sept. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Voicing his unshaken idealism, his faith in his native land and his confidence in education of right sort as a panacea for threatened ills Hon. Ernest Lapointe, minister of justice for Canada, held a huge audience in rapt attention last night at Massey Hall, during course of an address on Canadian Citizenship," before representative Catholics of the Dominion assembled for convention of Catholic Truth Society.

Fundamental importance was laid by the minister in commencing his address upon facts that the public wealth was in the popular conscience. The worth and strength of any nation," he said, 'is not in its vastness, number of its soldiers, its beauty nor kindness of its climate, rather, real strength of national power is in the quality of its citizenship."

The most important factor in good citizenship he continued, was intelligent self control combined with consciousness of duty. Citizens must be able to subordinate their wills to national will by voting, filling positions of trust, working for and with community. If we cannot bear the burdens which democracy imposes we cannot call ourselves democrats. The secret desire to let some one else do things for us is desertion. Nobody has the right to say, "it's not my business." The community's business is always ours; we can always help in some way.

ON CANADIAN TRADE.

Improvement Shown in Canada's Commercial Credit Abroad.

OTTAWA, Sept. 18.— (Canadian Press).— An outstanding feature of the summary of Canadian trade issued by the Department of Customs and Excise is remarkable improvement shown in Canada's commercial credit with other countries. Taking together the decrease of $59,720,954 in Canada's imports for five months of present fiscal year ending with August 31st and increase of $14,754,426 in the exports of Canada, excluding foreign merchandise exported from this country, "there is a net gain in Dominion's trade balance of $75,475,3480 in the five month period as against the same period last year.

GILBERTSON TRIAL.

Lack of Lights Caused Postponement of Murder Case.

CAYUGA, Sept. 18.—(Canadian Press.) — Because there are no lights installed in the new court house here, Mr. Justice Kelly at 5.30 last evening found it necessary to adjourn the Gilbertson murder charge trial until this morning. There is only the judge's summing up to come before the case is handed over to the jury. Mrs. Helen Gilbertson, the accused woman, at times indulged in weeping and at other times maintained an impassive silence in the prisoner's dock, wept afresh when she heard that her fate would not be decided last night.

Officers of the jail said the woman, who is accused of murder of her husband, George Gilbertson, by the administrtaion of strychnine at her home on June 22nd last, was so confident of acquittal that she had made all arrangements to leave the jail last night.

Dr. J. S. McCracken, who attended George Gilbertson just before his death, said he found Gilbertson in convulsions. His wife said he had taken a quinine capsul. Gilbertson asked the doctor, "Have I been poisoned?" "Yes," said the doctor. Thereupon the dying man turned to his wife with the remark, "Nell, Nell, you have done it this time."

BUNK

When John Wilkes Booth leaped to the stage of Ford's Theatre after shooting Abraham Lincoln, he did not stop dramatically and shout, "Sic semper tyrannis" or anything else. If he said anything at all he didn't stop when he was saying it. He was fleeing for his life and he wasted no time on speeches.

This is the version of William J. Ferguson, who was callboy and prompter at Ford's Theatre that historic night.

There's a lot of bunk in history—to make it thrill us. Napoleon's famed pose was not for meditation or effect, but to keep his cape about him for warmth.

BRIDE

Massachusetts man married a pretty waitress. In the following year she purchased two new suits a week—104 in the year. This comes out at the divorce hearing.

Apparently this bride gratified a long supressed desire for fine feathers. We all have some such desire. But few are ever able to gratify the yearning, as did this ex-waitress. She was Cinderella, though only for a year. Now she has the memories—and the gowns.

FARMS

"Interest paid on total farm indebtedness consumed all capital earnings in the crop years 1920-21 and 1921-22. In the next two years there was a return of 3.1 (three and a tenth) per cent on the total capital invested in agriculture, including rewards of management."

So runs the government report.

My, wouldn't we have a low cost of living if all other industries got only 3-percent profit, like the farm! However, industry is embarking on a year's long voyage of big sales but low rates of profit compared with the past. The chief effects of sharp competition in low profits. That's why businesses so readily consolidate into semi-monopolies.

FARMER

Uncle Sam estimates that, in the last five years, the average farmer made a net profit, on his investment of capital, of a bit less than 3 per cent a year. "Even this meager showing was only made by valuing the labor of farm operators and their families at no more than the current rate for common labor."

This low profit rate was the result of several things, principal being over-production of food. For years this country harped: "Back to the farm!" Scientific agriculture, by increasing crops, has more than made up the shortage of rural man-power

INFLATED

Among other things, many farmers are the victims of land speculation—trying to earn a fair rate of profit on land bought at too high prices during post-war speculation.

Industry did the same, only on a gigantic scale. Most businesses inflated their capitalization, by stock dividends chiefly, to dodge the tax collector. They've been trying to earn the old-time rate of return on more capitalization than they are economically entitled to.

COMING

Inflated prices have been reduced considerably. There'll be more reduction, by waves or cycles, as the years slip by.

The next major movement or cycle in industry will be deflation of capitalization. Already it's becoming necessary and unavoidable. Many industries have seen the light and acted.

A business that valued itself at $200,000 in the boom, but worth only $100,000 now, is not going to be able to earn on the high basis during sharp competition.

A SUICIDE MADE ELABORATE PLANS

Aged Man Went Through Complete Death House Formula.

(By Percy M. Sarl, United Press Staff Correspondent).

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Haunted by memories of executions he had witnessed while chief warden at Wandsworth Prison, Charles Lazell hanged himself with all the elaborate detail with which he had seen scores of men go to their deaths.

The aged man, past eighty, went through the complete death-house formula. First he found that the shed he had chosen as the spot for the suicide was the same number of paces from his house as the Wandsworth execution shed was from the death cell. Early in the morning he arose and demanded his favorite dishes in accord with the prison custom of allowing prisoners under death sentence to eat what they like the morning of their execution. He was given these delicacies. Then he told his family he did not care to be disturbed as he was going to the shed "and he had work to do."

In the shed he tested the noose which had been strung from one of the rafters. This was in accord with the Wandsworth customs.

Then he mounted a pair of steps, fixed the noose about his throat, and leaped through a trap door. His body was found several hours later.

Winnipeg man prefers Kellogg's Bran to Million Dollars

"If," says Mr. J .M. Michols of Winnipeg, "I had to choose between doing without your bran or a million dollars, I would much rather do without the million."

Mr. Michols is one hundred per cent right. The wealth of the world could not buy the health that Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, has brought to thousands of Canadians. Mr. Michols wrote us to ask if Kellogg's Bran is sold in Liverpool as he is going abroad and did not want to be without it.

Kellogg's Bran has restored health to legions of sufferers after all else has failed. It is guaranteed to bring relief in the most chronic cases of constipation—permanent relief if eaten regularly. The reason is—Kellogg's Bran is ALL bran. Only ALL bran can bring 100% results. That is why doctors everywhere, recommend Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled.

Kellogg's Bran is totally unlike ordinary unpalatable bran. Kellogg's Bran has a delicious nut-like flavor. It is as enjoyable as it is beneficial. Try it with milk or cream, sprinkled over other cereals, cooked with hot cereals or in the wonderful recipes given on every package.

Eat at least two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases with every meal. It is guaranteed to relieve the most obstinate case of constipation or the purchase price will be returned. Don't delay. Constipation, if neglected, can lead to over forty serious diseases. Begin eating Kellogg's Bran today. Made in London, Canada and sold by all dealers.

Mr. Maurice Condon has purchased the farm formerly occupied by Mr. Deane near Warsaw.

Mrs. Thos. Forsythe spent a few days last week with Peterboro friends.

Miss Bessie Cavanagh is making satisfactory progress after her recent operation.

Bengaline Weaves Smart.

The Bengaline weaves are the smartest for street and tailored wear and for dressier occasions velvets and laces, metal cloths and embroideries are being lavishly used. There is even a return of ornamental decoration similar to the passamenterie that adorned grandma's best dress.

The brighter shades of brown, including reddish brown and ranging to the lighter shades called "blonde" are popular for street wear. A new blue that is almost violet and greens varying from willow green to bottle green are popular, with a new shade called shutter green, that is between the two shades, are used. Cranberry red is another of the new bright shades, and for evening wear tones ranging from orchid to fuchsia are good.

A FATAL ACCIDENT.

One Dead and Three In Hospital As Result of Motor Car Smash.

OWEN SOUND, Sept. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Miss Irma Nethercott is dead and Mrs. William Douglas, Mrs. James Cameron and Miss Eleanor Blair are in the General and Marine Hospital in a very dangerous condition as the result of an automobile accident shortly after 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at Kemble, twelve miles from Owen Sound.

Miss Nethercott was a trained nurse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Nethercott, of Woodstock, Ont., and was about 30 years of age.

The automobile was being driven by Mrs. W. Douglas, of this city. Just what happened has not been ascertained. The road at the spot where the fatality occurred is straight and wide, and it is thought something went wrong with the car.

SERIOUS OFFENCE.

Three Lindsay Drunks Are Charged With Entering House and Assaulting Woman.

LINDSAY, Sept. 18.—Three Lindsay men named Anderson, Madill and Spencley appeared before Police Magistrate Bradford in the County Police Court yesterday, charged with a serious offence. It is alleged that they entered the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Olson, who reside on the northern borders of the town, on Sunday night. They smashed in the back door, and two of them laid hands on Mrs. Olson, while the third kept Mr. Olson from interfering. They were under the influence of liquor, and while in the house, it is charged, offered Mr. Olson liquor. The trio were under the influence of liquor at the time. The case was adjourned until Monday next, when an additional charge—infraction of the O.T.A.—will be laid.

ISSUE OPIUM RATION.

Malay Investigtors Find Disease Not At All Serious.

SINGAPORE, Sept. 18.—The use of prepared opium in Malay has diminished in recent years, and its eventual elimination depends on individual control, says the report of a committee appointed to enquire into the matter. It is stated that registration of smokers should be given an exhaustive trial leading up to a rationing system.

The committee expresses gratification "in finding that the disease is not so desperate as to demand desperate remedies," and adds that precipitate suppression affords no solution and would introduce complications in the ultimate eradication of the habit.

THE WHEAT CROP.

An Ottawa newspaper uses its eight-column streamer head across the front page to tell its readers that "all Canada wheat is worth nearly 400 millions."

That the space usually reserved for displaying sensational news is devoted to a crop estimate indicates a keen sense of news value on the part of the paper in question.

After all, the biggest news for Canadians right now is the latest report from the harvest fields.

And this is good enough to be set forth in the biggest headlines.

Miss Cora Hind, the agricultural editor of the Manitoba Free Press, whose estimates are invariably very close to the mark, places the yield of the Western wheat crop at 295,858,791 bushels.

The Dominion Government estimate for the wheat crop in Eastern Canada as about 25,000,000 millions gives a total estimated wheat crop for all Canada of 320,858,791 bushels.

At the prevailing net prices of wheat in the West, the crop as estimated would be worth about $360,000,000.

The result to Canada as a whole of such a large sum as this being put into circulation can be readily estimated.

It is possible, of course, that a large percentage of it will go toward reducing bank loans and into saving accounts, rather than in the purchase of anything but sheer necessaries, but even under those circumstances the East cannot fail to benefit.

FOOL-PROOF NOW.

Although the form of ballot as originally announced seemed clear enough to be understood by the most stupid elector, the Ontario Government's action in further simplifying the taking of the plebiscite surely makes the ballot fool-proof.

It has been finally decided that instead of the voter being required to vote "yes" or "no" on each question, he will simply have to mark a cross opposite the particular question which he desires to answer in the affirmative.

If he wants to vote for the retention of the Ontario Temperance Act he will place a cross opposite the first question.

If he desires the sale of liquor as a beverage under Government control he will place a cross opposite the second question.

Any other marking will render the ballot invalid; a person who happened to put a cross after both questions would nullify his vote.

Both sides approve the change, agreeing that it is the simplest ballot that could be arranged.

The ballot question settled, the campaign can now get under way, and from all indications it will be the most thoroughly organized fight in the history of Ontario.

A flood of oratory, printed matter and newspaper appeals to an extent never before seen in this Province will be in full tide before another week is over, and will continue until October 23rd.

CODDLED TOO MUCH?

With the Farmers' Sun complaint that Canada is suffering from too much coddling, there will be a large measure of support.

The Sun feels that we are drifting away from the old-time virtues of thrift and self-reliance, referring to the demands for old-age pensions, unemployment doles, minimum wages fixed by statutory enactment, community nursing and other social legislation as evidence of its contention.

That such things as unemployment doles are demoralizing cannot be denied.

Great Britain's experience shows that men soon get accustomed to taking aid of this nature and that their desire to be independent is soon blunted by the knowledge that they can get a living for nothing.

The old instinct of self-preservation, the old impulse to save for the rainy day, are being killed by this "coddling," to use the Sun's expressive word.

Why save for a time of unemployment when the state will come to one's assistance when the need arises?

Why work at all when there are doles for those out of work, is the logical development of the line of reasoning set up by too much pampering legislation.

Many of these measures seem desirable, but the cumulative effect of so many of them is not altogether reassuring.

A CRIME WORSE THAN MURDER.

The vicious attack on two old people, Samuel Palmer, aged 84, and his sister, 81, near Aylmer, was of a nature that runs riot with every impulse of red-blooded manhood, says the London Advertiser. The person making the attack was an able-bodied man; he gained entrance to their lonely home by stating that his motor was in trouble and he needed a lantern. The aged people, even at a late hour at night, were willing to do what they could by lighting the lantern and handing it to the intruder.

In return for this kindness they were in turn beaten with a hickory club—beaten to the point of death, until they agreed to hand over all the money they possessed, the sum of two dollars.

The attack was all the more revolting because it defied every law of the universe. One of the first instincts of a man is the protection of those weaker than himself. He would not injure a child; he would do all in his power to prevent injury. He shows deference to old age always—it is not even necessary for him to stop to consider such action; it is spontaneous, the thing that a man does almost by instinct.

The crime near Aylmer is worse than murder, if such an anti-climax in the category of crime is possible. It is the most damnable charge on which a human being could be indicted. Men have walked to the gallows for crimes in which criminal intent was far less in evidence than in the case of this scoundrel.

Every ounce of energy that our forces of detection possess should be loosed on this case. A murderer is at large.

MURDERED BY "SPORT."

Another automobile race driver has been sacrificed to the insane idea that driving motor cars at one hundred miles an hour with death sitting at the elbow of the man at the wheel is sport.

Within the past few weeks three famous race pilots have been killed in contests of this kind, and it seems a pity that the mad competition should be allowed to continue.

Automobile racing gets its greatest thrill from the fact that at any moment the slightest slip on the part of the driver or the most minute flaw in the mechanism of his automobile may hurl a human being into eternity.

Were it possible for the cars to be automatically handled in a speed contest promoters of these races would not be able to attract a corporal's guard of spectators.

It is the human element in the thing that lures; the thought that these men crouched over the wheel of their vibrating machines are flirting with death every moment of the race that fills the stands and lines the course with onlookers.

Enough people are being killed in the ordinary way by automobiles every day without adding to their numbers by staging races that are northing more or less than death-traps for the competitors.

Jimmy Murphy, the latest victim, was murdered to make a Roman holiday for the crowd at the New York State Fair.

He should be the last driver on this Continent to be slain.

CHINA'S CIVIL WAR.

There seems no longer to be any hope that serious civil war can be avoided in China.

The armies of Chang-Tso-Lin are sweeping down toward Shan-Hai-Kwan, the sea gap through the Great Wall into Chili, the province that encloses Peking. The first action has already occurred near Chao Yang, which is an important city close to the border of Manchuria well to the north of the Great Wall. It is likely that any Peking garrison here would be relatively small, and that Chang's troops would have little difficulty in mopping them up.

The very reliable cable we have from Osaka, Japan, based upon war correspondence to the Osaka Mainichi, one of the most important papers in Japan, says that the Chili forces are gathering at Shan-Hai-Kwan to hold that Pass of Thermopylae against the Manchuria raiders. There are three thousand men there now, and the Peking Railway is rushing troops from the Capital and from Tien-Tsin to this critical point. Wu-Pei-Fu—the war lord of Chili and military master of the Peking Government—expects to assemble an army of thirty thousand men there before Chang is in a position to strike.

This means that the Peking party will not make any serious attempt to stop Chang's advance north of the Great Wall, although a part of Chili Province must be surrendered by these tactics. But they realize that they are confronted by the strongest and best equipped army in China, and that they will need all the advantages of position and rail support for the decisive conflict. The fact that the Osaka Mainichi had a correspondent on the ground to go forward with the Chang forces, indicates that the Japanese knew that something important and interesting was about to happen.

* * * *

While the fighting around Shanghai has not been decisive, the failure of the Kiangsu army to wrest Shanghai from the Chekiang party—who have no right to it, Shanghai lying within the Province of Kiangsu—is really a victory for the Chang-Tso-Lin group of allies. Chang is behind the Chekiang tuchun, while Wu is supporting the Kiangsu generals. The plan of campaign obviously was for the Peking group, acting through the Kiangsu forces, to make a drive for Shanghai and so get possession of that important port and trade centre, before the dreaded advance of the Chang armies from Manchuria could take place.

If they had succeeded in their drive, they would have had Shanghai in their possession for the campaign; and, having disposed of the Chekiang soldiers before "the big show" opened, could have sent a lot of their Kiangsu troops north to augment the armies of the Peking Government at Shan-Hai-Kwan. Thus a deadlock about Shanghai is really a defeat for Peking tactics. Obviously, the Kiangsu armies cannot be depleted while they are still engaged in a doubtful struggle with the Chekiang forces along the Yangtse. To weaken themselves at this time would be to invite a still deeper invasion of their Province by the Chekiang leaders, who already have robbed them of Shanghai.

We had the report last week that Wu-Pei-Fu intended to pour a decisive number of troops into the conflict around Shanghai, and so break down all Chekiang resistance out of hand. But he did nothing of the sort. The rumors of Chang's mobilization reaching him turned his attention to the north. He must be strong enough at Shan-Hai-Kwan to hold the pass before Chang arrives, and so had not a soldier to spare for what was after all only a preliminary and incidental fight along the Yangtse. His southern armies have been strung along the Peking-Hankow Railway all through the Shanghai fighting, ready to be whisked off north if Chang moved too soon.

The Verdun of the war is not Shanghai, but Shan-Hai-Kwan.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The first duty of every elector is to make sure of being on the list for the O. T. A. plebiscite.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Sept. 17.—Trade this morning was anything but bright and cattle moving to the scales were at easy prices. In between heavy steers sold at $5.75 a cwt. and one weighing 1,500 lbs. only brought $4.75 a cwt.

Medium quality butchers were hard to peddle. J. B. Shields & Co. had a load of heifers for which the best bid was $5 a cwt., and a similar load of steers for which the best bid was $5.25, and it looked as though these bids would have to be taken. Eddie Parsons sold three loads of feeders. Two of these were westerns. One of the latter, weighing 1,250 lbs. each sold at $6.50 a cwt, and the other 95 lbs. each brought $5.60 a cyt. The load of Ontario stockers averaging 800 lbs. each sold at $4.75 a cwt.

Medium and common cattle were slightly lower and the demand light. A few good bulls sold for export at $3.85 to $4.25. Butchers cows were reasonably steady.

The calf trade is quite steady and the Buffalo market is still absorbing a number from this market. Tops are 11 to 11½ cents and mediums 8 to 9½ cents.

The fight is still on for lower prices for lambs and packers were bidding 11 and 11¼ cents. Feeding ewes sold at 7 cents a pound.

HYGIENE COUNCIL.

Dr. Ray Scott Elected President in Place of Dr. N. H. Sutton.

A meeting of the local branch of the Social Hygiene Council was held in the offices of the Provincial Board of Health, Simcoe street, on Tuesday, to appoint a president to take the place of Dr. N. H. Sutton, who is resigning on account of his early removal to Toronto, where he will take a special course in social hygiene work at the University of Toronto. Dr. Ray Scott was elected President, and Dr. Sutton was made Honorary President of the local organization.

The Social Hygiene Council expects to hold a series of six lectures, during the months of October, November, January, February, March and April, when prominent speakers from out of town will give addresses on subjects of interest to the Council.

Reports were made on the success achieved by the Social Hygiene tent at the Fall Fair, which was under the supervision of Dr. N. H. Sutton, with assistants in Dr. C. B. Waite, Messrs. W. D. Tyrer and Ald. Walter Stocker. Mrs. G. S. McCartney, the clinic nurse, also gave splendid assistance, and a group of ladies, with Mrs. W. D. Tyrer as convenor, also several nurses, were in attendance at all times.

During Exhibition days over 1,000 visitors patronized the social hygiene tent, almost constant use was made of the machine showing slides of an educational nature, a quantity of literature was sold and several new subscribers added to the membership roll.

GUM-DIPPED BALLOONS

Perform as No Other Tire Can-

Because No Other Tire is Gum-Dipped

Gum-dipping is a special Firestone process that made the Balloon Tire practical by adding extra strength and endurance to its thin side wall construction. Gum-dipping insulates each strand of each cord with pure rubber. Destructive internal friction is eliminated—resistance to wear is increased—and longer life results.

Gum-dipping is the foundation of modern tire performance. Race drivers insist on gum-dipped cords, which have won all the important track and speedway events in recent years, including the Canadian National Exhibition races. Leading taxicab and bus operators recognize the mileage value of gum-dipped cord construction by standardizing on Firestone. Thousands of motorists use Gum-Dipped Cords exclusively because their own check-up of mileage and all-round performance has convinced them of gum-dipped superiority.

Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords produced remarkably high mileage per tire in 5,300,000 miles of supervised tests. For comfortable motoring, for greater safety in fall and winter driving—equip now with Firestone full-size Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords and Steam-Welded Tubes. Their leadership is based on proven merit.

TOO MUCH FURNITURE SPOILS COMFORT OF THE LIVING ROOM

Living Room Is the Most Difficult Room To Furnish—Avoid One Group.

Of all the rooms, the living room is most difficult to furinsh because fo the almost limitless choice of objects suitable for it.

Yet if the fundamental purpose of this room be kept in mind, the difficulty of choosing its furniture should be reduced considerably.

That purpose is the facilitation of comfort, rest, ease, entertainment and the pleasures of social contact Every article in the room, therefore, should help toward the fulfillment of any of these ends. If it doesn't it has not place there.

One thing that should be remembered is that the living room or any other room for that matter, unless one is built especially for the purpose, is not a museum or exhibition hall. Many living rooms of today look like one, with their antiques bric-a-brac and curios scattered in all corners.

A touch of the antique here or there is pleasing. But not too much of it.

Not Too Much.

Neither should the room be clogged with any kind of furniture. In the effort to provide comfort and ease, by adding chairs and lounges, many a housewife entirely destroys the feeling of comfort.

There is nothing so disastrous to the nerves as too much of anything in a room. Therefore, it is a good plan to be sparing in furnishing the living room. It is better to add a chair to a room, if it is needed, than to be forced to eliminate it after having spent time and money shopping for it.

Another point to remember is furnishing the living room is to allow each piece of furniture display itself to its fullest capabilities. The more furniture you have in the room, the less is this posible. And what's the use of buying new pieces that are hidden away from view and appreciation?

Avoid One Group.

Besides, if a piece isn't noticed, it is more than likely that it is rarely used also. Which is a double reason for not including it in the room's layout.

Groups of furniture lose themselves if they are joined too closely. One doesn't know where one ends and the next begins. The entire room becomes one large, unwieldy group—and the hostess has a job on her hands trying to keep her guests in that large group from becoming uneasy.

It is easier to let small groups of visitors entertain themselves than to jumble them together into one confusing crowd. That is the reason for the group idea in furnishing a room.

An the smaller the group, the more pleasant the gathering. It's all a matter of convenience for the hostess and ease, comfort and entertainment for the guests.

NEWS OF STIRLING.

Opening Day of the Fall Fair Brought In Large Number of Entries.

STIRLING, Sept. 18. — Stirling's Annual Exhibition started off (Tuesday) with a good exhibit in all the departments in the main building. The judging of these classes was completed and the articles on exhibition were considered of a high quality in most cases. The cheese exhibit promises to be large, by the way those interested are bringing them in tonight.

An accident, which cast a gloom over the whole village, occurred on Sunday when Rev. Mr. Lindsay's son, Richard Eldon, was killed near Frankford by being run over by a truck, loaded with people on their way to the Ivanhoe camp meeting. The young man was just sixteen days over seventeen years old, and was holding on to a strap at the side of the car and riding his bicycle; the bicycle swerved outward and he being near the front of the car, was pitched off his wheel, fell under the truck, the front wheel passing over his breast, crushing his life out.

The funeral took place today, service being held at his home here. The remains were taken by train for interment at Sydenham, Ont.

Fell on Sidewalk.

Miss Fitzpatrick, housekeeper at the Catholic Presbytery, had the misfortune to fall on the sidewalk, breaking her right arm and bruising the left one considerably.

Mr. Harold VanAllen, who attended the Peterboro' Fair with his large exhibit of poultry, met with good success, carrying off a great number of ribbons of different colors, left Monday night for Kingston to attend the industrial exhibition which is to be held there this week.

Mr. Thos. Cranston, with his wife and two children, and Mrs. Jas. Cranston, motored to Ottawa one day last week to visit relatives, returning Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Fox spent their holidays in and near Ottawa with friends and relatives.

Mr. Harold Martin, wife and daughter Ruth, have been the guests of Mrs. Tetlock, his aunt, in Rochester, New York.

Leave of Absence.

Rev. Robert Simpson, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, who is taking a [illegible] leave of absence, preached his last sermon on Sunday evening. The Rev. Mr. Neal, of Westminster Church, Toronto, a former moderator of the General Assembly, will be the preacher next Sunday at both services.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Dounan, of Belleville, were in town on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Sadler, Mr. and Mrs. Larkin, of Frankford, were visitors at Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Green's on Sunday.

Miss Myrtle McGee, nurse-in-training at the Oshawa Hospital, is spending her holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John D. McGee.

Mrs. D. V. Sinclair and daughter, Helen, of Belleville, accompanied by another daughter, Mrs. A. W. Rice, of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Miss Jack, of Belleville, were visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Sines on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Sutcliffe were waited upon by the members of the Anglican Church, prior to their leaving for their new home at Pakenham, and presented with a substantial purse in recognition of his long services as choir leader.

The Women's Auxiliary of the same church gave Mrs. Sutcliffe a copy of the prayer book and hymn book combined.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Buckingham have returned home after visiting friends in Winchester, Ottawa and Montreal.

Mr. Walter French, a former member of the Union Bank here, and who was transferred to Picton, has returned, and is occupying his old position in the bank here.

Miss Nellie Chambers, R.N., of Montreal, is at home with her parents, having been given leave of absence from her duties for a couple of weeks.

Miss Annie Mosher, of the office of the Department of Agriculture here, spent her holidays at Rochester and Brockport, New York, and Oshawa, Ont., has returned to her duties.

The rural school fairs, under the supervision of Mr. R. A. Atkins, district representative of agriculture, who attended the Ottawa Exhibition last week, will begin next week the first of the series being held in Madoc Township at Remington School.

The farmers have had a hard struggle to complete their harvesting in some sections, working nearly day and night to finish what has proved to be the latest on record for some years. Buckwheat is now being cut, which will still prolong the matter. They have the consolation, however, that they have reaped an abundant harvest, as grain is turning out well in nearly all cases.

GIRLS GET CHANCE IN WEST SHANTUNG

Villagers Clamour For Education For Girls—Social Service.

TECHOW, Shantung, Sept. 18.—(Associated Press).—An unprecedented desire for education for girls is being shown throughout the western districts of Shantung. For perhaps the last ten years there have been Government girls' schools in a few of the cities of this region, but they have not been popular and the enrollments have not been large.

Of late a distinct change has taken place. The villagers are clamoring for schools, and particularly for schools to impart western learning—geography, arithmetic, drawing, athletics and other branches hitherto not considered desirable for Chinese pupils and especially for girls.

A feature of the movement is a certain social service phase which it has assumed. Many girls who have been in school during the winter go to their homes for the summer and open schools for less fortunate girls. Boys too are working along the same line and in some instances where unable to get enough boy pupils they have admitted girls. Thus co-education is being introduced, an unheard-of mark of progress in these interior places.

POLICE SURROUND BALMORAL CASTLE

King George Is Well Protected At His Scottish Home.

ABERDEEN, Sept. 18.—(Associated Press).—Looking after the welfare of the British monarch when he makes his annual visit to Balmoral, his Scottish Highland seat, is the annual efficiency test of the constabulary of the country. The officers are proud of a record which shows that not once during the present reign has the King been annoyed in the royal grounds.

The constabulary are preparing for the visit of the King at the end of the month. A large force has been despatched to the castle and are keeping an eye out for any signs of coming disturbances or demonstrations which might interfere with the rest the royal family allow themselves at Balmoral. During the reigns of Victoria and Edward VII. a few disturbances were created on the castle grounds by cranks, but since then the constabulary have had the upper hand.

American visitors are also a source of annoyance to the guard about the castle, and it requires much diligence to keep these uninvited guests from intruding on the grounds in hopes of getting a peep at the King and Queen in their Highland retreat.

The country police check the identity of every stranger in Braemar, Ballater, and Aboyne, the nearest places to Balmoral where visitors are most likely to find accommodation, and if any undesirables have got through the net, they are readily caught and politely asked to return the way they came. Generally an officer sees that they do so.

It was an easy matter to guard Queen Victoria. She was much more inclined to keep herself to the vicinity of the Castle, with an occasional drive to Braemar with her faithful servant, John Brown. But the present King and Queen like to move about among their subjects, and the police have to ensure that they are not molested in any way.

VATICAN MAY ASK A PLACE IN THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

By HENRY WOOD
(United Press Staff Correspondent

GENEVA, Sept. 18 (United Press).—According to information at the Secretariat of the League of Nations here, the latter will eventually be called upon to pass upon the question of the admission of the Holy See as a member of the League.

It is not expected, however, that the movement now under way to this end will culminate in the Vatican's application for admission to the League for two or three years yet.

Following the public launching of the movement by the Argentine delegation at the recent Eucharistic congress at Amsterdam, where it was endorsed not only by the congress itself, but by Monsignor Cerretti, papal nuncio at Paris, the Vatican, according to information received at Geneva, will reorganize its entire diplomatic service to this end.

Following the recall from their present posts and their elevation to the Sacred College of cardinals of Monsignor Cerretti at Paris, and Monsignor Pascelli, the papal nuncio at Munich, the Chancellery of the Vatican will undertake a general shifting of its diplomats in order to place in the more important capitals of all countries, members of the League, diplomats best qualified to work for the Holy see's admission to the League.

Would Settle Status.

In League circles the information is generally credited that this movement on the part of the Vatican for entrance to the Holy see is desired as constituting a basis that will render possible a reconciliation between Italy and the Vatican and the definite settlement of the latter's temporal status.

Since 1870 when the new kingdom of Italy took from the pope not only the papal states, which constituted the former's temporary kingdom, but also Rome, the capital, the popes have refused to accept the basis of temporal sovereignty guaranteed them by Italy.

This temporal kingdom as recognized by Italy is confined to what is known as the Leonine City, or the little circle of territory embracing the Vatican Palaces, Gardens and Grounds, and various buildings connected with the latter, together with the papal summer residence of Castelgondolfo in the Alban hills some 10 miles from Rome.

Prisoners of Vatican.

The popes, however, refusing to accept this spoliation of their former papal states, and above all refusing to accept the Italian law of guarantees, whereby Italy undertook to guarantee temporal, sovereignity within the territory above described, have made themselves self-constituted prisoners within the Vatican, and no pope has ever set foot outside the limits of the Vatican building and grounds since 1870.

All efforts to adjust the situation and to bring about a reconciliation between the Vatican and the Quirinal have been shipwrecked on the question of the Italian law of guarantees.

The Vatican insists that it cannot accept this law of guarantees merely upon Italy's word alone, but that it must be backed and guaranteed by other foreign powers.

Italy Disagrees.

Italy in reply declares that the question not only is a purely domestic one but that the calling in of foreign powers to underwrite her law of guarantees would not only be an infringement on Italian soverignity but an unacceptable insult to Italy's national honor and signity.

In the latest negotiations, however, that have been connected more or less directly between the Mussolini government and the Vatican, it is declared that a formula has now been found that will be acceptable to both Italy and the Vatican.

This formula is the Holy See's admission to the League of Nations. The guarantees, existing in the covenant, and which pledges every League member to respect, guarantee and even defend the present territorial status of the other Leaguers, would it is declared entirely satisfy the Vatican's claims that the Italian law of guarantees must be backed by the guarantee of other nations.

No Grounds For Slight.

As, however, this general guarantee embodied in the covenant would have no specific reference to Italy, but would be merely the general pledge and guarantee which every Leaguer has taken and made, Italy would have no grounds whatsoever for feeling her national dignity and honor were being slighted.

The recognition thus of the temporal sovereignty of the pope by all the leading nations of the world, would render possible a final adjustment with Italy that would put an end to the present situation of the "papal prisoner in the Vatican."

The only question on which uncertainty still remains is whether or not the Holy See comes within the qualifications set down in the covenant for admission to the League. This it is conceded is largely a matter of interpretation and a point on which the League assembly would have to pass.

However, as the Covenant merely stipulates that "any self-governing State, Dominion or Colony not named in the annex, may become a member of the League if its admission is agreed to by two-thirds of the Assembly," and as the Catholic countries of the world, embracing the numerous Latin-American block have at their command enough votes to assure this two-thirds majority, no doubt is felt that at whatever time the Holy see's application may be presented it will meet with general acceptance.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Large Crowd Turned Out To Hear Band Concert—Personal Mention.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 17.—The people of Campbellford paid last night a long outstanding debt of gratitude to the members of the Regimental Band for the many free entertainments which the latter have furnished during the past summer, and for the fame that they have brought to the town every time they visited an outside point in their professional capacity. The corn roast that was held in the Curling Rink, under the auspices of the Band, drew a crowd equal to that which has ever thronged the rink at a province-wide bonspiel. The best of it, from the bandsmen's standpoint, was that they were permitted to pay for nothing so that the door receipts were all velvet. The Curling Club gave the use of their building free of charge, and all the provisions were donated. There was corn by the basketful, that was cooked in portable ovens in full view of the crowd, and other dainties in proportion. Any person among the guests who is addicted to the apple-pie habit, and who left the rink last night with his appetite unsatiated, had only himself to blame. Two long tables, set in the middle of the building, accommodated one-third of the crowd at one sitting, and the service by the young ladies who volunteered was perfect.

The crowd was large and gifted with healthy appetite, but still there was an abundance left over. Archie J. Wood mounted a table and auctioned off the surplus, finding a ready sale for everything, and the proceeds were turned over to swell the receipts from the sale of tickets.

The Band accepts the generous patronage and the liberal donations as a mark of appreciation of their effort in the past to provide the public with first-class musical entertainments.

Lucky Fishermen.

Vincent Farrell and Russell Melville, while fishing at Crow Bay, landed two lunges, one of which weighed 14½ lbs. and the other 10½ lbs. As it was a partnership affair, the public is left in doubt as to which angler landed the heavier fish.

Judging at the Fairs.

John Locke, president of the Seymour Agricultural Society, left yesterday for Orangeville where he will act at the Fair there as judge of dairy cattle, sheep and swine. From Orangeville he will go to Mount Forest, Collingwood and Barrie Fairs.

Alex. Hume acted as judge at the Ottawa Fair last week, so that it is evident that the stock breeders of this district have reputations that reach the limits of the Province.

Miss Jennie Johnston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Johnston, Ranney Street, nurse-in-training at Niagara Falls, N.Y., is very ill. Her father went to Niagara on Monday, and word was received here on Tuesday that, though still conscious, she is sinking rapidly.

Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Diamond, Front Street, received word on Monday that their cousin, Mrs. Hubert Bullock, of Brighton, had an operation for appendicitis last Tuesday and that she is slowly improving.

Mr. Herbert Leonard, Front Street, has purchased from Mrs. Florence Shannon the block on Front Street which he had leased for several years.

Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Diamond, Front Street, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Herrington at Hilton.

Mr. George Dunn, Front Street, who has been ill for some weeks, is not improving very much.

Mr. Charles Bedford, who has been ill for several days, is getting better, and was able to go out for a short time on Tuesday.

Mrs. (Rev.) D. Dixon and daughter, Helen, of Norwood, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Phillips, Garry Street.

Mrs. Roy Bell and two children, C. M. and Graydon, Balaclava Street, have been visiting Mr. Bell's sister, Mrs. Wm. Bush, at Frankford. Mr. Bell motored down to Frankford on Sunday, and Mrs. Bell and children returned with him.

Miss Frances Le Pape, who has been in Campbellford for the past two weeks in the interests of the Upper Canada Tract Society, left for her home in Montreal on Wednesday to visit her parents for a short time.

McAvella—Outingdyke.

St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, Campbellford, was the scene of a very pretty but quiet wedding on Monday morning, Sept. 15, 1924, when Clara Isabelle, daughter of Mr. Adam Outingdyke and the late Mrs. Outingdyke, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Thomas Joseph McAvella, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McAvella, Seymour East. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Phelan of St. Mary's Church. The bride entered the church while the wedding march was being played by Mrs. William Welsh, cousin of the groom, and looked very charming in a navy picture hat, suit of navy tricotine with grey squirrel choker, black suede shoes and gloves to match, and carried a bouquet of white carnations with lady-hair fern. The bridesmaid, Miss Rose McAvella of Peterboro', sister of the groom, looked charming in a dress of grey kitten's ear crepe, black picture hat and suede shoes with gloves to match, and carried a bouquet of pink astors. The groom was ably assisted by his cousin, Mr. James Nelson of Peterborough. After the ceremony a dainty breakfast was served at the home of the groom's parents, after which the happy party left by motor for Peterborough and points west, and on their return Mr. and Mrs. McAvella will be at home to their many friends, Valley View Farm, Seymour East, after September 30th.

NEW CHINESE UNIVERSITY

Returned Boxer Indemnity May Be Devoted To Education.

TSINGTAO, Shantung, China, Sept. 18.—(Associated Press). — There is a movement on foot to secure the returned Boxer indemnity for the establishment of a university in Tsingtao. Suitable buildings for the institution already have been made available by the municipal administration. They are the spacious and substantial Bismarck Barracks, a monument to the solidity and permanence of German construction.

Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, the Americna Minister at Peking, on a recent visit to Tsingtao, expressed the opinion that no better use could be made of the money than that which Tsingtao proposes.

AURANIA'S MAIDEN TRIP.

New Cunarder Will Join Canadian Service Next Year.

The Aurania, newest addition to the Cunard fleet, will commence her maiden voyage on Saturday, when she sails from Southampton and Cherbourg to New York. She is a sister ship of the Andania, Antonia and Ausonia, at present running between Montreal and Channel ports, and with her other sisters, Alaunia and Ascania, will form the fleet of Cunard steamers on the Canadian service next year.

The Aurania, launched in February last, is a one-class cabin steamship of the latest design, and has accommodation for over 500 cabin passengers and 1,200 third-class travellers. The ship is 528 feet long, 50 feet beam, and of 15,000 gross tonnage. The engines are of the new double-reduction geared type, burning oil, and the construction of the vessel embodies the latest developments of comfort and safety that are the fruits of over 84 years' experience enjoyed by the Cunard Line.

The public rooms, writing room, library, lounge, smoking-room and verandah cafe are on "A" deck. The children's playroom, on "B" deck, is equipped with the latest play devices for children.

The staterooms, designed for two, three or four passengers, are unusually large and well lighted, being situated amidships. As there is only one class of cabin passengers carried, all staterooms are in the most desirable part of the ship. They are furnished with careful thought for the passenger comfort and equipped with every modern convenience. Another feature of these rooms is the ventilating system, which is such that it gives the maximum of fresh air.

A black satin dress is made most distinctive by handbags of king blue. Chinese red and Lanvia green.

GOAT ON A JAUNT.

Stall Fixed on Running Board of Car—Didn't Mind the Trip.

GREELEY, Colo., Sept. 18.—(Associated Press).—Motor tourists no longer give up all the comforts of their homes when they travel through the west.

One party of travelers from North Dakota, which passed through Greeley recently, had a milch goat harnessed in what the animal seemed to regard as a comfortable position on the running board of their car. Members of the party explained they were accustomed to goat's milk, and that they saw no reason for doing without it because they were traveling.

The goat was so tied to the car that it could eat leisurely even with the automobile in motion.

The little red hen

"PUCK, puck, puck, pucKAYah," cackles the little red hen, as she steps off the warm nest, broadcasting to the barnyard that she has just laid a fine, fresh egg. She makes a product that any "manufacturer" might be proud of, and doesn't hesitate to advertise the fact.

A duck egg might be just as good, but the duck evidently doesn't think so. She doesn't advertise, and duck eggs have no market.

To be absolutely sure of buying ANY merchandise, stick to the advertised brands. For their manufacturers believe in them and tell you about them daily in the advertising columns of this newspaper, over their signature.

The duck-egg brands might be just as good, but you cannot be sure, if the manufacturers themselves will not admit it!

Read the advertisements regularly. Buy from them. You will then know the source of the products, and whom to look to if they don't measure up.

THREE WARS IN CHINA RAGE AT THE SAME TIME

Civil Strife Establishes New Record In Mammoth Struggles.

FITTEST SURVIVE.

Six Military Leaders Combine For Their Own Ends—Each Seeks Power.

By J. W. T. MASON.

Three different civil wars are now being waged in China, establishing a new world record in political partisanship. China is going through a process of survival of the fittest among her belligerent Tuchens. The one who comes forth at the end with the most reserve power will be the winner provided the others have been so weakened that they cannot combine against him. It is this long proviso which has made the struggle for Chinese regeneration last so many years.

Now, however, with six military leaders in the field, there is a possibility that one of them will emerge from the scrimmage on top of the others. The leaders have tenatively combined three against three; but the combinations are only temporary. Each man is for himself and will break from his combination when he thinks the time has come for him to triumph.

Three Conflicts.

The three domestic conflicts now operating are in the southern, northern and central provinces. In the south, Sun Yat Sen, Provisional President of the South China Republic, is in revolt against all provincial governors who challenge his authority. In the north, Chang Tso Lin, governor of Manchuria, has declared war against Tsao Kun, President of China, and Wu Pei Fu, governor of the great province of Chili in which Pekin is situated. In the centre of China, Lu Yun Hsiang, governor of the province of Chekiang, immediately south of Shanghai, is engaged in hostilities against Chi Hsich Yuan, governor of Kiangsu province where Shanghai is situated.

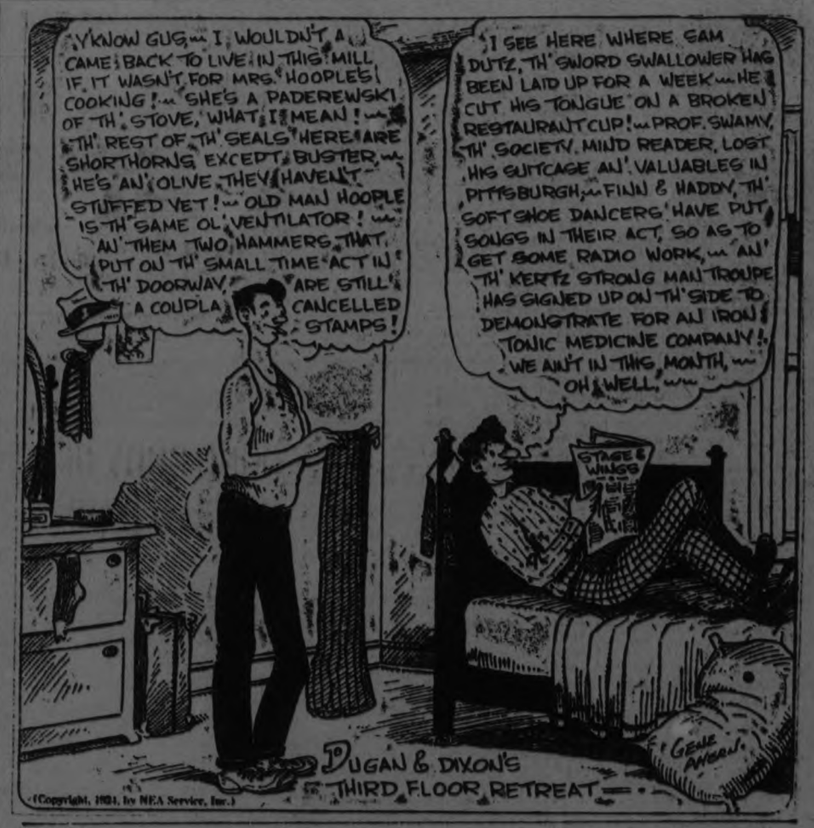
Each Would Be Chief.

Chang, Lu and Sun are trying to co-operate and Tsao, Wu and Chi are endeavoring to come to a mutual agreement. But, each of the six desires his own pre-eminence to be recognized and insists on the others being subordinate to him. The only one of the six who has the courage to declare publicly this fact is Chang Tso Lin. He asserts his purpose is to make every Tuchen bow to him and he will not be content until they do. He has the best army in China; but also he has the largest combination of enemies against him, because he is the strongest governor of the present time in his country.

Whether Chang Tso Lin succeeds in dominating the situation and reorganizing China or not, his way will be the way of the leader who eventually does so. China cannot engage in permanent reconstruction of her shattered political life unless the local conflicts among the provincial governors are brought to an end. It has been conclusively demonstrated that the authorities in Pekin will never be able to suppress the Tuchens, while the presidency of China is held by a figurehead, himself representing only one of the Tuchens and possessing no national army. The presidency will have to pass to a Tuchen who only is stronger than any of his rivals, but also who has a sufficient military force of his own to suppress any possible combination against him.

Must Force Peace.

Under the rule of such a chieftain, compulsory peace will be forced on China; and China will have no peace unless it is compulsory. Once peace endures without fear of interruption by an ambitious Tuchen, the Chinese will be able to begin reorganizing their government and ought to succeed in moving far along the road to progress. But, the prime requisite is a strong man who will be able to hold back the disturbers of traffic. His strength, however, must come in part from the permanent weakening of the others through exhausting strain of conflicts with one another. But, exhaustion through warfare in China, is a slow process. Sung, the Chinese military authority of the third century, a.d., declared that when an enemy is surrounded, he must be left one way of escape because cornered men fight desperately. This is still the Chinese rule and explains why exhaustion is so long coming to the recalcitrant Tuchens.



NEWS OF MADOC.

Harvest Thanksgiving Services Were Well Attended.

MADOC, Sept. 17.—The harvest thanksgiving services were held in St. John the Baptist's Church on Sunday last, and were well attended, both morning and evening.

The church was beautifully decorated with grain, vegetables, fruit and flowers, with harmonizing colors, showing the abundance of field and garden crops.

The choir rendered special music, accompanied by Miss Hart at the organ, and Mr. James Aylsworth with the cornet. In the morning the anthem was "Make a Joyful Noise," and in the evening a very fine setting of the chant, Deus Misereatur, Psalm 67, was sung and an anthem, "Now The Day Is Over."

Rev. Mr. Patterson, of Woodbridge, a brother of Mrs. Strother, conducted the services, assisted by Rev. Mr. Redding of Bannockburn, in the evening.

In the morning Mr. Patterson preached from Psalm 36, verses 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. This Psalm shows the Hebrew's appreciation of material things; but his sense of material things was always linked up with a sense of religious things. He always recognized God as the direct source. The source was never accorded to secondary causes, as we do, who have acquired scientific meanings. The Hebrew saw symbols of God in the things about him.

The speaker then referred to Canada and the cause Canadian people have for praise. A few weeks ago an estimate of the harvest yield was given in the papers, but now it is known that the actual results are much greater than the first estimate, approximately 291,000,000 bushels. This is not as great as last year, but is so good that it has been exceeded in only three years. This year the smaller yield is equalized by the better price.

Besides the great grain crops, other crops are yielding an abundance. The West is diversifying its farming. Mr. Patterson then spoke of the other resources of this wonderful country, of the mining, lumbering and fishing industries. Canada is, as the Psalmist says, "a beautiful house."

It is fitting then that we give thanks for all these benefits. But what is the basis of gratitude? Many citizens live as though contentment came in an abundance of riches and accumulation of goods, but contentment in these things comes only as we recognize them as God's gifts. This is God's country, preserved for us from the glacial age. Everything we see is a symbol of God's mercy to us. The clouds are God's ministers of blessing, pouring down the refreshing rains; the mountains, symbols of God's immutable righteousness; the oceans, those mysterious deeps, the symbols of God's judgments.n

It is God's wish that we live at peace under our own vine. We must lift up our eyes and see beyond material satisfaction. He has poured out into our laps the cornucopia of abundance, but we must look beyond and see in Him the true Bread of Heaven. Sometimes we cannot understand the mysterious movements of God, and we feel that His hand is heavy upon us, but we must look beyond the cloud and trust our God, knowing that He is a loving God, though his judgments are hard to comprehend. We must remember that the sun still shines beyond the clouds. "How excellent is thy mercy, O God. They shall be satisfied with the plenteousness of thy house, and thou shalt give them drink of thy pleasures as out of the river." That river, beside which stands the tree of life, which is for us: "For with thee is the well of life: and in thy light shall we see light."

INVADING THE STAGE.

Society Debs Beginning To Clutter Up the Footlights.

BY HORTENSE SAUNDERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Society debs and matrons are invading the stage in such numbers that they may be responsible for driving actresses into business.

Many names that used to blaze out in electric lights and contribute to the glitter of the Gay White Way now appear on shop doors and windows in the business sections of New York.

Fair ones who used to look so alluring back of the footlights are getting behind the counters and will sell you hats, gowns or furniture, decorate your home, remove your wrinkles or serve you tea.

Anna Held, daughter of the famous French actress, is one of the latest recruits in business. Once seen in vaudeville and in comic opera, she now has a beauty parlor where she sells lingerie, trinkets and cosmetics made from the formula of her famous mother.

Her shop is directly across the street from where the diminutive Mabel Taliferro sells antiques and early American furniture. These two celebrities are great friends and borrow back and forth like two neighbors on Main street.

Kitty Gordon, whose faultless back brought her fame, now operates a very elegant and exclusive beauty shop in the fashionable Madison avenue section of New York. Her daughter, who appeared on the stage in pictures with her mother is the first assistant.

Flora Zabelle, musical comedy star, is no less successful as style expert for a large wholesale dress concern than she was as a musical comedy star. And Fannie Brice, without giving up the stage, once conducted a successful dress shop.

"Going into business does not at all mean that an actress renounces the stage," said Anna Held, Jr., "because once an actress, you can never tell when you will break out again with the fever for applause. It makes you free to take such parts as you like instead of faking what you can get.

"Having a business doesn't detract from your ability as a performer and it gives you experience and a practical view of life that many actresses never acquire.

"After all it's doing something and putting it over that counts, whether you do it on the stage or in the shop."

JUDGE GRANTS POLICE PROBE

Mr. Justice Coderre Accedes To Petition From Citizens of Montreal.

BEGINS FRIDAY.

MONTREAL, Sept. 18.—(Canadian Press).—With powers similar to these of a royal commission, Mr. Justice Goderre will take the opening steps Friday in what is expected to prove the most startling and searching inquiry into police affairs this city has yet known.

The judge in granting the inquiry at the request of a large number of citizens promised to hold an investigation of the most sweeping character, declaring that he would inquire into all matters mentoned in a citizens' petition filed with him.

Mr. Justice Coderre is preceeding under an article in the revised Statutes of Quebec, which grant a judge the right to hold such an inquiry, summon witnesses and punish any who refuse to attend. He has no power to initiate any prosecutions on the strength of any evidence that may be submitted. Such action can only be taken by parties outside the court.

Yesterday's remand for a judicial inquiry followed a recent unsuccessful attempt to secure the appointment of a royal commission through the city council, which decided that an aldermanic investigation met the case.

Charges to be inquired into concern alleged protection of a house of ill-fame, and many rumors which have been flying around since the hold-up of the Bank of Hochelaga collection car when $146,000 was stolen and a chauffeur killed.

CANTOR CUTS IN

Later he asked the band to play "You'd Be Surprised."

The Prince danced almost every dance. His collar was badly wilted and his shoes were covered with a fine dust from talcum powder which had been sprinkled on the floor to make it smoother. But the indefatigable young heir to the British Throne did not bother about trifles like that.

The Cantor party, after having been lost in the mazes of Long Island for two hours, arrived at the Wanamaker home about two in the morning. The Prince had disappeared. Someone went to look for him. And a few minutes later he walked in from the porch with Mrs. Cruger and was presented to the comedian.

The Comedian's Greeting.

Cantor's greeting to his was: "Well, well, well! Little Davy Windsor, as I live."

The Prince held out his hand, smiled his very boyish smile, and answered:

"How are you? We've been waiting for you for some time."

The Prince danced with almost every guest at the party. He seemed to take great enjoyment in "cutting in."

Several times he went to the front porch by himself, sat in a huge wicker armchair and smoked a cigarette from a long, ivory inlaid holder, drumming his fingers nervously on the arm of the chair in time with the music.

RAILWAY RATES

the shipper did not get the lower rate.

Mr. Pitblade exhibited three lengths of iron pipes to illustrate how strict the railways were enforcing the letter of the agreement. The first was straight iron pipe, to which the railways granted the Crow's Nest rate. The second was galvanized iron pipe and at first the railways had refused the low rate to this but had finally granted it. The third was also iron pipe, but because it had a little creosoting on the inside it was refused the Crow's Nest rate, Mr. Pitblade said. Under the agreement iron pipes were given the reduced rate, and Mr. Pitblade contended that the railways had no right to exclude certain classes of iron piping from its benefits.

At the morning session W. T. Henderson, City Solicitor of Brantford, read a statement charging unjust discrimination against his city as compared with such places as London, Hamilton and St. Thomas. The same traffic was carried from Brantford to the west as moved from the other cities westward. Fruit growers shipping west from Brantford were in competition with those shipping from Hamilton, London and St. Thomas, but the Brantford shipper was handicapped by a higher freight rate. On the shipment of agricultural implements to the west Brantford paid 82 1-2 cents a hundred pounds and Hamilton paid 67 1-2 cents.

MOSCOW GETS AUTO.

Horse-Drawn Vehicles on the Streets Will Be Replaced.

MOSCOW, Sept. 18.—(Associated Press).—Moscow, which from time immemorial has depended upon the horse-drawn carriage and the conventional trolley car for its transportation, will soon have its own motor buses. Eight omnibuses of the London type will make their appearance shortly, and it is the intention of the municipal authorities eventually to secure sufficient additional vehicles to establish connection with suburban districts. This will do much, the officials say, to relieve the fearful congestion on trolley cars and trains, and will also encourage part of the population to move to the suburbs.

A WOMAN ENTERS BUTCHER'S FIELD

Mrs. Francis Kerr Slings a Wicked Knife— Advice With Meat.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 18.—The hand that rocks the cradle may find secondary occupation with a butcherman's cleaver.

Mrs. Frances Kerr of this city has entered the field of meat dispensing, hitherto considered peculiarly masculine, with the result that her shop is the last word in neighborhood popularity.

"Why? Because I have added the feminine touch," declares Mrs. Kerr.

"At first I thought any but the butcher's would be a field for womenkind. But do you know, women are most badly needed there.

"Men just slice and wrap according to direction. But I, who have a home and three children to feed, understand the problems of the housewife who comes to purchase. Consequently I add advice in the scales —and I find they like it."

They do. Imagine the frantic wife who unexpectedly finds she must be hostesses to last-minute guests. Her pertubation may well subside as she reaches the phone, for Mrs. Kerr, used to prescribing for such gastronomic flurries, solves her difficulties in a moment.

Advice With Meat

Then there's hubby, instructed in general manner by wifey to "bring something home" on his way from the office.

"Well, let's see," Mrs. Kerr will tell you as he considers his purchase. "Last night you had veal and the night before, chicken. I would suggest a roast of beef tonight."

Or to the bride, neophyte in culinary arts: "Here's a little steak, an excellent dish for two. Cook it slowly with salt. Its own juices will keep it from sticking to the pan or burning. No grease is necessary. Cook about 15 minutes on each side. And what do you intend to do with this little end?"

"Waste it, I guess," replies the bride. "It's too tough to eat."

"Well, I'll grind it up for you," Mrs. Kerr answers, "and it'll be just the thing for your lunch tomorrow."

"It is instinctive in women to like economy," Mrs. Kerr explains. "Too often, shopkeepers, unheeding of the trait, urge women to purchase beyond their means or beyond their budgets.

"I work on the opposite theory, partly, I suppose, because I am a New Zealander with consequent hatred of waste, partly because I am a woman with the instinctive trait, and partly because I know the problems of the housewife, being one myself.

Reduces Budgets.

"If I can suggest a cheaper cut which will yet be as satisfactory as the one requested, I do so.

"I always mention what may be done with left-overs from the cuts.

"Without telling my plan, I've tried to keep track of every woman's expenditures in the shop—and to reduce them. Imagine the delight of the woman when they find they're running under their budgets, or under their former monthly expenses for meat."

Best proof of the response is in the fact that women moving from the neighborhood do not change butchers. They are willing to go farther for service and economy.

In addition to her shop work, Mrs. Kerr manages her own home, makes all clothes for her three daughters, hears their lessons, and otherwise sees to their upbringing. During her absences the eldest of the daughters cares for the other two children.

GARDEN TASTE SHOWS CHANGE IN 20 YEARS

Fall Bulb Catalogues Reflect Desire For Different Designs and Colors.

An interesting view of the changing taste in gardening during the last twenty years can be obtained from considering the fall bulb catalogues of that period.

In 1901 the place of honor was given to hyacinths, single and double tulips and narcissi, the later chiefly for forcing. The gay Parrot tulips, now little grown, were listed in named varieties and the striped Bizarres and Bybloems were given more prominence that the Darwins, which at that time had been known but ten years and were offered only in mixtures in this country.

Gardening fashion of that day called for formal bedding. The perennial border was in its infancy. The early single and double tulips and the hyacinths, short stemmed and precise, were the ideal material for the geometrical and circular beds, where they were used to work out ingenious designs.

Taste Much Changed by 1912

By 1912 taste had so far changed that Darwin and cottage tulips were offered in named varieties, and illustrated in colors, though still the hyacinths and early tulips retained first place. Even then Breeder tulips were not listed in American catalogues.

The perennial border had begun to displace formal beds in gardening interest and the design of the planting became secondary to the beauty of the flowers. The tall, graceful May flowering tulips were so far superior in beauty of form and coloring to the early varieties that they seemed a new race of flowers to those not familiar with them.

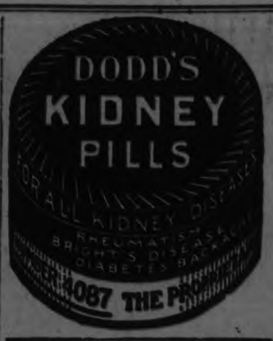
The late tulips, in fact, are older than the early varieties. The striped tulips, cottage tulips, and breeder tulips go back into the middle ages.

During the reign or carpet bedding they were in decline, because they did not fit well in formal beds, and so when gardening taste changed these, the oldest classes of tulips, came to gardeners in this country, as a new race.

Breeder is Oldest Type.

The development of interest in color in the garden, which is not many years old, is responsible for the present vogue of breeder tulips, the oldest type, perhaps. These are all if dull, but rich coloring, never clear, but always a blend of several shades; always containing some brown.

The Darwin tulips were introduced in 1889 by a Holland firm which kept the origin secret; but they are believed to be a selection from the breeder class which they resemble in shape of blossom. The Darwins have no yellows, and usually the color has an overtone of white, giving a pastel effect. Cottage tulips have the clearest, brightest colors of the May-flowering classes, blossom later, and do not grow so large or so tall.



GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia to Overcome Trouble, Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid" indigestion.

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis, accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

WARLIKE PACIFISTS MEET.

Police Called To Enforce Peace at Bellicose Anti-War Meeting.

GRIEFSWALD, Germany, Sept. 18.—(Associated Press).—A recent pacifist meeting here developed into the noisiest and roughest event ever held in this town. It was an anti-war meeting, and the chief speaker was Henri Barbusse, one of the best known pacifists of France. Barbusse started to speak in French, to which students of the university of this city objected so violently that a general riot followed. Many heads were cracked during the affray, and Barbusse had to be rescued by the police and guarded until he left town.

SMITH SCHOOLS UNITE IN FAIR AT BRIDGENORTH

Fine Showing of Farm Produce Grown By Children —Well Attended.

LIST OF WINNERS.

Only Two In Public Speaking Contest—Interest Created In Agriculture.

Probably no work is being carried on by the Department of Agriculture's district representatives that will prove of greater benefit to the future of the province than the rural school fairs.

Through the public schools each spring the government distributes the best seed obtainable and eggs from the O. A. C. high producing pens to the children of the schools. They in turn plant and care for their roots, grains, vegetables and flowers; hatch and raise their chickens and then exhibit their product at the school fairs, where competent judges place the awards and instruct the youthful agriculturists in the finer points.

As a climax to a successful season the annual fair of the Smith Township Rural School Fair Association at Bridgenorth yesterday furnished a notable examole of the accomplishments of the Department in this regard.

Resembling the appearance of the main building at a small fall fair, in the pavilion on long tables the exhibits were displayed. There were grain, corn, roots and vegetables that would bear credit to an experienced exhibitor and would stand competition in any company

The flowers were outstanding—beautiful bouquets of asters, phlox, cosmos, marigolds, and salpiglossis amongst others.

Representing the artistic nature of the children were the drawing and writing contests. There were also nature collections, native woods, weeds, insects, plant diseases and the weed naming contest.

The weed naming contest, won by Laura Sanderson, was a feature and provided an excellent example of the beneficial results of teaching the rudiments of agriculture in rural schools.

Teach Agriculture.

Without the co-operation of the school teachers, said F. C. McRae, B.S.A., Government Agricultural representative of Norwood, it would be impossible to carry on with this work. It depends practically altogether upon the teachers.

According to the present curriculum it is not compulsory that agriculture be taught in rural schools. It is optional with the teachers and the trustees of each section. Fortunately, however, this discretion is exercised to advantage and a number of schools in Smith Township are teaching the rudiments of agriculture to the pupils.

The girl who came first in the weed naming contest bore testimony to the learning obtained in this way, remarked Mr. R. F. Downie, Public School Inspector, who was in attendance yesterday. Mr. F. C. McRae couldn't puzzle her. Mr. Downie stated that just recently he watched the same girl naming without error a number of weeds while he was paying a visit to her school, S.S. No. 3.

Those school sections represented in yesterday's fair were numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 11, Smith Township. There are seven fairs held in the county and the other part of the township participates in the Young's Point Fair, being held today.

Live Stock.

The poultry classes consisted entirely of bred-to-lay Barred Rocks, and there was a big entry. The exhibits excluded all but this year's stock hatched from eggs supplied from O. A. C. pens. The entry was large and the chicks were rounding nicely into shape and fairly well advanced for this time of year. The egg classes were also well filled.

As a modest approach to a wild west exhibition, prizes were presented for the best haltered broken colt and the best halter broken calf, while another feature number was the driving competition.

Cooking and Sewing.

In this branch of the fair the maidens had an opportunity to excel themselves in a department from which the boys by tradition and according to the natural run of domestic procedure are excluded.

Practical experience had taught the girls to make dainty lunches and naturally in the competition for the best box, containing a lunch, composed of homemade baking with the exception of bread, there were many appetizing snacks. Cookies, bran muffins and exhibits of canning were on display. The showing was creditable and indicated that the rural girls are ahead of their urban sisters along this line.

A simple display of sewing afforded the girls another chance to exhibit their talent on another practical accomplishment.

In the manual training contests the boys were given an opportunity to show their ability in a department they too are singularly skilful.

Among other things the sheaves of oats and field corn were outstanding, and gave the building the air of a regular fall exhibition.

Oratorical Contest.

Possibly the children were too young to participate in public speaking competitions, as there were but two in this class. It is quite a task for a public school child to brave a platform in front of a large gathering as these two did, but they afforded an appreciation of the real value of contests of this kind

Phyllis Moore, the little girl who captured first prize, delivered a treatise on citizenship with the ease and composure of a politician. Robert Lackey, the other entrant, gave a talk on school gardens. He was quite nervous at first but stuck to his guns to the finish. It was his initial appearance before the public and he weathered the storm. Yesterday was a wonderful experience for him and with the same determination in future appearances he will make a real orator, for it is determination that gradually inspires confidence in public speaking.

Such a demonstration as yesterday permits an outlet for the enthusiasm of those who are talented in the art of agriculture.

The Department of Education have not included agriculture in the curriculum of rural schools. Everything tends to training for high schools. Other than the optional discretion exercised by some teachers there is nothing to develop the child talented for a farming vocation.

The Department of Agriculture is giving the best it has to offer, said F. C. McRae, who is supervising the school fairs in this county. The school fair gives the children an insight into the scientific side of agriculture. The seeds distributed by the Department to the children will help to establish a Smith Schools—C Gal 2 Zeihr Noon better class of grain in the country and to impress the children with the advantages of sowing only the best grades. The distribution of eggs from high production pens will give the children an appreciation of the difference between the average farm flock and bred-to-lay strains. It will also increase the production of the ordinary flock when O. A. C. blood lines are introduced.

In general, the rural school fairs are providing a valuable education to supplant a gap in the regular educational curriculum. They provide a foundation for those who will follow agriculture as a vocation, and it seems unfortunate that the basic industry should be excluded from the prescribed course of study in the rural schools, attended by the future captains of Canada's most important industry.

Well Attended.

The Bridgenorth Fair was well attended by children and a great many adults, but in the opinion of R. F. Downie the parents do not take the interest in the fairs that they merit. The compensation for the efforts of the children are great, but to be productive of all the good they are capable the parents must co-operate.

Aside from the supervision of F. C. McRae, B.S.A., Norwood, the efforts of the members of the Board of Directors of the Smith Township Rural Fair Association also largely attributed to the success of the fair and in creating an interest among the children throughout the year. The members of the board are Gus Fairburn, Bert Mills, Wm. Milburn, Cora Grant, Robert Irwin and Erma Deck.

The judges were R. H. Graham, Lakefield (poultry); C. Frey, Sarnia (collections, manual training, nature, writing and drawing); Percy Gardiner, Norwood (roots and vegetables); Mrs. F. C. McRae, Norwood (flowers, cooking and sewing), and the balance of the exhibits and contests by F. C. McRae, B.S.A.

Even a Professor Enjoys the Old Swimmin' Hole

IN this case, it is not the "old swimming hole," but the palatial pool at the Canadian Pacific Railway's Banff Springs Hotel, at Banff, Alta., in the Rockies. The group includes Prof. D'Arcy Thompson (with beard), St. Andrews, Profs. Daly and Dakin, of Liverpool, Principal Irvine, St. Andrews, and Dr. Corkill, Edinburgh, all members of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, and they are cooling off after a strenuous morning in the course of their recent Western tour. Wonder what their pupils would say if they saw them under such undignified circumstances? But even professors are human.

Asad moved on in silence. That erstwhile habit of Sakr-el-Bahr's was one not easy to condone. It had occasioned him his moments of uneasiness, and more than once had he taxed his lieutenant with the practice ever to receive the same answer which he now made to Fenzileh.

"For every slave that he so manumitted, he brought a dozen into bondage."

"Perforce, else would he be called to account. 'Twas so much dust he flung into the face of true Moslems. Those manumissions prove a lingering fondness for the infidel country whence he springs. Is there room for that in the heart of a true member of the Prophet's immortal House? Hast ever known me languish for the Sicilian shore from which in thy might thou wrested me, or have I ever besought of thee the life of a single Sicilian infidel in all these years that I have lived to serve thee? Such longings are betrayed, I say, by such a practice, and such longings could have no place in one who had uprooted infidelity from his heart.

"And now this voyage of his beyond the seas—risking a vessel that he captured from the arch-enemy of Islam,which is not his to risk but thine, in whose name he captured it; and together with it he imperils the lives of two hundred True-Believers. To what end? To bear him overseas, perchance, that he may look again upon the unhallowed land that gave him birth. So Biskaine reported. And what if he should founder on the way?"

"Thou at least wouldst be content, thou fount of malice," growled Asad.

"Call me harsh names, O sun that warms me! Am I not thine to use and abuse at thy sweet pleasure? Pour salt upon the heart thou woundest; since it is thy hand I'll never murmur a complaint! But heed me—heed my words; or since words are of no account with thee, then heed his deeds which I am drawing to thy tardy notice. Heed them, I say, as my love bids me, even though thou shouldst give me to be whipped or slain for my temerity."

"Woman, thy tongue is like the clapper of a bell with the devil swinging from the rope. What else dost thou impute?"

"Naught else, since thou dost but mock me, withdrawing thy love from thy fond slave."

"The praise to Allah, then," said he. "Come, it is the hour of prayer!"

But he raised Allah too soon. Womanlike, though she protested she had done, she had scarce begun as yet.

"There is thy son, O father of Marzak."

"There is, O mother of Marzak," said he.

"And a man's son should be the partner of his soul Yet is Marzak passed over for this foreign upstart; yet does this Nasrani of yesterday hold the place in thy heart and at thy side that should be Marzak's."

"Could Marzak fill that place?" he asked. "Could that beardless boy lead men as Sakr-el-Bahr leads them, or wield the scimitar against the foes of Islam and increase as Sakr-el-Bahr increases the glory of the Prophet's Holy law upon the earth?"

"If Sakr-el-Bahr does this, he does it by thy favor, O my lord. And so might Marzak, young though he is. Sakr-el-Bahr is but what thou hast made him—no more, no less."

"There art thou wrong, indeed, O mother of error. Sakr-el-Bahr is what Allah hath made him. He is what Allah wills. He shall become what Allah wills. Hast yet to learn that Allah has bound the fate of each man about his neck?"

And then a golden glory suffused the deep sapphire of the sky heralding the setting of the sun and made an end of that altercation conducted by her with a daring as singular as the patience that had endured it. He quickened his steps in the direction of the courtyard. That golden glow paled as swiftly as it had spread, and night fell as suddenly as if a curtain had been dropped.

In the purple gloom that followed the white cloisters of the courtyard glowed with a faintly luminous pearliness. Dark forms of slaves stirred as Asad entered from the garden, followed by Fenzileh, her head now veiled in a thin blue silken gauze. She flashed across the quadrangle and vanished through one of the archways, even as the distant voice of a Mueddin broke plaintively upon the brooding still reciting the Shehad:

"La illaha, illa Allah! Wa Muhammad er Rasool Allah!"

A slave spread a carpet, a second held a great silver bowl into which a third poured water. The Basha, having washed, turned his face toward Mecca, and testified to the unity of Allah, the Compassionate, the Merciful, King of the Day of Judgment, whilst the cry of the Mueddin went echoing over the city from minaret to minaret.

As he rose from his devotions, there came a quick sound of steps without, and a shapr summons. Turkish janissaries of the Basha's guard, invisible almost in their flowing black garments, moved to answer that summons and challenge those who came.

From the dark vaulted entrance of the courtyard leaped a gleam of lanterns containing tiny clay lamps in which burned a wick that was nourished by mutton fat. Asad, waiting to learn who came, halted at the foot of the white glistening steps of the palace flooded light to suffuse the suffuse the courtyard and set the marbles shimmering.

A dozen Nubian javelin-men advanced, then ranged themselves aside whilst into the light stepped the imposing gorgeously robed figure of Asad's Wazeer, Tsamanni. After him came another figure in mail that clanked faintly and glimmered as he moved.

"Peace and the Prophet's blessings upon thee, O mighty Asad!" was the wazeer's greeting.

"And peace upon thee, Tsamanni," was the answer. "Art the bearer of news?"

"Of great and glorious tidings, O exalted one! Sakr-el-Bahr is returned."

"The praise to Him!" exclaimed the Basha with uplifted hands; and there was no mistaking the thrill of his voice.

There fell a soft step behind him and a shadow from the doorway. He turned. A graceful stripling, in turban and caftan of cloth of gold, salaamed to him from the topmost step. And as he came upright and the light of the lanterns fell full upon his face, the astonishingly white fairness of it was revealed—a woman's face it might have been, so softly rounded was it in its beardlessness.

Asad smiled wryly in his white beard, guessing that the boy had been sent by his ever-watchful mother to learn who came and what the tidings that they bore.

"Thou has heard, Marzak?" he said. "Sakr-el-Bahr is returned."

"Victoriously, I hope," the lad lied glibly.

"Victorious beyond aught that was ever known," replied Tsamanni. "He sailed at sunset into the harbor his company aboard two mighty Frankish ships, which are but the lesser part of the great spoils he brings."

"Allah is great," was the Basha's glad welcome of this answer to those insidious promptings of his Sicilian wife. "Why does he not come in person with his news?"

"His duty keeps him yet awhile aboard, my lord," replied the wazeer. "But he hath sent his kayia Othmani here to tell the tale of it."

"Thrice welcome be thou, Othmani."

He beat his hands together, whereat slaves placed cushions for him upon the ground. He sat, and beckoned Marzak to his side.

"And, now, thy tale."

And Othmani standing forth related how they had voyaged to distant England in the ship that Sakr-el-Bahr had captured, through seas that no corsair yet had ever crossed, and how on their return they had engaged a Dutchman that was their superior in strength and numbers; how none the less Sakr-el-Bahr had wrested victory by the help of Allah, his protector; how he had been dealt a wound that must have slain any but one miraculously preserved for the greater glory of Islam; and of the surpassing wealth of the booty which, at dawn to-morrow, should be laid at Asad's feet for his division of it.

CHAPTER XIV

THE CONVERT

That tale of Othmani's being borne anon to Fenzileh by her son was gall and wormwood to her jealous soul. Evil enough to know that Sakr-el-Bahr was returned in spite of the fervent prayers for his foundering which she had addressed both to the God of her forefathers and to the God of her adoption. But that he should have returned in triumph, bringing with him heavy spoils that must exalt him further in the affection of Asad and the esteem of the people was bitterness indeed. It left her mute and stricken, bereft even of the power to curse him.

Anon, when her mind recovered from the shock she turned it to the consideration of what at first seemed a trivial detail in Othmani's tale as reported by Marzak.

"It was most singularly odd that he should have undertaken that long voyage to England to wrest thence just those two captives; that being there he should not have raided in true corsair fashion and packed his ship with slaves. Most singularly odd!"

They were alone behind the green lattices through which filtered the perfumes of the garden and the throbbing of a nightingale's voice laden with the tale of its love for the rose. Fenzileh reclined upon a divan that was spread with silken Turkey carpets, and one of her gold-embroidered slippers had dropped from her henna-stained toes. Her lovely arms were raised to support her head, and she stared up at the lamp of many colors that hung from the fretted ceiling.

Marzak paced the length of the chamber back and forth, and there was silence save for the soft swish of his slippers along the floor.

"Well?" she asked him impatiently at last. "Dost it not seem odd to thee?"

"Odd, indeed, O my mother," the youth replied, coming to a halt before her.

"And canst think of naught that was the cause of it?"

"The cause of it?" q oth he, his lovely young face, so closely modelled upon her own, looking blank and vacant.

"Aye, the cause o' it," she cried impatiently. "Canst do naught but stare? Am I the mother of a fool? Wilt thou simper and gape and trifle away the days whilst that dog-descended Frank tramples thee underfoot, using thee but as a stepping-stone to the power that should be thine own? And that be so, Marzak, I would thou hadst strangled in my womb."

He recoiled before the Italian fury of her, was dully resentful even, suspecting that in such words from a woman, were she twenty time his mother, there was something dishonoring to his manhood.

"What can I do?" he cried.

"Dost ask me? Art thou not a man to think and act? I tell thee that that misbegotten son of a Christian and a Jew will trample thee in the dust. He is greedy as the locust, wily as the serpent, and ferocious as the panther. By Allah! I would I had never borne a son. Rather might men point at me the finger of scorn and call me mother of the wind than that I should have brought forth a man who knows not how to be a man."

"Show me the way," he cried. "Set me a task; tell me what is to do and thou shalt not find me lacking, O my mother. Until then spare me these insults, or I come no more to thee."

At this threat that strange woman heaved herself from her soft couch. She ran to him and flung her arms about his neck, set her cheek against his own. Not eighteen years in the Basha's harem had stifled the European mother in her, the passionate Sicilian woman, fierce as a tiger in her maternal love.

"O my child, my lovely boy," she almost sobbed. "It is my fear for thee that makes me harsh. If I am angry it is but my love that speaks, my rage for thee to see another come usurping the place beside thy father that should be thine. Ah! But we will prevail, sweet son of mine. I shall find a way to return that foreign offal to the dungheap whence it sprang. Trust me, O Marzak! Sh! Thy father comes., Away! Leave me alone with him."

She was wise in that, for she knew that, alone, Asad was more easily controlled by her, since the pride was absent which must compel him to turn and rend her did she speak so before others. Marzak vanished behind the screen of fretted sandalwood that masked one doorway even as Asad loomed in the other.

He came forward smiling, his slender brown fingers combing his long beard, his white djellaba trailing behind him along the ground.

"Thou has heard, not a doubt,O Fenzileh," said he. "Art thou answered enough?"

She sank down again upon her cushions and idly considered herself in a steel mirror set in silver.

"Answered?" she echoed lazily, with infinite scorn and a hint of rippling, contemptuous laughter running through the word. "Answered indeed. Sakr-el-Bahr risks the lives of two hundred children of Islam and a ship that, being taken, was become the property of the State upon a voyage to England that had no object but the capturing of two slaves—two slaves, when, had his purpose been sincere, it might have been two hundred."

"Ha! And is that all that thou hast heard?" he asked her, mocking in his turn.

"All that signifies," she replied, still mirroring herself. "I heard, as a matter of lesser import, that on his return meeting fortuitously a Frankish ship that chanced to be richly laden he seized it in thy name."

"Fortuitously, sayest thou?"

What Does "MAZDA" Mean to You?

THE word MAZDA, derived from ancient mythology, was the name of a Persian god whose symbol—a winged circle—denoted the flight of the sun across the sky.

To-day the word MAZDA stands for the latest development and most scientific research work applied to artificial illumination. Electric lamps carrying the trade mark "MAZDA" are the product of a service centred in the research laboratories of the Canadian General Electric Company.

Visiting and local physicians, to the number of about half a hundred, including three ladies, attended the opening session this morning at St. Joseph's Hospital, of the District Medical Meeting of the Ontario Medical Association, for Counsellor District Number Six, comprising the Counties of Victoria, Peterborough, Durham, Northumberland, Prince Edward, Hastings and Haliburton. The first-floor surgical ward, utilized for the occasion, was bright with overhead pennants and the roof garden, where luncheon was served at noon, was decorated effectively with quantities of asters and cosmos.

The morning session, presided over by Dr. H. M. Yelland, was occupied with papers read by three doctors from Toronto, Dr. H. K. Detweiler, Bacteriologist at the Toronto General Hospital, speaking on Asthma—Its Diagfnosis and Treatment, Dr. Jabez Elliott, Internist at St. Michael's Hospital, and vice-president of the American College of Physicians, giving some points in Diagnosis and Value of Rest in the treatment of Pulmonary Tuberculosis, and Dr. Wm. Magner, Pathologist at St. Michael's Hospital, giving a paper, illustrated by lantern slides, on the Physiology and Pathology of the Gall Bladder.

Paper On Asthma.

Speaking on the Diagnosis and Treatment of Asthma, Dr. Detweiler prefaced his remarks with an allusion to the many unsolved difficulties still remaining in the treatment of this disease. He spoke of the three divisions, the primary, or true, bronchial asthma, chronic bronchitis in secondary asthma, and cardiac asthma, confining his discourse to the first two types. Referring to recent investigations which have led to the use of protein sensitization methods, he characterized the asthmatic patients who are sensitive to proteins, whether those of foods, pollens or animal emanations, as belonging to the true group of bronchial asthmatics, while those who are no sensitive to such proteins belong to a mixed group in which the primary factor is an infection of some sort. Protein sensitivity, said Dr. Detweiler, is inherited usually, but exposure to the particular protein must occur before sensitization develops. It has also been noted that cases of true bronchial asthma usually have their inception early in life, without bronchitis, at least in the early stages, and accompanied by a thick, jelly-like sputum.

In testing for protein sensitivity, a number of small abrasions are made with a scalpel on the forearm, sufficient to accommodate the various proteins used. A soda solution is applied and the protein powder rubbed in. About fifty per cent. of the sensitive cases usually show a positive reaction to more than one protein, and often these are of widely differing types, such as that of a patient who will be sensitive to a cereal and also to an animal emanation. Heredity plays no part here, as a parent may be senstive to a vegetable protein, and the child show a sensitivity to animal emanations.

Faith In Charms.

The speaker related the case of a patient, suffering from a terrible attack of asthma, complicated by eczema, who was advised by him that he had a sensitivity to feathers, and was told to get rid of any feathers around his house and also of a flock of chickens which he prized. The man departed to return some time later and describe himself as being cured. Although he had followed the doctor's instructions, he placed no faith in them, and did not attribute his cure to their following out. On the contrary, he gave the credit to a charm, by a quack friend, and to the prayers which he himself had said, to counteract any baleful effects of the said charm.

In speaking of careful focal tests, to be made when negative protein tests were realized, the doctor declared that he considered open infection from pyorrheal pockets as much more important than diseases at the roots of the teeth.

Treatment of asthma should include an abundance of fresh air, without chilling, the avoidance of unnecessary conversation, and absolute cleansing of dust of any sort. If an administration of adrenalin was found to have ill effects, atropine migth be used, also special asthmatic powders. When sensitivity to proteins was discovered, the particular protein should be omitted, if it happened to be a food, and it was often found that automatic de-sensitization would result from such an omission for even the space of a year. Food proteins are more important in the case of child patients than in adults, as sensitivity to foods diminishes much more rapidly than sensitivity to animal or vegetable proteins. In animal emanations which result in such sensitivity in asthmatic patients, horse dander was the hardest to avoid, as perspiration from horses is constantly being dropped on the streets, ground into dust, and inhaled by passers-by. Horsehair is also used to a great extent in mattresses and other furniture fillings. Inoculations of horse dander will often make a complete cure, whereas inoculations for pollen sensitivity must be renewed each year. Relief for asthma caused by infection is often afforded by the removal of infected tonsils, and teeth and the drainage of infected sinuses. A vaccine, created autogenously from the patient's own vaccine, is often a valuable aid. It is important to avoid dust, particularly house dust, smoke or fumes, feather pillows, the diet must be regulated with care, and the consumption of five small meals, instead of three large ones, daily, was recommended, while a free action of the skin, plenty of water, and free intestinal elimination, were all necessities.

Answering several questions at the close of his address, Dr. Detweiler said that the use of calcium salts in asthmatic treatment had proved rather disappointing up to date, that pollen pastes might be substituted for pollen powders, if desired, and that chlorine gas treatment for the disease was not familiar to him.

Pulmonary Tuberculosis.

Dr. Jabes Elliott, giving some points in Diagnosis and the Value of Rest in treatment of Pulmonary Tuberculosis, spoke of the necessity of a careful examination of the sputum, and of the many cases diagnosed as chronic bronchitis which had proven to be of a pulmonary origin after such an examination. He also regarded as requisite careful survey of afternoon and evening rises of temperature, and recognized as very significant the appearance of pulmonary hemorrhage. "When blood is coughed up, it is nearly always caused by pulmonary tuberculosis, and very seldom from a broken vessel in the throat." He spoke rather strongly of the wrong diagnosis and treatment in many instances by physicians, and of the honest diagnosis in two cases cited by him, where patients could not obtain a true opinion on their ailment until they had consulted an osteopath. In bothe instances, the latter, acting conversely to the physician first consulted, made a very careful examiantion and diagnosed the disease truthfully.

The speaker emphasized strongly the need and the value of rest in the treatment of the disease. The improvement in recent years in housing conditions and in hygiene with regard to general living methods had helped greatly in the subsidence of pulmonary tuberculosis. "Could we discover the cases at present infected, keep these from transmitting the infection to others and pasteurize all our milk, we could do away with tuberculosis in a short time."

Results of three surveys made in the past two years in British Columbia, Saskatchewan, and in the town of Dundas, where some eight hundred children from the town and surrounding rural districts were examined, showed in the latter instance alone that forty-one per cent. of those examined were reactors to the tuberculin test, that is, they were harboring tubercles in their system, which did not mean that they were suffering from tuberculosis, but that they were susceptible to the disease.

Value of Complete Rest.

A complete and absolute system of rest, to be followed out until every system of the disease had disappeared, was the recommendation of the doctor. "The lung is an organ that has to function, but we must loosen the load on it as much as possible," said Dr. Elliott. "Exercise increases metabolism in the body, so that rest is essential in lessening the work of the lungs, and also in allowing the healing process to proceed."

It is not sufficient, he asserted to take a few months' perfunctory rest, in which a certain number of social functions are allowed to intervene. A complete and absolute rest is essential, the doctor answering a question as to the duration of the rest period, by saying that it should continue unbroken until the temperature and the pulse rate are normal, and no bacilli have been visible in the sputum for the space of at least two or three months.

"Do not say to your patients: "Go west or go south, and live quietly." Climate does not cure, and never has cured tuberculosis. "It is better that a patient should be at home under strict supervision than in the best climate unattended."

Third Paper.

Dr. William Magner gave an interesting paper, illustrated with lantern slides, dealing with the Physiology and Pathology of the Gall Bladder. He described fully the structure and the functions of the organ which he said had been called "a profitable stone quarry," spoke of the infections which were characteristic of it, and of the pathological lesions which might attack it as a result of these infections. The chief function of the gall bladder is that of absorption but it is believed, said the speaker, that, as well as water, certain solid constituents are also absorbed by it, altered, and passed into the lymphatic circulation.

The ball bladder, the liver, the pancreas, and the duodenum, are all connected. A mode of infectional entry is ofter made through the tissues of the mouth, where streptococci, which have a special affinity for the gall bladder, gain entrance.

"HOW I BECAME MISS AMERICA"

Ruth Malcomson Gives Ten Rules For Beauty.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., September 18. — There is no short cut to beauty. It is a long road that knows many an unpleasant and arduous bending.

At least that is the retrospective view of Miss Ruth Malcomson, of West Philadelphia, Pa., chosen here as "Miss America," the most beautiful girl in the land.

Her father owns an ice company in her home town. She has been a member of the same church—and a regular attendant—since she was nine months old. For years she has been a choir girl.

As America's most gloriñed girl she is 18 years old, 5 feet 6 inches in height, violet eyes, weighs 132 pounds and has long golden brown hair, naturally curly.

"It is to my mother that I contribute the honor conferred upon me. It was she who watched carefully over me and grooved me in the habits I am sure are essential for any girl to gain the most from her natural charms," said Miss America.

Her mother, often mistaken for Miss America's sister, is youthful and beautiful in appearance showing that her beauty training system is of practical proportions.

"I have no stage ambitions," said Miss America with decision, "but I always have wanted to be a motion picture actress."

Miss Malcomson was amateur beauty here last year, winning the highest honors in her class, but this year she returned with a new standing and was triumphant over all comers.

She is a recent high school graduate and does not work.

Also—and this is important—she doesn't bob her hair.

TEN SIGN POSTS ALONG THE ROAD TO BEAUTY.

BY MISS AMERICA.

(RUTH MALCOMSON OF PHILADELPHIA.)

1. RISE EARLY. It is the morning sun that aids the complexion. The air is snappy and nature is at its best. Eyes sparkle and blood tingles. Mornings are essential to beauty.

2. EAT A HEARTY BREAKFAST. The first meal of the day should be substantial. If you rise early you will enjoy it. Breakfast should fuel the body for the whole day.

3. EXERCISE. It is most necessary. Long walks and frequent dancing are excellent. Swimming aids in making and keeping the figure shapely. The walking habit is wonderful and easy to require.

4. NO ALCOHOL. Drinking intoxicating liquors is suicide to beauty aspirations. It not only is a violation of the law of man but is against nature's decrees.

5. SMOKING IS DETRIMENTAL. It seems to be a substitute for exercise these days. If girls spent the time devoted to cigarettes in walking around the block they would find it beneficial to health and beauty.

6. GET OUTDOORS. Don't spend every matinee time in a theatre or a at a bridge party. Walk or ride into the open, go to a baseball game or a tennis match. Let the sun see your face.

7. EAT A LIGHT LUNCH. If you exercise in the morning and eat a hearty breakfast you will have no hunger pangs at noon. It is the heavy lunches and candy eating in the afternoon that produces weight.

8. EAT A SATISFYING DINNER. It should be the principal meal of the beauty's day. Eat enough but don't gourge.

9. EARLY TO BED. This doesn't mean that one must cease living at curfew time. But it isn't necessary to remain up until four o'clock in the morning to have a good time.

10. SLEEP. If you observe these rules you will not be troubled with insomnia. Your sleep, so essential to beauty, will be peaceful and uninterrupted.

RISE TO THE NEED

'Tis only once a year that the public in general are invited to contribute toward the altogether commendable work of the Children's Aid Society, and that is on the organization's Tag Day, which this year falls on Saturday, September 27th. This Tag Day method of raising funds for the support of a public institution originated in Peterboro with the Children's Aid, and has in the past met with a generous response; and there is no doubt that the liberality of an appreciative community in former years will be repeated Saturday week.

But the Children's Aid is an organization which must be prepared for and look forward to increased efforts to keep apace with growing demands upon its functioning. Hence it is hoped that this year will see citizens rising to the need in a united effort to substantially better last September's Tag Day total of $1,950.83. The importance of community and nation of this society's work of uplifting and fostering present and future lives of neglected or parentless little ones cannot, perhaps, be stressed too strongly. Children are the hope of the nation; their bringing up in surroundings and influences where respect for moral and civil laws dominate promises a national asset in their developed manhood and womanhood. To this end every effort of the Children's Aid is directed, and their accomplishments in the past should stimulate public contributions through the Tag Day boxes.

Let no one miss buying a tag when the appeal is again made — every little will help and be appreciated.

MONTHLY MEETING

Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Church Held a Meeting.

The Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Church held their regular monthly meeting for September on Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mrs. John, president, was in the chair.

The meeting opened by the singing of a hymn, followed by a prayer by the Rev. J. W. Gordon. This was a special meeting, and Rev. Mr. Gordon was invited to attend and speak a few minutes to the members and friends that were gathered together.

Mrs. Stacey then read a passage of Scripture, followed by a season of prayer from different members of the society.

Minutes of the last meeting were read by the Secretary, and the report of the treasurer; then a business discussion and several letters read.

A solo was then given by Mrs. Ross Williams.

Mrs. Plant, secretary of the Home Helpers of the Presbyterial, of Hastings, then gave the address of the afternoon, which was greatly enjoyed by all present. She explained fully how the Home Helpers could help the Auxiliary workers; also as a society they must keep in touch with each other.

Mrs. Geo. Laing, Home Helpers' secretary, of St. Andrew's, moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Plant, seconded by Mrs. Mathieson, for her interesting talk on the work of the W.M.S., and the pleasure it gave us having her here.

Miss Craw then gave her little talk on the special pages of our Missionary Messengers, drawing our attention to what she thought might be overlooked during our holiday season.

The meeting then closed with a prayer, offered by Mrs. (Rev.) Gordon.

Refreshments were then served by the different ladies of Mrs. Steven's Circle to about seventy people, who seemingly enjoyed themselves in a social half-hour.

While the ladies were busy preparing the latter part of the programme, May King sang very sweetly a solo, then followed by a duet by Jean McKone and Isabel Weddell.

BALANCE FOR PUBLIC.

American Group Will Take $90,000,000 of New Canadian Loan.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18. — The American portion of the Canadian government's $200,000,000 financing, consisting of $90,000,000 one-year 4 per cent notes, has been awarded to a banking group headed by the Chase Securities Corporation, it was announced last night. Public offering of the issue will be made to-day at par.

Transfer of the dominion government's business from the firm of J. P. Morgan and Company, which hitherto has handled its principal financial operations, to a new banking syndicate occasioned widespread comment in Wall street. Both groups refuse to discuss the reported rivalry for the loan. Although Canadian finance officials were understood to have sought the advice of the Morgan firm, they awarded the business to competing bankers because the offer of a short-term note issue conformed with their financing plans.

Proceeds of the sale will be applied to the retirement of maturing treasury bills exceeding the amount of the new issue. The balance of the Canadian financing will be done internally.

Associated with the Chase Securities Corporation in the offering will be Blair and Company, and the Equitable Trust Company of New York and other banks in Boston, Chicago, LosAngeles, San Francisco and St. Louis.

SOME GOOD ADVICE.

Four Young Men Ran Into a Flock of Geese.

Sunday afternoon four young men in an automobile ran into a flock of geese, the property of Mr. Robert McGahey, near Union School (S. S. No. 16), N. Emily. The geese were being driven by a boy and a girl along the road when the motorists deliberately ran into them, killing three and wounding four. They then disappeared at full speed, but Mr. McGahey jumped into his car and took chase. He caught them four miles east, near Fox's corner. The young men settled for the geese and were given some words of advice by Mr. McGahey.

HITCH IN PLANS.

Bank of France Objects To Paying Portion of Interest.

LONDON, Sept. 18. — (United News).—Negotiations for the renewal of the Morgan and Co., credit which was hurriedly arranged for France some time ago when the Franc began to drop steadily in value has struck a snag according to a dispatch to the financial times from Paris.

The negotiations are between the Bank of France and the House of Morgan and it is understood that an "awkward hitch was reached when the French institution declared its unwillingness to pay interest on the whole credit and insisted that it should pay interest only on the amount actually used. The Morgan negotiations are said to object to this arrangement."

GUN-PLANES FOUR MILES A MINUTE

Strenuous Race Between Leading Nations for Air-Fighter Speed

BATTLE OF WITS

Britain Less Advanced Than France and United States

A new and secret air struggle of vital importance has begun between the great nations.

It becomes increasingly clear that air power, offensive and defensive, must depend upon the ascensional power and speed of single-seater "gun-planes"— machines with great many-cylindered engines, in which everything in subservient to a rush skyward at tremendous speed, there to endeavor to out-fly and out-fight opponents in brief, fierce duels.

The scientists and technicians of America, France and Britain are, therefore, being pitted against each other in a fresh battle of wits to produce a world's record fighter in speed and climb.

"STRIPPED FOR THE FRAY."

At the present time the international table of air-fighter speeds is as follows:

France, 190 miles per hour.
United States, 170 miles per hour.
Britain, 155 miles per hour.

Our position at the bottom of the list is due not to there being anything fundamentally wrong with our designs or our motors. It is due to an endeavor, on the part of officialdom, to combine too many different features in one and the same aeroplane; with the result that the machine is made too heavy, and does not do itself justice either in speed or climb.

In the new air-race now starting all this is to be changed. British machines are to be built which will be stripped for the fray. They will carry a minimum of equipment. Their weight of fuel will be sufficient only for a phenomenally swift climb up to dizzy altitudes. Their motors are to be huge power-plants developing as much as 800 horse-power.

WINGED BULLETS.

Thus engined, and carrying only one man, these "winged bullets" will rush upon an antagonist at more than 200 miles an hour.

America, the first nation in the world to build a racing 'plane to fly at 266 miles an hour, is constructing secret "gun-planes," streamlined to the last degree, and driven by immensely powerful engines, which are expected, even when carrying all their armament, to hurtle through the air at a speed as great as four miles a minute!

France, proud of her record of having the swiftest of all airfighters, the famous Gourdon-Lescurre monoplane, is determined not to be beaten in this new struggle for gun-plane speed.

The most skilled of her technicians are actively at work, and it is declared that at Villacoublay she has already one new "hush-hush" craft which will exceed in speed any other air-fighter ever built.

BUILDING BOOM HITS ENGLAND

Quantities of Foreign Bricks to Build Houses for Britishers

Millions of bricks from the Continent are now being imported into England—chiefly in the south—in order to meet the urgent demand created by the greatest boom in speculative house building for thirty years.

Speculative builders, who were knocked out of business by the war, are now putting up thousands of middle-class houses and selling them at a good profit. The call for bricks is so great that British brickmakers confess that at present they are unable to meet it completely.

At the same time, while millions of foreign bricks—some from Germany—are being used to build British homes, there are still some English brickworks that are closed.

The building industry, with a few local exceptions, resumed work yesterday after the recent stoppage.

RETURN OF MUFF AUTUMN FASHION

Shaggy furs, such as uncuried Tibet, llama, wolf, and long-haired rabbit, dyed to match the coat, will be worn this autumn. Beige is one of the favorite shades.

Fur coats are to be mostly tight-fitting, wrap-over shape and fastened with one large button. There are also close-fitting, long fur capes, with slits for the arms.

All the short-haired furs are elaborately "worked" in squares, stripes, scroll designs, and so on. In Paris, braided shaved lamb in startling colors is in evidence in exclusive showrooms.

The muff may return, and a new melon-shaped variety has a bag with tortoiseshell mounts in the centre.

WONDERFUL COAT MADE IN INDIA

A wonderful coat, wrought with 900 to 1,100 knots to the square inch, has been sent to Wembley from Agra and Oudh, Northern India.

Roses and rose leaves are interwoven with delicate floral designs in various tints. Made for an Indian Prince about 80 years ago, this coat is the only remaining sample of an art now lost.

It was once the boast of Indian Princes to maintain skilled artisans and craftsmen in their service, with no stated hours of work, but with an understanding that their work must be unrivalled. The custom has been disappearing since the Mutiny, and there are no artists to carry on the traditions.

The warp and woof in the making of this coat is silk, while the basis is the famous "Pasmina" wool from Kasmir. It is valued at £500, but no amount of money can create another.

At Llandudno Junction an ex-service occupier of a Council house, of which he is held not to be the legal tenant, hung his war medals on the front door, together with the official notice that proceedings for his ejectment as a trespasser would not be suspended.

TURF FRAUD BY RADIO SUSPECTED

Succession of Heavy Wins on Outsiders Prompts Inquiry

BET WITHHELD

"Back Coded" Messages—How Did Sender Get Results of Races?

Inquiries are being made by detective agents of the British and Irish Post Offices into an alleged turf swindle which may have been aided, it is thought by wireless.

The extraordinary success of a backer having a credit account with three of the largest bookmakers in London, Glasgow and Edinburgh first aroused suspicions. Thousands of pounds were paid to him on horses which won at outside prices and carried little other money.

All the telegrams making the bets were timed a few minutes before each race, and were dispatched from a small town in Ireland.

WITHHELD.

The bookmakers finally withheld the payment of a sum of about £1,000 because the series of wins had become so exceptional. The backer's account included no losing horses and no winning "favorites" only "outsiders."

The postal authorities came to the conclusion that the telegrams had been "back-coded"—that is, handed in to the receiving office before the start of each race, and then obtained again, in some way, after the results were known and the names of the winning horses inserted.

The mystery is how the sender managed to know the results of the races so soon after they had been run. No trunk telephone calls to him can be traced, and it is suggested that he may have been informed by some private wireless installation. He is known to have a receiver.

Prosecution for the offence of "back coding" can be taken by the postal authorities, and a number of cases have occurred in which the backers had received results by telephone.

Resentful Member Of Club That Banned Premier Calls Loan

The continuance of the ban on Mr. MacDonald's membership of Lossiemouth Golf Club has given rise to a curious situation, says the London Daily Express.

A wealthy member, who is an ardent admirer of the Prime Minister, and had made a loan of £3,000 to the club without interest for a period of three years, has demanded that his money shall be repaid to him.

The club expect to raise the money among the "die-hard" members, but not without interest.

The Prime Minister is not permitted to play on his native links even by paying the visitors' daily fee, though his son and daughter are allowed to golf there.

Mr. MacDonald was a guest recently at a picnic given by public subscription to about 100 veteran Lossiemouth fishermen. They all remembered him as a schoolboy.

CLERGYMAN AS HARNESS MAKER

Only the publication of his will revealed that the late Canon Charles Griffits was the head of a harness contractor's business in the East-end of London.

Canon Griffits had been hon. canon of Bristol Cathedral since 1900, procurator of convocation of Canterbury for 18 years, and vicar of St. Paul, Bedminster, Bristol for 26 years. He left £39,613.

A considerable business had been done at his premises in Whitechapel-road in the manufacture and sale of harness for tradesmen's horses in various parts of the country. The business known as R. C. Fillingham and Co., was established in 1750.

"In the two and a half years I have been here I have never seen the canon," the acting manager told a "Daily Chronicle" representative yesterday.

"He left the management of the business which he acquired several years ago entirely to Mr. Gomme, the manager. He was a very generous employer."

The canon left £100 to the Missions to Seamen's Society, and a similar sum to his manager.

In memory of those who fell in the war a beautifully-laid-out-area in the British Empire Exhibition is to be preserved as "The Garden of Remembrance."

ANTRIM MAN IS DEAD AGED 112

John Campbell, of Muckamore, County Antrim, has died at the age of 112.

He had lived in six reigns but could recall little of the great events of any of them, being singularly unconcerned about matters outside his own orbit.

"Don't worry about anything" was his health slogan, and he regarded the pipe, which was rarely out of his mouth, as a means to that end.

Other golden rules for longevity, he said, were plenty of fresh air, oaten bread and buttermilk, together with regular hours and early rising.

Mr. Campbell was a bachelor.

SEVERN BARRAGE ENQUIRY IS BEGUN

Committee of Distinguished Scientists Appointed to Report

PERSONNEL NAMED

Scheme to Produce Electrical Power on An Enormous Scale

A definite move has been made by the Government with a view of ascertaining the feasibility of the great Severn barrage for the production of electrical power on an enormous scale.

Lord Parmoor, as the political head of the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research, has appointed a committee to supervise and direct the work. The committee consists of:

Mr. G. S. Albright, C.B.E., J.P., chairman.
Professor A. H. Gibson, M.Inst. C.E., M.I.Mech.E., F.R.Ae.S.
Mr. G. W. Lamplugh, F.R.S.
Mr. Maurice Wilson, A.M.Inst.C.E.
Dr. J. S. Flett, O.B.E., LL.D., F.R.S., Director, Geological Survey and Museum.

The feasibility of the Severn scheme, it is announced, turns first and foremost on the possibility of finding satisfactory foundations for a barrage.

TO REPORT THIS YEAR.

Accordingly the first stage of the investigation will involve:

The study by the Geological Survey of the stratigraphical formations in the neighborhood of the sites suggested for the erection of the barrage.

Taking preliminary soundings with a view to determine the contour of the river bed at the sites; and

Preliminary measurements of the flow of water at different states of the tide.

Meanwhile, two eminent consulting engineers, Sir Maurice Fitzmaurice and Sir John Griffith, have been invited by Lord Parmoor to submit a joint report before the end of this year with regard to the possibility of constructing a barrage on one or more of the sites suggested, on the assumption that safe foundations exist.

The staff of the Geological Survey have already begun the inquiry, and their report will probably be ready before the end of September.

The Severn barrage scheme was drawn up by the Ministry of Transport when Sir Eric Geddes was its head. It was shelved on account of the outlay involved, which was estimated at £25,000,000.

Heirs Wanted

For the first time in its long career, extending over centuries, the "London Gazette" is advertising for heirs to estates of intestates.

It is notified that these estates, in the absence of kin, will be administered by the Treasury Solicitor on behalf of the Crown.

The first list is as follows:

Jerdon, otherwise Josquin. — The next-of-kin of Sarah Jerdon, otherwise Josquin, widow, late of 37 Trinity road, Upper Tooting, Surrey, who died there on February 29, 1924.

West.—The next-of-kin of George West, late of Carrington House, Deptford, Kent, who died at the Livingstone Hospital, Dartford, Kent, on July 11, 1923.

Powell.—The next-of-kin of Frederick Powell, late of Brynbedw, Lonlas, Skewen, Glamorganshire, who died there on March 24, 1924.

McDonagh.—The next-of-kin of Michael McDonagh, late of the Royal Hospital, Kilmainham, Co. Dublin, who died there on March 30, 1923.

Anyone claiming to be of kin to the above-named deceased persons should forthwith apply to the Treasury Solicitor, (E), Storey's Gate, London, S.W.1.

Other lists will appear in future issues of the Gazette.

SCIENCE EXPLODES OUTWORN BELIEFS

Dr. Hector Macpherson, of Guthrie Memorial United Free Church, Edinburgh, discussed, at the Modern Churchmen's Conference at Oxford the effects upon theology of our present knowledge of the stellar universe.

A century ago, he said, religious people were inclined to think of the life of this world as having gone on for about 6,000 years. The Creation was dated at 4004 B.C., and there was even a solemn assignment of it to the October of that year. In fact, it has actually been assigned to nine o'clock on the morning of Oct. 23. By the middle of the 19th century, 20 million years had been suggested as the life of the sun, that of the earth being less in proportion. But that had been rendered obsolete many years ago.

It was not surprising that the first effect of this impression of vastness was unsettling, but was it true to say that the foundations of our faith had been cut away from under us? This tremendous system of stars and worlds was not self-explanatory, and the primitive emotions of awe and reverence aroused in the ancients were aroused in modern man to an even greater degree, because he beheld an immeasurably greater universe.

There was evidence that the universe was one in law, in substance and in process, and we could not but be struck by the absurdity of the belief that only in our speck of the cosmos had the process resulted in life.

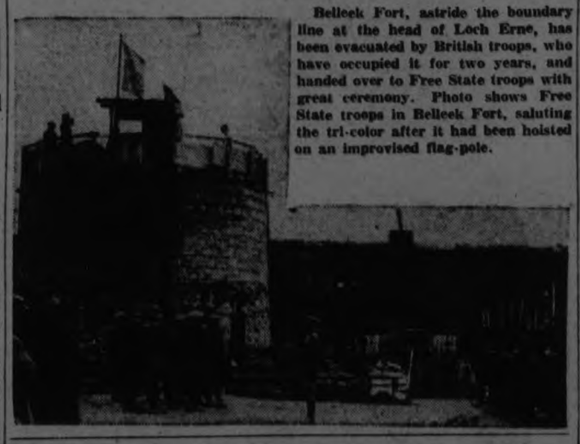
THREE SISTERS' GOLDEN WEDDINGS

Three sisters, Mrs. Whyman and Mrs. Christian, of Pickworth, Rutland, and Mrs. Cousins, of Essendine, have just celebrated their golden weddings. They were all married in the parish church at Pickworth within a short time of one another.

They are members of a family of seven sisters and three brothers, the youngest of whom is 62 and the eldest 80.

Walker Campbell, of Limber Magna Grange, Brocklesby (Lincs.,) left £20 to be invested, the income to be applied to keeping the family grave in order and having the tombstone "washed with soap and water once a year."

BRITISH EVACUATE IRISH FORT



Belleek Fort, astride the boundary line at the head of Loch Erne, has been evacuated by British troops, who have occupied it for two years, and handed over to Free State troops with great ceremony. Photo shows Free State troops in Belleek Fort, saluting the tri-color after it had been hoisted on an improvised flag-pole.

WHOLE TOWN IN RHONDDA VALLEY THROWN ON DOLE

Depression in Vital Industries in Britain Has Terrible Consequences for Large Sections of Population

The prospect of a whole town being idle and its 12,000 people being thrown upon unemployment and parish funds is reported from the Rhondda Valley, where the Cambrian Combine's group of steam coal collieries in Clydach Vale are closing down.

H. H. Evans, general manager of the combine, explained that as the pits have been working at a loss for some time, it is impossible to carry on any longer. The only hope of the resumption of work is a trade boom or a brightening in the state of the coal market.

The two weeks' notices to the 4,000 men take effect immediately and as the whole of the town is dependent upon these collieries, the outlook is as dispairing to the tradesmen as to the colliery workers.

It has been estimated that unemployment, dole, and parish relief to the families will be between £4,000 and £5,000 a week.

The effect of the depression existing in some of the vital industries is shown by the parlous condition of Newburn-on-Tyne Urban District, to the west of Newcastle, which includes Newburn, Lemington, and Throckley.

The steel rolling mills at Newburn of Messrs. Spencer and Company, are closed, and 1,500 men have been idle for some months, while at Throckley, the Blucher and Throckley coal mines have been idle for a month, 1,200 being unemployed.

Last week, Sir James Knott offered to pay the emigration expenses for 200 men thrown out of work by the closing of Messrs. Spencer's steelworks.

Mr. Lynas, secretary to the steelworks, states that practically the the whole community is on the dole, for, while the old steelworks are working, they employ only a small proportion of the company's normal workers.

Mr. Lynas adds that there is little prospect of an improvement in the steel industry, as competition is keener than ever owing to longer hours and lower wages paid to foreign workmen and the adverse effect of the rate of exchange.

The situation has brought a unique offer from the men's side. Mr. Smith, local secretary of the British Iron, Steel and Kindred Trades Association, having headed a deputation to the Ministry of Labor to suggest the transfer of the dole from the men to the firm to indemnify it against loss.

GERMAN ENTERPRISE.

It was urged that it is costing the country £10,000 weekly for the dole to unemployed steelworkers, and that a smaller amount paid as a subsidy to the firm would enable full employment to be restored and the men to get good wages instead of the dole. The Ministry, however, indicates that nothing can be done on the lines suggested.

A typical instance of German trade enterprise is provided by a South London firm. "We have," they write, "just opened new premises, and so far as we are aware it does not yet appear in any directory; yet the very first canvassing trade circular received is from Germany."

TEDDY BEAR IS BURIED WITH BOY

A Teddy Bear lay in the coffin with James Allen, a six-year-old Covent Garden boy, who was buried at South Mimms, near Barnet.

One of the boy's last requests had been that his plaything should not be taken from him.

He had died from injuries received in a motor smash at South Mimms.

More than 40 wreaths were sent to the funeral, and the parish church was packed with sympathizers.

PEER'S DAUGHTER LEAVES FORTUNE

The Hon. Marguerite de Fontaine Drever Joicey, daughter of Lord Joicey, the well-known North Country coal owner, has left personal estate valued at £253,150. The death duties amounted to £85,819.

She leaves colliery shares to her father, and after bequests to friends, the residue of her estate goes to her brothers, the Hon. James Arthur Joicey and the Hon. Hugh Edward Joicey.

ABBEY MONUMENT ROBBED OF SPEAR

Part of one of the monuments in Westminster Abbey has mysteriously disappeared.

The broken monument is that erected by Lady Elizabeth Nightingale in 1761 to the memory of her son. There is a figure of Death, clutching a short spear, aimed at the figure of Lady Elizabeth. It is the head of this spear that is missing.

"Probably it has been taken by a souvenir-hunter," an official said. "Souvenir-hunters are astonishing people. Nothing seems to come amiss to them if a souvenir is at stake."

DRUNK AT WHEEL BUT SAFE DRIVER

At Marylebone Police Court, Ivor McKay, engineer, of Portsdown road, W., was fined 45s. and costs for being drunk in charge of a motor car. His licence was suspended for three months. A charge of dangerous driving was dismissed.

Mr. Wilberforce, the magistrate, said this was a case, the like of which he had never known before, where a man was drunk, but whose condition did not interfere with his power to drive without danger to the public.

PACKET OF MONEY WASHED ASHORE

A boy and girl playing on the beach at Port Glasgow found a parcel containing £80 in American notes.

More notes have since been washed up on the shore, bringing the total up to over £100.

Large crowds are now on the lookout for further treasure, and are watching the ebb and flow of the tide.

The whole affair is at present a mystery. Steamships sailing between Glasgow and American pass Port Glasgow, which is situated at the mouth of the Clyde.

The money was wrapped in brown paper, and it is thought that the parcels may have beeen thrown overboard by mistake.

Owing to the slump in the iron trade, a blast furnace was put out of operation at Ayresome Ironworks, Middlesbrough. In the Cleveland area there are now only 43 furnaces in blast against over 70 in normal times.

CANADIAN FIRM GETS BIG ORDER

An order totalling £160,000 was received by a Canadian dry milk dealer exhibiting at the British Empire Exhibition. He sold his output for the next five years to a British firm.

Other Canadian exhibitors have done good business, inquiries coming from remote parts of the world. One firm has decided to spend £20,000 on opening a permanent branch in London.

BITTER STING OF DISOBEDIENCE

A mother, whose six-year-old girl was admitted to a London hospital suffering from a wasp sting on the tongue, said the child was tasting the fruits of disobedience.

The girl had yielded to a sudden impulse to go into the pantry and help herself to jam. Unfortunately, a wasp was following a similar impulse at the same time.

IRISH WOMAN DIES AT FINE AGE OF 107

At the age of 107, Mrs. Bridget Hawkes Richardson, of Hartfield road, South Wimbledon, has died.

She has lived in the same house for about 60 years.

Her hearing was perfect and she read the papers daily without the aid of glasses.

A daughter of John Hawkes, of Milan Hall, Co. Cork, master of the Muskerry Foxhounds, Mrs. Richardson in her younger days was a fearless rider.

ARMED MEN RAID POST OFFICE

Four men armed with revolvers walked into the Portobello Post Office in the Rathmines district of Dublin and ordered the six officials on duty to put up their hands and face the wall.

The key of the safe was demanded, and one of the robbers opened it and took out £1,500 in notes. The men then left the office. Police were called in, but no arrests have yet been made.

VICTORIAN PENCE BEING WITHDRAWN

Copper coins bearing the uncrowned head of Queen Victoria are being taken out of circulation.

"It is simply a question of withdrawing old and worn coins," said a Mint official.

"As supplies come in they will drop out of use, to be replaced where necessary by fresh mints. It is the customary process of replenishing the currency.

THRIFT EXAMPLE BY SCHOOL CHILDREN

Up to August 22 the pupils at St. Paul's Church of England School, at Maidstone, had invested £30,050 in National Savings Certificates, more than £900 of which has been subscribed this year.

St. Paul's is in a working-class district, where there has been considerable unemployment.

War Savings Certificates were first issued in February, 1916.

Eighteen thousand ewes were sold at the annual sheep sale at Craven Arms, Shropshire.

CHURCHMEN MEET AT OXFORD

Denial of Evolution of Species Called Intellectual Suicide

BISHOP'S VIEW

Pope Not Likely to Be Converted for Next Century

Opinions that a few centuries ago would have probably brought their exponents to a martyr's death at the stake for heresy were expressed at the Conference of Modern Churchmen at Oxford.

Professor E. W. Mcbride, professor of zoology at the Imperial College of Science, South Kensington, declared that it was intellectual suicide to deny the evolution of the varied species of animals, including the human race, and plants from several, or, more probably, only one common stock of lowly ancestors.

"The belief that men are born in sin is embedded in the baptismal service," he said. "If the doctrine of evolution be true, if mankind has been slowly developed out of ape-like ancestors, then what is called real sin consists of nothing but the tendencies which we have inherited from these ancestors."

Canon E. W. Barnes, Bishop of Birmingham, said amid hearty applause, "The English Church is rapidly coming to accept the doctrine of evolution.

"Elsewhere, as in the Middle Western States of America and in the Roman Catholic Church, great exception is taken to the doctrine. Unless the Roman Church moves much faster than it is doing now the Pope will not be converted to evolution until shortly after the middle of the next century.

"Both fit and unfit, good and bad, develop in evolution, and we have to ask ourselves why is it. It is the old problem of evil brought to us in a new form. We are left profoundly perplexed. We cannot give any adequate reply, possibly because with our own finite minds we cannot see the whole working of the universe and cannot realize how definite is the trend in the whole towards the good."

Some Facts About British Emigrants

Interesting statistics concerning the occupations of emigrants from the British Isles are contained in the current number of the Board of Trade Journal. The numbers of males during the last three years were: 1921, 79,462; 1922, 77,073; and 1923, 141,027. The numbers of females were: 87,554; 1922, 70,816; and 1923, 89,884.

In each of the three years the number of emigrants from the British Isles who were classified in the agricultural group exceeded the number in any other individual group, the percentage in this group being 18.4 of the total males of 18 years and upwards in 1921 and 1922, and 20.1 in 1923.

The numbers recorded in the mining, engineering, and building groups showed increases in 1922 and 1923 as compared with the figures for 1921, the most noticeable proportional increase being shown in the metal and engineering group, where the percentage of the total rose from 11.0 in 1921 to 15.0 in 1922 and 19.0 in 1923.

The percentage employed in mining and quarrying and in building increased in 1923 as compared with 1921.

The proportion of other skilled workers whose trade was not specially indicated increased from 11.1 per cent. of the total in 1921 and in 1922 to 13 per cent. in 1923.

In the commercial, finance, and insurance and professional groups proportional decreases were shown in 1923 as compared with 1921, the percentage in the former group falling from 17.0 to 10.0, and in the latter group from 7.8 to 3.4.

Laborers, not employed in agriculture or transport, accounted for 13.2 per cent. of the total in 1921, 10.0 per cent. in 1922, and 14.6 per cent. in 1923. The relative number in the transport and communications group showed a small decrease in 1923 as compared with 1921 and 1922.

Of the female emigrants the number of wives or housewives (not otherwise described) amounted to nearly one-half of the total in each of the three years. The percentage employed in domestic, hotel, etc., service, was 27.0 in 1921, 27.4 in 1922, and 28.5 in 1923. Little relative variation is shown in the other groups.

BAKER BOY'S RISE TO FORTUNE

The freedom of Forres, Elginshire, was conferred on Sir Alexander Grant, managing director of Messrs. McVitie and Price, and a native of, and a generous benefactor to, the town. The Prime Minister and Miss Ishbel MacDonald were present at the ceremony.

Provost Geddie, who presided, referring to Sir Alexander Grant's humble origin and his start in life as a baker's boy in Forres, said many successful men had made their name and fame in the Colonies, where there was supposed to be more scope and elbow room. Sir Alexander, however, had shown what could be accomplished by grit, perseverance, and industry in the old country.

BRILLIANT CHESS BY POLISH PLAYER

Rubinstein, the noted Polish player, gave a remarkable exhibition of chess in his game against Heath in the open championship class at the Southport Congress.

He ventured upon a Kieseritsky gambit quite in the olden style and won in 19 moves after a series of hair-raising adventures.

In the British championship, by last night, Sir George Thomas, Saunders, and Atkins had each secured two clear wins.

In the ladies' championship, Miss Stevenson alone has won both games played, Miss Gilchrist and Miss Price having scores of 1½.

That his ashes should be thrown away after cremation was a direction in the will of the late Alderman Joseph Thomas Watson, of Fellows road, Hampstead. He forbade flowers to be placed upon the coffin, and asked that as little money as possible be spent upon his funeral.

To Succeed Jellicoe

General Sir Charles Fergusson, seventh Baronet of Kilkerran, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., D.L., M.V.O., D.S.O., who has been appointed Governor of New Zealand, in succession to Viscount Jellicoe, has had a long and brilliant military career.

Sir Charles is the son of the sixth Baronet of Kilkerran, and Edith, daughter of the Marquis of Dalhousie, and was born at Edinburgh on January 17, 1865. He succeeded his father in 1907.

COMPANY FORMED WITH CENT CAPITAL

Private Company With Two Shares of One Farthing

FEES HEAVY

More Than 2,000 Times the Capital—Convenience Motive

A halfpenny, made up of two shares of a farthing each, is the nominal capital of the newly-registered company of Frank Davies, Ltd., of London.

It cost £4 5s in fees to comply with formalities at Somerset House—more than 2,000 times the amount of the capital.

This is the first time that the permitted minimum of a halfpenny, divided into farthing shares, for a private company has been recorded.

The company has been formed to carry on the business of auctioneers, valuers, surveyors, architects, estate agents, &c. F. Davies, of Denver-road, Stamford-Hill, N., is the governing director and chairman, and Mrs. Elsie W. Davies the secretary.

According to an official announcement the remuneration of directors is to be voted by the company in general meeting.

"It is simply a family business, a private limited company being formed as a matter of convenience," a press representative was told at the offices of Mr. Davies, who is away on a holiday.

"The duty and fees payable at Somerset House would be as much on a halfpenny capital as on £100" said an agent of Chancery-lane.

According to records which he has compiled there have been two or three £1 regulations, with the capital divided into 960 shares of a farthing each, and many companies have been formed with an initial capital of £5.

Biscuit Firm's Reply to Unofficial Strike is Lockout

Five thousand workers, of whom 1,200 are women, were locked out from Huntley and Palmer's great biscuit factory at Reading.

This was the firm's swift and dramatic reply to an unofficial strike begun during the morning by some of their women workers, who resented new regulations. Later in the day this notice was posted on the gates:

"The unauthorized action of certain of our employees has made it impossible to continue the work of the factory.

"The works will therefore close down at 6 p.m. today, and will not be reopened until the future terms and conditions of employment have been decided."

DARING STOWAWAYS POSE AS PASSENGERS

Two young men, Hugh Gibson and George Beaton, were, at Glasgow, each fined £5, or 30 days' imprisonment, for stowing away on the Canadian Pacific liner Marburn from Montreal to Glasgow.

According to Gibson, they went to Canada in August last year, but, owing to bad trade, were nearly starved to death during the winter.

As the liner has accommodation for a thousand passengers the men found no difficulty once aboard, in secreting themselves, not in the bunkers or cargo holds as stowaways usually do, but in empty cabins, where they slept by night. In the day time they mixed freely with the third-class passengers, and sat down with them at supper, this being the only meal on which the officers of the ship had no check.

So audacious were the pair in their manner that no suspicion was occasioned, and it was not until the liner was two days from the Clyde that they were discovered.

The first man referred to crossed on the Doric. He was an ex-steward and knew the ropes. He got 21 days on reaching Liverpool.

UNLUCKY 'SHAMROCK' IS NOW LAID UP

After a series of misfortunes, Sir Thomas Lipton's "Shamrock" is laying up at Southampton. Her chapter of accidents began during the crossing from America last year when, encountering bad weather, she sustained serious damage and a number of her crew were injured. Just before Cowes week a collision took place between "Shamrock" and "White Heather," and later, whilst racing, the mate of the former was lost overboard. Subsequently two other mishaps befel the yacht when part of her bow gear was damaged and the mast "sprung."

MARRIED STRANGER FOR $25 PAYMENT

Workless Briton's Story of Wedding to Bride from France

"SHE NEVER SPOKE"

First Meeting Took Place in Taxicab—Whole Affair Arranged

Astonishing allegations were made by Harold Vere Witty, or Kellaway, aged thirty-three, a waiter, who was committed for trial at Bow-street Police Court on a charge of bigamy, with a Frenchwoman.

He alleged that he received $25 for marrying the woman, Marie Raymond Lecomte, who was unknown to him, and that he had not seen her since the day of the ceremony at the Hackney Registrar's office.

"He is one of the best of husbands," said Witty's wife in her evidence, "and he has never been absent from home for a day."

Witty, who gave evidence on his own behalf, stated that he was approached in the street by a man named King, to whom he had never spoken before. King ascertained from him that he was unemployed, and he said: "Come with me and I will find somebody who will be able to give you some money if you will do a job." They went to a club and King introduced him to another man named George.

FOREIGN TONGUE.

"King spoke to George in a foreign language, which I did not understand," said Witty. "The three of us then walked down Lower Compton-street, where George handed to King some papers with £3 in Treasury notes, which he handed to me. George then left us, and I went with King to the Hackney Registrar's office. He gave me a paper with the name 'Marie Raymond Lecomte' written on it, and told me to go inside and take out a license to marry that person."

Witty added that King went into the office with him and the license was supplied. King asked him to go to Newhaven with him, but he refused. They made an appointment for the following Monday, and King met him with a taxicab.

"Then for the first time," said Witty, "I saw the woman Lecomte, and King said to me, 'This is the woman you are going to marry.'"

THE WITNESS.

Witty stated that he entered the cab and said "Good morning" to the woman, but as she did not answer he did not open his lips afterwards. Another woman, also a stranger to him, was in the registrar's office as a witness, and the marriage ceremony was performed.

Witty stated that he did not make any effort to withdraw because King "frightened" him so much. He received $25 after the ceremony, and had not seen the woman Lecomte since. King saw him a day or two later and asked him to obtain passports, but he refused.

The magistrate: Did they ever explain to you why they wanted you to go through this form of marriage?—I asked that question, and King said: "This woman wants to see her brother and sister in Paris, and it will save her such a lot of trouble in getting passports and so on."

SON ACQUITTED OF MURDER OF MOTHER

Three Thousand People Cheer Jury's Verdict at Edinburgh

Cheers greeted the verdict "Not guilty" which was returned in favor of William Laurie King, a chartered accountant's twenty-two-year-old son, accused in the Edinburgh High Court of murdering his mother and attempting to murder his father by putting arsenic on their food.

There were five women on the jury of fifteen. A unanimous verdict was reached in twenty-seven minutes.

The verdict was an exceedingly popular one, and the tumultuous applause in court was echoed by the cheers of 3,000 people gathered in the street outside.

Tears streamed down the face of Mr. King, senior, but his son received the decision calmly, and stepped from the custody of the two policemen who had guarded him throughout the three days' trial with drawn truncheons.

His counsel and solicitor were the first to congratulate him. King was joined outside the courtroom by his father and younger brother, and they left the building together by a back exit and drove away in a taxicab without being recognized.

Lord Constable, the judge, in his summing up, commented on the inherent improbability of the alleged crime. "A good many incidents," he said, "showed that King was a person of no moral character, but want of moral courage does not necessarily imply criminal action."

CANADIAN CONTRACT.

Much satisfaction is felt that Earle's Shipbuilding and Engineering Company, Limited, has secured a contract to build four new steamers for trading on the Canadian lakes. The contract will be regarded as a welcome relief from the slackness of work in local shipbuilding, and will provide a considerable amount of employment locally. The ships are to be delivered early next year. Work is to be started immediately.

EARTH SHOCKS ALARM SCOTLAND

Lochaber, in Inverness-shire, in addition to the deplorable weather, which it has shared in common with the rest of Great Britain, has experienced the alarms of an earthquake.

Seismic "disturbances" are not unknown in this district, but on the present occasion the occurrence was more than an earth tremor, for accompanying the reverberation was a sound comparable only to a long-drawn-out moan.

The shock, which lasted about six seconds, wakened many from sleep, buildings and furniture shook, whilst crockery and pans rattled, so that for a time something in the nature of a scare prevailed.

The first tremor was followed by a second after an interval of about a minute, and both appeared to travel in a direction from east to west. The shocks were distinctly felt at Spean Bridge, Roybridge and Gairlochy.

C.G.E. FALTERED IN EIGHTH AND LOSE TO DELORO

Visitors Tie Up Round In a Game Replete With Errors.

OVERCAME LEAD.

Five Runs In Eighth—Deloro Had Eight of Fourteen Errors.

Bob Elliott's Deloro team uncorked a big surprise yesterday at the Exhibition Grounds when they evened up their Intermediate O.B.A.A. series with the Canadian General Electric outfit by beating the Peterboro representatives in a loose but colorful battle by 11 runs to 8.

The surprise was the more complete by reason of the fact that Deloro was without the services of Ada, their crack centre fielder and pitcher, started off by fielding in terrible style and half-way through were behind 6 runs to 1 and apparently hopelessly beaten.

You never can tell in a ball game. In the sixth frame the Generals, who had been travelling very smoothly began to do some wobbling on their own account and four runs put Deloro back in the fight.

It was 8-6 for C.G.E. at the end of the seventh and in order to play safe the Electricians' management yanked "Scotty" Galbraith from the mound in favour of "Jeff" Hardill, victor over the Easterners in the first game of the series on Saturday.

All Jeff got out of the switch was the distinction of having the loss chalked up to him although the fault was not the relief pitcher's. Two errors on easy plays that should have retired the side were followed by three timely hits and another costly error and five runs had been transported over the registering rubber before Hardill could get the side out.

That left it 11-8 with the visitors holding the big end and it remained that way until the finish.

The pitching selection of the two managers was a surprise.

C.G.E. started Scotty Galbraith, one of their left-handed trio, who has not been in action since early in the season.

Deloro with Ada absent and Leal's line of stuff not considered the right brand for the C.G.E. pinned their faith on Johnny Shea their youthful right-hander, who justified his selection by remaining unshaken in the face of miserable early support by his team-mates and finally emerging victorious after going the full route in good style.

The youngster held the Electricians to seven hits and only once did they succeed in getting two in one frame, while he struck out ten.

Galbraith allowed six hits in the seven innings he worked and considering that he was very short of work turned in a good performance.

The fielding of both teams was very loose, but Deloro after a bad start steadied down in the closing frames while the Generals saved their misplays for the last half of the game.

The two best defensive plays were Art Quinn's one-handed stab of a hard-driven ball from Rangers' bat and Bob Ross's running catch of a long foul which he chased many yards and gathered in going at full speed.

An unusual feature was that not a C.G.E. player was thrown out at first base, Schultz's only put out being on a pop fly.

The Scoring.

Deloro started the scoring in the first frame. Schultz singled to right, was sacrificed to second by A. Quinn and scored on Johnston's double to left centre. Boudreau bounded to Galbraith, Johnston going to third. J. Quinn walked and stole second. Ross had Johnston picked off third but McPherson missed the throw. Regan then hit to Galbraith and Johnston was out at the plate.

C.G.E. retaliated with three. Wolfe got on when his roller got away from A. Quinn. McCarney popped to Schultz after Wolfe had stolen second. oWlfe then stole third and Ross walked and pilfered the middle sack. Rose's single down the right field foul line registered the pair, the batter going to second on the throw-in. Dugan hoisted a high one to Shea. Johnston let Ranger's tap to short get away, Rose scoring. Ranger stole second and was left there when Barrie fanned.

In the second Brown lined to Wolfe in centre. Boyce drew a pass but Galbraith set both Shea and Schultz down on strikes.

C.G.E. did no better. McPherson and Galbraith struck out and Wolfe boomed a fly to Boudreau.

Deloro went out in order in the third. A. Quinn bounded to Galbraith, McPherson tossed out Johnston on a fast play and Boudreau's long fly was easy for Wolfe.

The home talent increased their lead. McCarney doubled to left and Ross got a life on Johnston's error. He immediately stole second. Rose fanned but Dugan's sacrifice fly to left scored McCarney. A. Quinn made a one-handed catch of Ranger's hard smash to retire the side.

In the fourth J. Quinn hoisted to Ross. Regan's liner was grabbed by McCarney. Brown singled over second but was forced on Boyce's tap to Rose.

C.G.E. ran their total to six in this frame. After Barrie had fouled to Quinn and McPherson had whiffed, Galbraith singled to right, stole second and went to third on J. Quinn's bad throw. Wolfe walked. When he started to steal second Johnston did not cover for Quinn's throw and Galbraith scored. The ball got away from Boyce in centre field and Wolfe also registered. McCarney fanned.

In the fifth Shea, Schultz and A. Quinn were all thrown out by Barrie.

The homesters also failed to score despite a good opening. Ross started by beating out a roller to A. Quinn and Rose was safe on Schultz's fumble. Dugan flied to Brown, Ranger to A. Quinn and Barrie to Boyce.

Deloro started their drive to victory in the sixth. Johnston was hit and Ranger muffed Boudreau's fly after a run. Quinn moved the pair up with a sacrifice and Regan singled over second to score two. Johnston hit to McPherson who threw past second trying to force Regan who easily scored on the error while Brown reached third. Boyce hit to Barrie who threw home too late to head off Brown. Boyce over-ran first and was tossed out by Ross and Shea's fly was neatly taken by Barrie.

C.G.E. got one back in their half. McPherson walked, Galbraith was hit and Wolfe's single past Johnston filled the bases. McCarney popped to Schultz. Ross forced Wolfe at second, A. Quinn to Johnston, McPherson scoring. Ross stole second but the runners were stranded when Rose fanned.

After Ross had made a great running catch of Schultz's foul and A. Quinn had fanned in Deloro's seventh, Johnston doubled to centre and Boudreau's long two base hit over Wolfe's head scored Johnston. J. Quinn walked but Boudreau was an easy out when he tried to steal third on the fourth one.

Once again C.G.E. increased their lead to two. Shea walked Dugan and hit Ranger. A. Quinn's error on Barrie's rap scored Dugan but Barrie ran Ranger off second and he was run down. McPherson flied to Johnston and Galbraith to Boudreau.

The Big Inning.

With the score 8 to 6 for C.G.E. Hardill went to the mound for the Peterboro crew in the eighth. He started off nicely by grabbing Regan's tap back of the box.

Then the trouble began.

Brown hit to McPherson who threw low to first.

Boyce also rolled one to the third baseman and Barrie dropped the throw to force Brown.

Shea singled to right, scoring Brown.

Schultz caught C.G.E. flat-footed with a perfect bunt down the third base line on which no play was made, Boyce going home with the tieing run while Schultz was safe at first. He stole second and rode in with Shea when Art Quinn doubled down the left field line. Quinn went to third while Rose was tossing out Johnston and scored when Bob Ross made a low throw trying to pick him off third. Boudreau fanned to end the hectic frame.

C.G.E. tried hard in their half to pull off a rally but failed. Wolfe lined to Boyce in centre, McCarney walked. Ross singled to centre and Boyce threw to third to hold McCarney. On Regan's return throw to Quinn at second McCarney was called out. Rose singled past first and stole second but Dugan was called out on strikes.

Hardill fanned J. Quinn, Regan and Brown in the ninth but Shea did almost as well in C.G.E.'s half getting Ranger on an easy fly to Quinn and whiffing Turner and Frost, pinch hitters.

BRADLEY FANS 16 OF COBOURG'S BEST PLAYERS

AT PORT HOPE.

The Curtis Team Win Third Game In Juvenile Second Round.

Allowed Five Hits and Was Well Supported—Score Was 9-2.

PORT HOPE, Sept. 18.— In the third game of the second round of O. B. A.A., Juvenile semi-finals here yesterday afternoon, Maple Leafs of Peterborough decisively defeated Cobourg by the score of 9 to 2. The Lift Lock youngsters got the decision in the first frame when they scored six runs. Bradley pitched a strong game for the Leafs. The fielding features were a pretty catch by Andrews who somersaulted in taking LeBarr's long fly in the third and came up with the ball, and Franks' running shoe string catch of Andrew's hard drive in the seventh. Maple Leafs drove McMahon from the mound with three consecutive singles in the fourth. Grants' drive scoring a pair of runs. Gibson took up the burden and held the Leafs to a run during the balance of the contest.

The Leafs' big innings opened with a pass to Delehaye, who stole second and was hit home by Bradley. Corbett was passed and along with Bradley went home on Franks long double. LeBarr drove Franks in. Le Barr stole second and took third on a passed ball. Scully drove a hard one at Butler who threw to the plate too late to get LeBarr. Gillespie struck out with Sculley on third, Holland lined out to first, Scully scoring on the play. Grant ended it by missing three.

Cobourg put two on in the second with two sharp singles but could not get home. In the sixth, Butler laid down a bunt and made second when Bradley threw wild to LeBarr. Ewing fanned and Houten walked putting two on. Bevan sent up a high ply to LeBarr. Gibson singled into short left to score Butler and Houten.

KING GEORGE 'S JOCKEY

He's an American and 'Is Majesty Likes Him Because He's Up on Art and A ll That Sort of Thing.

GEO. ARCHIBALD ON "LONDON CRY," KING GEORGE'S HORSE.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—To an American has fallen the distinction of being chosen rider of all the king's horses in England.

What makes the distinction more marked for George Archibald, the jockey thus favored by George V., is that he was chosen over the heads of some of the best jockeys in England, including the famous Steve Donoghue.

Between George Archibald and George the Fifth, there is more than the mere interest of owner and rider of horses. Somebody happened to mention in the hearing of the king that the "Yankee jock" was not only a good judge of horse flesh and pace but a better judge of good pictures, besides being something of an authority on scientific subjects.

This contrast to the ordinary type of rider who can talk "horses" tickled the king immensely, and one day he asked to have Archibald presented. They chatted on every subject but racing and shortly afterwards the king arranged for the American to ride his horses. At the recent Goodwin meeting Archibald scored in the royal colors with his mount "London Cry."

Archibald, we'd have you know, has ridden for more crowned heads than any other jockey alive, the king of Spain and the ex-Kaiser being among those whose colors he has carried to victory.

But Archibald thinks King George is more "human" than most royal personages and has the knack of making people feel at ease in his presence.

The two Georges have in common the wish to win an English Derby, and though the king's horse was not good enough this year, they have hopes that Archibald will be more successful next year.

DO YOU KNOW BASEBALL?

BY BILLY EVANS

QUESTIONS.

1. Do the American and National Leagues differ in the interpretation of the infield fly rule? If so, please explain. —F. G.

2. When a ball is batted over the fence, and is fair when passing out of the playing enclosure, does that make the hit a home run or must the umpire watch the ball, judging it fair or foul where it disappears from his view?—R. T.

3. What pitcher throws the speediest ball in the American League, also the National League?—F. H. J.

4. The infield is drawn in for a play at the plate. The umpire is standing about 10 feet back and to the left of the shortstop. Batter hits the ball through the infield, but it strikes the umpire and is deflected away from the outfielder. Two runners are on at the time. The batsman makes a home run. Is the ball in play in such a case, or does the ball become dead the moment it strikes the umpire?—S. S. K.

ANSWERS.

1. The two major leagues now place the same interpretation on the infield fly rule. Base runners can advance on an infield fly as on any other fly ball.

2. Umpire must watch a ball batted out of the enclosure until it passes from his view and judge it where he last sees it.

3. Judging the speed of a pitcher is merely a matter of opinion. Walter Johnson, when right, is perhaps the speediest in the American League. Rip Collins of Detroit is very fast. Dazzy Vance of Brooklyn is regarded as throwing the fastest ball in the National.

4. When umpire is hit by a batted ball, while standing back of the infield, said infield being drawn in for a play at the plate, the ball is in play and runners advance at their peril.

BELLEVILLE WON THE FIRST GAME

Defeated Oslers, of Toronto, By Score of Four To Three.

BELLEVILLE, Sept. 18.—Belleville won first of the O.B.A.A. semi-finals from Oslers of Toronto, here yesterday by score of 4 to 3 in one of best games seen here in many years. Credit of victory goes to the pitcher, Oullette, who held Osler batters hitless for eight innings. He gave wonderful performance striking out eleven batters and issuing only one base on balls. Game was watched by a very large crowd of fans.

Oslers who were favorites, came here confident of victory and that they would connect with Oullettes offerings in every session. They played good baseball but local twirler held them down and with exception of first inning kept them hitless. Oslers used two pitchers, McCay started but was relieved by Spring in seventh after two runs has crossed the plate. Spring finished the game and held Belleville to two scattered hits and one run.

KEEP NAVY SECRETS.

United States Shipyards Now Barred To Outsiders—New Boats Building.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—(Associated Press).—The United States navy has at last come around to the policy generally observed by European nations of strict secrecy concerning implements of national defense. The custom of a hundred years is being set aside in the case of the new mine laying submarine for which $6,150,000 has been appropriated. Beyond the fact that her plans call for width of beam, speed and cruising radius beyond anything known in that type, details of the new submersible are jealously guarded.

No nation among the signatories to the Washington arms convention permits inspection of its navy yards in which construction is in progress upon vessels not covered by that agreement. Heretofore but slight restraint has been imposed by the United States.

Both England and Japan are known to have made great strides in their newest auxiliaries, the British submarine S X-1 having aroused especial comment, although not the slightest detail is known generally of her capabilities. In the case of Japan, it has been said officially that the United States Government is ignorant of the potentialities comprised in her newest cruisers and destroyer leaders.

RESIGNED NEW JOB.

When Friend Wife Flashed a Cheque For $37,000.

DETROIT, Sept. 18.—(Canadian Press).—David Nelson resigned his newly acquired job at the motor car company two hours after his wife excitedly rushed into the plant waving a cheque for $37,000. Nelson had 28 cents in his pockets when he started to work yesterday morning. The cheque was the first payment from the Standard Oil Company on a ten-year lease he gave the company on 50 acres of Mexican land.

In 1912 Nelson was a soldier on the Mexican border with the American army. He had seven comrades, and they often made excursions across the border. They each bought 50 acres of Mexican land for $15. Nelson retained his holding over seven selling their land shortly afterward.

THEFT OF BEADS HEARD IN COURT

Ten Days In Gaol and Fine of Ten Dollars Imposed.

Samuel Rogers, charged in Police Court with stealing a quantity of beads from Archie Mitchell, of 164 Church Street, Toronto, at Peterboro Exhibition, was this morning sentenced to 10 days in jail and a fine of $10, with $13.50 costs. In default of payment of the fine he will spend a further ten days in jail.

County Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K.C., conducted the prosecution, and J. F. Strickland appeared for the defendant.

Williams said he missed the beads on Thursday, and reported the theft to the Exhibition directors. On Saturday he saw some of the beads in Rogers' stall. On his information the beads were seized by Provincial Constable N. F. Maker. They were identified by the complainant in court.

Cross-examined by Mr. Strickland the witness said he did not keep track of the number of beads he passes through his hands. The 14 strings of beads produced in court were worth 75 cents a string, he said.

The witness said he did not know how many beads he had when he came to Peterboro from Toronto Exhibition or how many he disposed of here. The beads he alleged were stolen were displayed openly on Rogers' stand. They were taken during the first night when Mitchell and his wife were sleeping uptown. Some of the beads, he said, were worth $1.25 a string, and the complainant thought about 35 were missing.

Bought From Boy.

Provincial Constable Maker said he was called on Saturday last to the Fair Grounds, where he was informed by Mitchell as to the theft. He found three strings of beads at Rogers' stall. The accused said he bought them from a little boy whom he did not know. Later the accused said he found the beads, of which there were some more strings in his booth.

Rogers, in connection with the alleged finding of the beads, told the constable he thought they were Mitchell's, and if so, Mitchell would claim them when he saw them hanging up. On another occasion he said he bought the beads among a lot of junk he bought at Toronto.

Constable Maker admitted blushingly that he had no person for whom to buy beads. "Of this kind," he added smilingly. Under cross-examination, the constable admitted that he did not warn the prisoner before the conflicting statements were taken, or tell him he was under arrest.

The Defence.

Samuel Rogers, of Longbranch, said he is a carpenter by trade, and follows the Fairs in summer. He is married and has two children.

He first saw the beads on Thursday morning lying on the ground in the midway, he said. These he threw in a box in his stall. Others that he bought from a boy were hung up in his stall.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hatton, he admitted that he had made no attempt to return the beads to Mitchell. Some of the beads he found were his own, he said. He gave them away as prizes.

The beads Rogers had, he said, were purchased from Woolworth's in Toronto through Shark of Wyatt Avenue, who deals in dead stock. The man who was with him, Ruttrell, had a set of scales.

Edward Carroll, employed by Samuel Rogers, said Rogers bought some beads from a boy of 15 or 16.

An order for restitution of the beads was made, and on Tuesday the Magistrate remanded Rogers for three days, saying he would like to hold him until the Lakefield Fair is over. His Worship suggested $10 as a fair recompense for the missing beads, and said if this was paid there was a chance the fine may be light.

A charge of the same nature against Carroll was dismissed.

NUDE ASTRONOMER APPEARS ON STREET

Goes Dippy Pondering Over Mars—Now In An Insane Asylum.

VIENNA, September 18 — His mind unbalanced by excessive pondering on the question as to whether Mars was inhabited, Franz Enterpfarrar, mechanic at the Vienna observatory, walked into the street here yesterday, without clothing, and then jumped on a street car, shouting for a ticket to Mars. He was persuaded that an automobile would get him to his destination in a shorter time, and was removed to an insane asylum.

Even if you not like flowers, the Flower Shower with its many other attractions will appeal to you.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

"THE CAT AND THE CANARY."

The Theatrical Enterprises, Limited, company of players finished their three days' engagement in "The Cat and the Canary," at the Grand last evening, but will return on Monday next in that splendid play, "The Love Test," in which they should be welcomed by a capacity audience. The company's production of "The Cat and the Canary" has proved one of the best offerings seen here for some time. Notable performances were given by Jessica Page, Byron Hawkins, Norma Wendell, Esther Pinch, and other members of the cast, and the acting throughout was of a most pleasing nature. Play-goers are looking forward to the return on Monday of the company after playing the last three days of this week.

"THE FIRST YEAR."

John Golden, producer of "The First Year," is a firm believer in the old adage, "Laugh and grow fat," since the Frank Craven comedy attained its record-breaking run in New York. By actual count there are 488 laughs in this laugh-provoking comedy, and it is estimated that the receipts of the play have amounted to .. thousand dollars for each laugh, thereby giving Mr. Golden a splendid example of the fattening propensities of laughter, especially when applied to the bank account.

Theatrical Enterprises, Limited, will present this comedy at the Grand on Friday and Saturday.

"THE LOVE TEST."

One of the underlying themes in "The Love Test," the attraction at the Grand next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, is the "mother love" of golden-hearted Mrs. Hudson, mother of Tom Hudson, the hero of the play. It is her faith devotion and belief in God that keeps her own son in the right path, and rescues his chum, an ex-convict from a life of crime.

The joy of the play is not only in the main plot. It can be found in the love-making of Florence Lee, a chorus girl, and "Freddie Tryon," the reformed crook; in the character drawings of the people who inhabit the small town in which the action takes place, in the wonderful silences that convey more than words can express, and cause a tightening in the region of the "adam's apple," with perhaps a tear, and wiped away the next second by a laugh or a smile; in fact in every scene and situation. It is one of those plays we never tire of seeing, for it is a single human story, full of comedy and tugs at the heart strings. In its three acts, there is never a line or situation to bring a blush to the cheek of a wife, sister or daughter, but it breathes an atmosphere of youth and happiness blended with good, old-fashioned honesty and high ideals.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"THE COVERED WAGON."

One of the greatest photoplays ever made, will be the popular verdict when the motion picture public sees James Cruze's colossal Paramount production, "The Covered Wagon," which will be the feature at the Capitol Theatre today, Friday and Saturday. That is the prediction made not only by Mr. Cruze himself, but by those who have seen the picture and who hail it for its bigness, impressiveness and extraordinary realism.

Perfect realism, a strong love theme, tremendous dramatic action, thrills that are utterly unlike the ordinary sort; a background of real newness to the screen, where the camera has never before been ground; all these facts, coupled with the splendid cast of virtually 3,000 men and women, certainly indicate a picture that is worthy of any director's enthusiasm. And James Cruze is enthusiastic. He has believed in the picture from the start and with each day of shooting, sometimes under conditions almost unbelievably difficult, his enthusiasm has grown. Nor is he alone in his belief, for every person in the drama of the old time western days shares his convictions.

The story with the vast sweep of the western plains for background, across which wind the "covered wagons" with their human freight, is essentially good picture material. The plot is dramatic with the interest well sustained, and the story unfolds like a stirring panorama of an earlier day.

The theme deals with the adventures of a gallant young officer of the American army forced by a rival's enmity to clear his name of an undeserved stain, that of being a cattle-thief, and to win his bride under heavy difficulties. J. Warren Kerrigan is the man, Lois Wilson, the girl, and Alan Hale, the scheming villain. This trio does the major part of the acting, and to them, along with the director, goes the credit for this superb production. Others in the cast are Charles Ogle, Ernest Torrence, Tully Marshall, Guy Oliver and John Fox.

The action is exceptionally thrilling, the incidents being dramatic and impressive. These include the fording of the Kaw River by the wagon train, the Indian attack and massacre, the prairie fire, the buffalo hunt, the fierce battle between Banion and Woodhull, the parting of the trains and tragic death of Woodhull. The action is speedy and thrilling.

AT THE REGENT.

MANY FILM STARS PLAY IN "DESIRE."

Metro Picture of Society Life Has Unusually Strong Cast.

Marguerite De La Motte, John Bowers, Estelle Taylor, David Butler, Lucille Hutton, Edward Connelly, Ralph Lewis, Vera Lewis, Russell Simpson and Chester Conklin head the cast of "Desire," which is now playing to the Regent Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Several hundred people appeared throughout the picture and there are several sets of unusual size and beauty.

"Desire" is heralded as one of the best of the recent society dramas that have appeared on the screen. It is from an original story by John B. Clymer and Henry R. Symonds and was made under the direction of Rowland V. Lee, one of the brilliant group of young men who are classed among the leading directors. In addition, "Desire" boasts an all-star cast in every sense of the word. Every one of the players mentioned above has appeared in leading roles in the films.

"Desire" is a brilliant expose of the inner secrets of high society. Immense wealth, the marvelously beautiful and luxuriant homes, the ways and pastimes which are the daily existence of this set—these things are all vividly portrayed.

"Desire" is a Louis Burston presentation through Metro. George Barnes was the cameraman and J. J. Hughes was art director.

AT THE ROYAL.

RACING LIFE PICTURED IN ROYAL PLAY.

Excellent All-Star Cast Puts Over "Riders Up" Big.

"Riders Up" latest Universal all-star picture, began its screen showing in the Royal Theatre to-day, and more than lived up to the expectations that had been aroused by advance notices of this picture story of life around a race track. This holds true for the types pictured which are ture to the "tout" specie.

Creighton Hale convinces those who have formed the opinion that a race track tout is beyond the pale, so far as unselfishness is concerned, as did George Cooper, taking the part of "Jinx" Jackson, Johnny's pal in good times and in bad.

It is probable that many among the spectators, the men at least, have had occasion to remember gratefully some "Mother Ryan," the boarding-house keeper played by Kate Price, long a screen favorite.

Her kind heart led her to provide food and a bed for youths far behind in their bill. Others prominent in the all-star cast are Robert Brower, as General Jeff, Civil War veteran, who peddles papers, and Ethel Shannon, as Peggy, daughter of Mother Ryan.

Adapted from the Red Book magazine story by Gerald Beaumont, "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," it tells the story of a youth who has become a race track tout and strives to make enough money to return home and visit his widowed mother and his sister. Comes the day when the horse wins, and Johnny bids his friends good-bye. General Jeff, however, begs Johnny to take him to the track, saying that the next day he will realize his long-cherished desire to become the inmate of an old home.

Johnny learns that the old man has based his hopes on the fact that he has placed his last dollar on a horse, which, if it wins, will provide the necessary money. The horse loses—and Johnny's visit home must again be postponed.

There is a pretty love theme running through the story, and some fine wholesome comedy, as well as some genuine pathos. Irving Cummings directed the picture which was made in Tia Juana. It is undoubtedly his best since he made "Fools Highway." There are some great racing thrills as atmosphere, and the situations move with a simplicity and clearness which is always interesting.

AUGMENTED ORCHESTRA AT ROYAL TONIGHT.

Music lovers, and everyone who appreciates real music when they hear it, will have a treat in store for them to-night at the Royal. Additional instruments have been added to-night, the occasion being the Peterboro premier showing of Gerald Beaumont's great racing story, "Riders Up."

PRINCE PLANS A VISIT TO STATES

This Will Enable Him To Become Better Acquainted With Country.

SYOSSET, N.Y., Sept. 18.—(Canadian Press).— Prince of Wales is anxious, it was learned, to return the United States at later date to visit the great industrial centres and farming communities, to become acquainted at first hand with industrial conditions and to meet United States working men and women. The Prince has long meditated such a trip and the project has grown in his mind as a result of the numerous invitations he has received this summer from all parts of the North American continent. Showing that a tour of industrial exploration would be as welcome to his hosts as to him.

Although the Prince's present visit has been almost entirely a holiday one, it has been pointed out by those who have known him in Great Britain and this country that during his stay on Long Island he has made many interesting acquaintances and above all he has met the President and several cabinet members personally.

The contemplated tour of factories and farms would be similar to the one he has made in the industrial cities of Great Britain, since the war when he spent long periods going through workshops and talking with the people employed in them.

THE TORONTO DEBT.

Annual Report Finance Commissioner Shows Satisfactory Conditions.

TORONTO, Sept. 18.—(Canadian Press).—The City of Toronto and its various commissions handle almost $100,000,000 a year, according to the annual report of George H. Ross, finance commissioner of this city. The finance commissioner's report, which was made public today, says the city is in a sound financial position. The debt is large but the greater portion of it is self-sustaining.

Interest earnings on bank deposits, as shown in the report, have satisfactorily increased during the past four years. In 1911 the amount was practically negligible, and last year the total was approximately $400,000. The interest paid to banks in 1913 was over $600,0000, but this has been reduced until there has been no interest at all in the past two years.

With regard to sources of taxation in Toronto, the finance commissioner notes a decline in the construction of wealth-producing buildings. Although new buildings to the value of $135,000,000 were erected in this city from 1919 to 1923 the wealth-producing buildings — factories and industrial plants—upon which the continued prosperity of any city depends, represented a negligible amount of this new construction.

ADVERTISE IN THE

CROWN CLOSED EVIDENCE IN THE SMITH TRIAL

Judge Coatsworth Reserves Decision on Shaver's Motion To Dismiss the Defendant.

SMITH ON STAND.

TORONTO, Sept. 18. The crown today closed its case against Ocean C. Smith, former chief accountant of the Home Bank of Canada, who is on trial before County udge Coatsworth on charges laid under the Bank Act.

G. N. Shaver, counsel for the defendant immediately moved for the dismissal of the charge against Smith on the ground that the crown had failed to make out a case but on suggestion of Judge Coatsworth, the trial Judge, the evidence for the defense was proceeded with, the judge reserving his decision as to the counsel's right to argue at a later stage that the charge should be dismissed.

It is not considered probable that the trial will be concluded this week. Ocean G. Smith went on the witness stand to testify in his own defense just before the noon adjournment of court.

A. B. Barker, curator of the Home Bank was one of the last witnesses called by the crown.

A. Barker, Manager of the Toronto Clearing House and Curator of the Home Bank, after it suspended was the first witness called to-day.

"When did the Bank suspend," he was asked, "August 17th, 1923.

"What have you to say about the banks condition.' "The profits and the rest fund had disappeared," was the frank reply, and he added that they had probably gone long before the bank closed its doors.

He conceded to Gordon Shaver that Smith had helped all he could, while the Banks affairs were being probed.

"Was his conduct that of a man trying to hide anything," "No," said Mr. Barker.

"Did he act like a guilty man."

Crown Counsel objected to a question on the mental attitude of a man and the judge said the question must cover only the outward acts and conduct of Smith.

"Did he act as if he was expecting arrest," "No," shouldn't say so," laughed the witness.

But Mr. Barker would not admit telling Smith that there was nothing in his report which would bring about his arrest," 'You told him he had your sympathy."

"That is hardly evidence," said the Judge. "He has your sympathy and mine and that of every man, I should think."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

September 18th., 1924.

To Editor, The Examiner,

Dear Sir,—In last night's Examiner appears the continuation of Mr. Denne's serial, to which each few evenings he appends his name.

I am willing to admit that this last letter was better written for Mr. Denne than some of the previous ones.

Respecting new public works, which Mr. Denne thinks should be constructed, I might say that this is quite contrary to the policy of his Leader, the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, who has declared not only once, but many times, that only under most exceptional and pressing needs should new works be constructed, while necessary repairs and renewals for the purpose of preserving property, should be carried out until the Budget balances, and we are able to meet, annually the interest on our national debt, and the cost of administering the affairs of the country.

There seems to be considerable reason for Mr. Meighen's suggestion, but I quite appreciate that this would hardly appeal to a pork-barrel philosopher.

I really do think it does hurt Mr. Denne's feelings, to find that I was honoured by a Government, of which I was not a supporter, with an appointment as one of His Majesty's King's Counsel; but I cannot help that, because the recommendation was made by a Committee of Judges of the Supreme Court, who probably had a somewhat better idea of my qualifications than Mr. Denne.

Mr. Denne need not worry about my failing to explain my activities, when the proper time comes. That will be very thoroughly done.

I am sorry to ruffle Mr. Denne's feelings to the point that forces his friends to write peevish letters, to which he appends his name; but he has not contradicted what I said was the issue, and that is, that he deliberately and wilfully misrepresented, and mis-stated my position, to an audience in Norwood; and that the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, had refused to sanction Mr. Denne's scheme of re-distribution, but had taken exactly the opposite position, and every Conservative member of the re-distribution Committee, had supported Mr. Meighen, and turned down Mr. Denne's proposition.

I further said that the Hon. H. H. Stevens, one of the Conservative leaders at Ottawa, moved in absolute opposition to Mr. Denne's plan, that Douro, Otonabee and Lakefield be added to West Peterborough; and I declared that the fair inference was that the Conservative leaders at Ottawa, knowing Mr. Denne, paid not attention to him, chiefly because of the fact that they did know him.

I would like to assure Mr. Denne, when he speaks of challenges, that when the time comes for my meetings to be held, I a going to tell the people who the real Mr. Denne is, so there will be no mistaken ideas in the minds of the public, as to how vulnerable Mr. Denne's position in the community is.

Yours truly,

G. N. GORDON.

SAY COVENANT NOT COMPLETE

Urge To Supply Gap In the Drafted Treaty Ignoring Domestic Jurisdiction.

WILL PERMIT WAR.

GENEVA, Sept. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Replies from the various Governments as to what they could do in a general contribution of action under sanctions, to come into play against any state adjudged an aggressor are likely to form one of the chief features on the agenda of the proposed International Conference on Disarmament.

The article in the protocol drafted by Dr. Benes of Checho-Slovika concerning application of penalties is quite general in its nature and many of the delegates think it will be necessary to obtain from each Government some concrete outline of what it will offer economically, financially or militarly in any emergency. It is argued such assistance would provide something definite for a disarmament conference to work upon and give more rational basis for possible agreement on the reduction of armaments.

The sub-commissions to-day continued their detailed examination of arbitration clauses in the proposed protocol and gave particular attention also to the examination of measures to be adopted while arbitration proceedings are going on between the affected states.

The plugging up of every hole in the covenant of the League of Nations so that nobody can crawl out and have an excuse to start a war is a picturesque phraseology now used in Geneva to describe the efforts of statesmen and jurists to construct the protocol which will really make for peace.

Paragraph eight of Article Fifteen of the covenant declares: "If a dispute between the parties is claimed by one of them, and is found by the Council to arise out of a matter which, by international law, is solely within the domestic jurisdiction of that party, the Council shall so report and shall make no recommendations as to its settlement."

Everybody regards this as negative and as leaving a hole in the covenant which must be plugged.

DELORME TRIAL TO CONTINUE

Premier Taschereau and the Cabinet Refuse To Intervene.

QUEBEC, Sept. 18.—(Canadian Press).—The Government of Quebec has nothing to do with Rev. Adelard Delorme in the matter of another insanity test. All that remains to be done is to have him stand his trial. This statement was made last night by Premier Taschereau in answer to a story emanating from Montreal to the effect that the Provincial Cabinet would decide today whether or not Abbe would undergo another examination to decide his mental stature.

Premier Taschereau characterized the story as a "bedtime" one, and Abbe will stand trial for the murder of Raoul Delorme at the present session of the King's Bench.

After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. H. E. Connolly, to the immediate relatives and friends.

HAIR WAS BOBBED.

After That Girl Became Hard To Handle, Says Mother.

MONTREAL, Sept. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Recently bobbed and shingled hair and burning envy of her older sisters' clothes and beaux, the former combination that proved too much for a fourteen-year-old Montreal miss and landed her in the cells at the Juvenile Court yesterday, facing charges of vagrancy and of desertion from her parents.

"She had never been the same since I allowed her to have her hair bobbed three weeks ago," her mother said in court yesterday afternoon.

"She ran away because she was jealous of me," claimed an older sister.

"I ran away because I am sick and tired of being bossed and because I am never allowed to go anywhere with boys or wear nice things," the child asserted. "If they don't treat me any better when I go home again I will run away once more," she warned.

HUNDREDS SEARCH LONELY BUSH ON DUMMER'S NOTORIOUS 9TH LINE FOR OLD MAN MISSING TEN DAYS

Henry Hughes Disappeared During Afternoon of Sept. 10—Wife Denies Quarrel.

CALLED IN NORWOOD AT DARLING'S HOTEL?

Old Woman With Reputation as Clairvoyant Failed to Assist Posses.

FAMILY DIFFERENCE

Hughes Wished to Buy a Dog But Wife Objected—Had $7 Cheque.

In the wild country bordering the ninth line of Dummer, nine miles from Norwood, hundreds of men have been searching without success for Henry Hughes, 74 years old, who disappeared from his home under mysterious circumstances on Wednesday, September 10. The expert guidance of Provincial Constable N. F. Maker and the hints of a clairvoyant have been equally unavailing in the effort to trace the aged man. His wife, 73 years of age, a daughter of the late Robert Metcalfe and a sister of James Metcalfe of Asphodel, is prostrated at her home. The couple eloped together over fifty years ago.

The last time Henry Hughes was seen was about four o'clock on Wednesday last week, when he left his home and walked over the knoll under which the house nestles. He was following his daily routine of bringing in the cows.

The time cannot be accurately fixed, for Mrs. Hughes told the Examiner yesterday that her husband had a way of moving the hands of the clock forward an hour or so if he wanted a meal early, and she cannot tell whether it was four o'clock or earlier.

Sitting on a kitchen chair in the barely furnished living-room of her home and drying her eyes occasionally with the edge of her blue apron, the old lady pathetically denied allegations that she had quarrelled with her husband. He went out in his usual way, she said, and she watched him till he was out of sight. He had no money, she thought, although he may have had $7, the proceeds of a cheque he cashed two weeks ago. He did not give the money to her.

Looking backward to the time recalled by the picture of her bridal party in Toronto a half century ago, Mrs. Hughes ridiculed the idea that her husband voluntarily left her. Keen of sight and hearing, she gave the impression that she was the manager in the household, and intimated that her husband was weaker for his age than she. Not until yesterday did the strain effect Mrs. Hughes' activity, but yesterday she was relieved of the housekeeping duties by a visiting daughter, Mrs. Hugh Little, Lakefield, and a sister, Mrs. Herman Rosene, 690 Ross street, Peterborough.

Walked From View.

Mr. and Mrs. Hughes took up residence in their present home seven years ago, and eked out a precarious existence from one hundred acres of boulder-strewn land unfit for agriculture. Five cows supplied milk to sell, and a few hens scratched their meagre livelihood by the roadside. Tamarack and pine cut by Mr. Hughes kept the house warm in winter, and here the simple needs of the family ended.

Neighbors heard the sound of cowbells about the time Mr. Hughes reached the bush on the evening he disappeared, so he had evidently stirred some of the five head before they were allowed to wander off again without the old man to drive them. When he failed to return Mrs. Hughes went off into the

Million Germans Idle Many In the Rhineland

BERLIN, Sept. 19. —The number of unemployed in Germany, including the occupied territories, now totals 1,000,000, of which 540,000 are drawing doles, according to the latest statistics compiled by the Ministry of Labor.

Hope is expressed in official quarters that, with the revival of industrial activities in consequence of the effectuation of the Dawes plan and the restoration of German economic unity through the abolition of the Rhineland customs barrier, the present unemployment figures will decline rapidly.

VICTORIA DRYS ARE ORGANIZED

Newton Small Elected Chairman at Lindsay—Flavelle Urges O. T. A.

COULD BE IMPROVED

LINDSAY, Sept. 19.—The temperance forces of Victoria County have organized their forces for the coming liquor referendum and have elected Mr. Newton Smale chairman, Rev. Gordon Holmes secretary and H. S. Johnston, treasurer.

Mr. J. D. Flavelle, formerly chairman of the Ontario License Commission, was one of the speakers at the organization meeting. He expressed his faith in the Ontario Temperance Act as by far the best temperance legislation Ontario has ever enjoyed, not by any means perfect, but capable of being amended and enforced, to more completely curtail the evils of the liquor traffic. The proposed alternative, Government control, he characterized as indefinite, and did not promise an improvement on the present legislation.

In conversation with a former official of the Citizen's Liberty League it was announced that a branch of the Moderation League would not be organized in the county, but that quiet, effective work would be undertaken by those opposed to the temperance legislation.

An advance plan preceded the air Magelenes in landing. Their appearance over the city was a signal for all the whistles to sound a welcome, and as the three planes appeared out of the north the immense crowd that packed the field burst into cheering.

GIRL ESCAPED FROM CAPTORS

Says She Was Thrown Into Automobile—Ran Out of Gasoline.

REACHED HOME LATE

LONDON, Ont. Sept. 19.—(Canadian Press).—A dastardly attempt to kidnap pretty Leda Smith, who lives with her father and mother near Newbury was frustrated by the young lady herself who valiantly fought her woman captor and escaped by hiding in a tree while the two men had thrown her into their automobile were away looking for gasoline.

The affair which has stirred the village of Newbury from its accustomed calm occurred Wednesday night and had its inception in front of the village post office.

The girl accompanied by her parents drove into Newbury Thursday morning at 9:30 and told the story of the daring attempt to Reeve Holman, who immediately got in touch with High Constable Wharton here.

Accosted By Stranger.

"I came into the village last night," related Miss Smith. I was standing in front of the Post Office when a man came up to me and said 'Miss Smith——'. 'I said, 'Yes,' and me told me a friend wanted to see me.'

"He handed me a note from a friend which asked me to go to the station. I was going to the station and he said would drive me over in his car."

"Just when we got to the car, he and another man threw me into it and before I knew it I was being taken away from the Longwood's Road."

"The car ran out of gasoline and after a talk with a woman who was in the car, the men went away to get some gasoline. I was pretty desperate and I knew my only chance to get away from them had come. I fought with the woman as well as I could. I scratched her and punched her with all of my force and finally I broke away from her and climbed out of the car."

Escaped in Dark

"I ran down the road and I was just in time for the men were coming back. They all three gave chase and I ran into some woods and climbed a tree. It was pretty dark, thank goodness, and they didn't see me. May be they didn't think of looking in a tree for me."

"Finally they went away, but I didn't climb down for a long time afterwards, I was too scared. I didn't get home till one o'clock this morning and I'm just about all in right now. That's about all I can tell you about the matter. It all seems like a nightmare to me now, but it was very real at the time."

PRINCE VISITED WALL STREET; SAW HIS FIRST BASEBALL GAME

His Third Trip to Manhatten Spent in the Financial District.

THE USUAL CROWD

Traffic Detoured on Busy Street — Was Shown Transcontinental Telephone Office.

NEW YORK, September 19. — America's financial heart, Wall street, skipped a few beats yesterday, at the sight of the Prince of Wales.

Seemingly everybody in the busy money market dropped all the cares of business to have a look at Prince Edward. Police reserves from three precinct stations devoted a great deal of untiring effort to make it possible for the Prince to get in and out of the staring crowd that welcomed him to Wall street.

It was another busy day for the Prince on his third Manhattan visit since he arrived here for his holidays. The private programme included luncheon in the financial district, an inspection of the plant of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, a motor ride through Central Park and a baseball game, the first he has ever seen.

Crowd all Set.

Any hope that he might escape the public notice on his third New York visit was quickly dispelled, after the Prince's trip carried him into Lower Broadway, at about one o'clock in the afternoon. The news of his impending visit had leaked out and filtered into every office of lower Manhattan's colection of sky-scrapers.

When the royal car swung into position before 60 Broadway a horde of men, women and children, the clerks, stenographers and the ubiquitous office boys of the nation's money makers—swarmed about. The police were unable to do anything in the face of the cheering, swarming crowd. Two traffic policemen rushed up, and had to devote their efforts to assisting the Prince's staff in keeping the mob from engulfing the automobile.

It looked as though it would be impossible to clear a lane to the office building doors, so the Prince, after his first moment of surprise, stood up in the tonneau, lifted his grey hat, smiled a rather embarrassed smile, and executed a series of bows in recognizing the ovation.

Mostly Feminine.

It was decidedly a feminine crowd. There appeared to be 10 women and children to every man, all of them using their elbows to force their way towards the car. In the crowd were many of the country's financial kings, gazing at the future King of Great Britain.

Four additional uniformed companies arrived ultimately, and made a path to the door. The Prince was quickly hustled into a private elevator and taken up to the 19th floor, of the offices of the North American Company, where he met Harrison Williams, the president of the board. The Prince was Mr. Williams' luncheon guest in an intimate nook of the Recess Club, on the 21st floor of the sky-scraper.

The crowd did not disperse, standing about to await the Prince's return, until reserves arrived and then blocked off the neighboring streets.

Traffic De-toured.

All traffic had been detoured, and even the street cars could not operate along Broadway from Bowling Green to Wall street. The Prince was taken from the building through a rear entrance, and then to the telephone company's mai office at 196 Broadway. On the third floor he was shown how transcontinental telephone connections were put through. He asked many questions as he was shown about and evinced most interest seeing the operators take his photograph and transmit it by wire.

Returning to his car, the Prince saw a small street urchin standing on the rim of the machine's spare tire, an attendant aimed a dive for a dirty-faced youngster, but the Prince restrained him. "Let him stay," he said, smiling, and the gamin grinning widely at the royal sanction, continued his precarious feat, until the car reached the Chelsea Hotel on 23rd street.

Here the Prince greeted the members of the British Apprentices' Club, and talked with some of them for several minutes.

Off to Polo Grounds.

Then the Prince left for the polo grounds. As the car swept into Eighth Avenue, a large heavily-set man at the curb straightened suddenly, clicking his heels, and snapped out

Woman Aviator Ties Ten Men In Eleven-day Test

PARIS, Sept. 19. — Mme. Boland, most prominent of French women fliers, finished the eleven-day "tourist-airplane" competition in a tie with ten male aviators.

She covered the distance of 1,300 miles in eighteen flights half way around France, but is entitled only to fifth place in the competition because of the difference in her plane's motor power and weight carried.

All the winners had comparatively small motors averaging under fifty horsepower and all averaged about sixty miles an hour.

CROSS ERECTED ON MOUNT ROYAL

Commemorates First Recorded Visit of Jacques Cartier Up St. Lawrence.

WILL BE LIGHTED

MONTREAL, Sept. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Towering high on the eastern ridge of Mount Royal, the steel framework of the huge cross to be erected by the St. Jean Baptiste Society has just been completed, and the structure now is beginning to take permanent shape around which the stone edifice is to be raised.

Victor Morin, president of the St. Jean Baptiste Society, stated yesterday that he could not definitely give the date when the cross would be finished, but reported that work was progressing slowly and satisfactorily.

The lighting of the cross will not take place for some time. Electricians, however, are now at work on the wiring and the plans for illuminating will adjust themselves as the cross nears completion.

The edifice is to commemorate the first recorded visit to the mountain of Jacques Cattier the celebrated French explorer and discoverer, which took place during one of his visits here during the sixteenth century, when he erected a wooden cross on the approximate site of the present structure. Cartier at that time took possession of the mountain for France, naming it Mount Royal.

The site of the new cross was solemnly blessed on St. John Baptiste Day, June 24th last by Mgr. Deschamps, at an impressive ceremony on the mountain top.

31 WERE KILLED.

And Injured Were 115 In Indian Trouble.

SIMLA, Punjab, Sept. 18. —Foreign Secretary Bray declared to-day in the legislative assembly that the latest information from Kohat, north west frontier province, indicated that 31 persons had been killed and 115 injured during the rioting September 9 an 10. The latest list of casualites is six policemen injured, twenty Hindus killed and eighty six injured and eleven Moslems killed and twenty three injured. The city is now quiet.

The origin of the rioting at Kohat was ascribed to the circulation of a pamphlet which was declared to have been considered insulting to the holy places of the Moslems. Military assistance had to be summoned to quell the disturbances.

HOSE SCATTERED JOBLESS CROWD

Swarmed About Factory Gate in Montreal Where Help Was Wanted.

NEARLY A RIOT

MONTREAL, Sept. 19.— A very near riot took place early on Thursday when several hundred men tried to get into the plant of the Dominion Glass Company, where it was announced help was wanted. The plant has been closed down for several weeks.

A crowd gathered in front of the plant, when the gate was finally opened the waiters found to their chagrin that former employees were given preference while others were kept back by the watchman on duty.

Those in the rear of the crowd, becoming impatient as they saw men passing through to the desired goal, commenced pushing and the men closed in more closely about the entrance to the property.

The high fense around the property threatened to give way beneath their pressure.

It was a critcal moment that, after several warnings, fire hose kept in the plant was brought into action. In the hands of the watchman it was played over the outer fringe of the crowd and soaked and spluttering men scattered in every direction.

SHIP TO VANCOUVER.

And Price of Grain Two Cents Above Fort William's.

CALGARY, Sept. 19.— Effective on Thursday, the grain trade here started to base grain prices, so far as No. 1, No. 2, and No. 3 Northern wheat are concerned, on Vancouver values and this will be continued as long as there is any advantage to be gained in shipping to that market.

The first concrete result of the change was an advance of the wheat prices, quoted on above grades, of two cents. The adjustment to a Vancouver basis rather than at a Fort William basis will mean that Alberta farmers will realize more for their wheat so long as the western market is available.

LIFE.
Is what you make it. Neglect often makes it dull. Especially when you fail to heed the warning from 'heavy' aching eyes. Showmen Unblushingly Call Their Prizes Junk

Most people who join the jostling throngs at Fall Fairs to wage war with the booth keepers for prizes given the successful pitcher of balls or thrower of quoits will be surprised to know the standard set on the prizes by the showmen themselves.

In police court here, Samuel Rogers of Long Branch, who operated a game at Peterborough Exhibition, threw an interesting sidelight on the question. When he runs short of prizes so anxiously sought by fair visitors, he writes an order to Mr. Shark, of Wyatt avenue, Toronto, for so many dollars worth of "JUNK." Mr. Shark understands that prizes for the gullible public are desired and sends Mr. Rogers a box of dead stock obtained from the Woolworth five and ten cent store.

The unsaleable or out of date stock from a "five and ten" is wagered for at ten cents a throw, and the man who wins a prize goes away from the fair grounds as proud as possible.

NEW SPIRIT IN THE DOMINIONS

But British Colonial and Foreign Offices Show Ignorance of It.

THOMAS BLUNDERS

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Sept. 19.—(Canadian Press Cable, via Reuter's).—In a leader on Imperial policy, the Cape Times refers to the "transformation" in the spirit which lives within the constitutional structure of the British Empire, brought about by the war, and says that, unhappily, the Foreign Office and the Colonial Office have both proved, in the last few months, that they are almost incredibly ignorant of the results of the war and the consequence of the peace treaties upon the feelings of the Dominions.

"The Dominions branch (of the British Government) is stuffed with men who have no personal knowledge of the Dominions and their people," says the Times. The paper, continuing, asserts that J. H. Thomas (British Colonial Secretary) could not have made such a series of lamentable blunders in taste and tact during his hasty visit to the South African Union as he did make if the Dominions branch had provided him with the brief he had a right to expect from it.

The Cape Times declares that possibly Thomas will realize this utter ignorance of the Dominions which obtains in his department and that there may at last be an authoritative move in the Colonial Office towards a reform for which the represenstatives of the Dominions have pressed again and again at Imperial conferences.

The Cape Times also refers to the Anglo-Canadian correspondence before the Lausanne Conference, and says that the moral of the whole business seems "to us to be that real knowledge of the Dominions is now essential in Downing Street, in the Foreign Office, no less than in the Colonial Office, with a corollary of knowledge of British policy and the British constitutional system in the Dominions."

SHANGHAI ARMY REVOLT CAUSES ALARM IN CITY

War Council Decides to Continue Defense—Volunteer Corps Called Out.

"GREAT DISASTER"

Third Army Guarding Chekiang Province Revolted—May Be General Retreat.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 19—(Canadian Press).—The expected general retreat of the Chekiang forces toward Shanghai, made almost inevitable by the revolt of the Chekiang third army, had not developed up to 2 o'clock this morning.

A special war council of Chekiang leaders at their Lungwha headquarters was still in session early this morning. A spokesman said it was their intention to continue the struggle against the Kiangsu armies seeking to capture Shanghai. They admit, however, that the revolt was a "great disaster."

Divisions Desert.

The announcement of the revolt followed several hours of unconfirmed rumors that two divisions of the Chekiang second army conducting an offensive on the west side of Tsi Lake had deserted, resulting in the breaking of the Chekiang line near Ihing by the Kiangsu forces and the evacuation of Hangchow.

Rolling stock on the Shanghai-Hangchow railway, it was rumored, all was moved off toward Shanghai when the troops evacuated the city. How far the Kiangsu soldiers had advanced on the "western" front was not stated. The municipal council last night officially ordered the wholesale arrest of all suspected dangerous characters in the settlement. The order was issued after refugees again began entering the settlement by the hundreds, as they did at the start of hostilities, seeking protection under the flags of the powers.

Volunteers Mobilize.

News that the new Liuho attack has started, together with the consistent character of the unconfirmable rumors, raised to a point of general alarm the already tense nerves of the international settlement. The Shanghai volunteer corps, a foreign organization, was ordered mobilized at 10 o'clock last night.

Army Revolted.

The Chekiang third army, assigned to guard that province against invasion while the first and second armies fought off the Kiangsu army attacking Shanghai, has revolted, Chekiang headquarters admitted last night.

In the meantime Kiangsu started a new offensive against Liuho, the key position on the Yangtse estuary, 30 miles north-west of Shanghai.

AGAINST MANCHURIAN.

PEKING, Sept. 19. — (Canadian Press).—The Chinese Central Government yesterday officially declared its intention of suppressing Chang-Tso-Lin, hostile Manchurian War Lord, by force.

A WOMAN COLLAPSED.

Struggle Over Possession of a Toy May Have Resulted In Death.

TORONTO, September 19. — A struggle between two children for the possession of a toy, may have been the indirect cause of the death early this morning of Mrs. Elizabeth Elliston, aged 73, a widow living with her married daughter, Mrs. Bertha Pettit, at 43 Booth avenue.

It appears that the dead woman's grandson was quarreling with the son of a neighbor, and that Mrs. Elliston intervened to take the boy home. A witness reports that an altercation ensued in the course of which the neighbor slapped the woman on the face and neck.

Mrs. Elston returned home, and shortly afterwards complained of illness, and suffered a partial collapse. Around midnight however the deceased collapsed again and on the arrival of a doctor the woman was pronounced to be dead.

WORKERS FORM COMPANY

Proletariat Films Will Depict Life Among Germans and Russians.

TORONTO, September 19. — It is very seldom that the word "company," used in the capitalistic sense, is found on speaking terms with the soap box orator's beloved "Proletariat," but that has not prevented the formation of the Canadian Proletariat Film Company, which proposes to use the motion picture as a medium for "the portrayal of working class conditions in Russia and Germany," to read the phraseology of an announcement read by Secretary James Watt at last night's meeting of the District Trades and Labor Council at the Labor Temple.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Reception To Missoinaries Home From the Formosa Mission Field—Personals.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 19. — A very enjoyable time was spent in the Sunday School-room of St. Andrew's Church on Thursday evening, when the members of the congregation met to enjoy the presence of Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Williams, missionaries on furlough from Formosa, who are supported by St. Andrew's Church. After an opening hymn and prayer, words of welcome were extended to them, on behalf of the session and congregation, by Mr. C. L. Owen, senior elder, and Mrs. Robt. Bell in a few well-chosen words, welcomed them on behalf of the Women's Missionary Society.

Mr. Williams gave a very vivid description of their trip over, which they started on five years ago last September 16th, 1919, sailing for Tamsui in Formosa, which is their headquarters. He also told of his work there and of its success. Mr. Williams sang the hymn, "There's a land that is fairer than gold" in the Chinese language.

Mr. W. Henson and Miss Hazel Atkinson favored the audience with solos.

Two tables were filled with curios brought over from their field of labor, and Mr. Williams spent some time in explaining these. All had the privilege of examining them at the close of the evening.

Several of the curios were given Mr. Williams by a man who had been a sorcerer for twenty years, and when he became a Christian he gave them all up, including a book of charms which he had used.

The young ladies of the Mission Circle served the refreshments.

Mr. E. C. Dolman palyed several piano selections during refreshments as well as the accompaniments for the soloists.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams enjoyed an hour of visiting with the members of the congregation. Mrs. Williams will speak to the W.M.S. of St. Andrews and also to the W.M.S. of the other churches who have been invited, on Saturday afternoon at half past three p.m., and also to the Sunday school on Sunday morning at ten o'clock.

Mr. Williams will preach in St. Andrew's church both morning and evening.

GERMANS.

For the first month since 1921 Germany admits that she had a foreign trade surplus in July. Exports exceeded the imports by four and a half million dollars.

This is not a big sum as such things go, but it is important because it may be the turn of the tide. Only by selling more than she buys can Germany pay reparations on any large scale.

J. J. DUFFUS RECEIVES LETTER FROM PREMIER

Expresses Appreciation of Liberals' Effort in Local Picnic.

Mr. J. J. Duffus recently received the following letter from Premier King:

Dear Mr. Duffus:

Permit me to express to you, and through you to the officers and members of the Liberal Association at Peterborough the great satisfaction I experienced during my visit and in the outstanding success of the meetings held both in the afternoon and evening.

I realize how much is owing, in this connection, to yourself and other members of the Executive and friends, and am therefore sending this line just to express a word of appreciation of all the kindness and courtesies extended from all sides.

I believe the meetings and the attendance were not less appreciated by our Liberal friends generally throughout the Province, than by those who assisted so enthusiastically in making the gatherings the success they were.

With every good wish,
Believe me,
Yours very sincerely,
W. L. MACKENZIE KING.

PTINCE VISITED

a military salute. The Prince saw him:

"By George," he said to Captain Lascelles, "By Jove, there is a British soldier," and he returned the salute.

The chauffeur "stepped on it," and few recognized the royal visitor until the cars was under trees, though two girls in a sporty runabout spied the Prince and took up the chase. The little car got up close to the Prince's expert chauffeur, who lost the pursuer in the traffic, as he emerged from the park.

The Prince arrived at the gate as the pennant-chasing Giants and the Cincinnati Reds were going into the third innings, and took a seat directly behind the first base.

DURANT SMASHES WALL STREET FOR THIRD FINANCIAL COME-BACK

Lost Fabulous Fortune In General Motors—Ability Is Respected.

WIZARD OF FINANCE.

Wall Street Watching Him Closely—Began With Capital of $2,000

W. C. DURANT.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19. — Fear, caution and suspicion—but mostly fear—that's how Wall Street viewed William C. Durant, the auto king, four years ago. Then, in 1920, the smash came.

The Du Ponts and the Morgans took over the interests in General Motors. His fabulous fortune, estimated variously from $50,000,00 to $100,000,000 crumbled. He was considered broke.

Wall Street smiled a self-satisfied smile. These upstarts must be kept in their places.

Four years have passed. Durant seemingly passed out of the picture. He was almost unheard of. But quietly he was mapping his campaign. Recently he considered himself ready. Then he came out in the open.

A series of smashes and assaults on Wall Street followed. Durant cleaned up $10,000,000.

Third Comeback.

Again fear his crept into the marrow of Wall Street bones.

Again Wall Street is watching him cautiously. For the rumour is that Durant has only started. And Wall Street respects his ability.

Durant has "come back" three times. He is 63 and is considered a Wizard in high finance.

He was born in Boston. When he was nine he moved with his parents to Detroit, which was to become the automobile center of the world. A few years later he established his home in Flint, Mich., where he began his long business career.

At 17 he was still a clerk. At 21 his natural organizing ability began to show and he organized the Durant Dort Carriage Company with a capital of $2,000. In 1924 he organized the Buick Motor Company. He built only 16 cars the first year.

Organized the G. M. C.

It was not until 1908 that Wall Street heard of W. C. Durant. Just before the panic had spent its course he organized the General Motors Company, putting into it the Buick-Company, the Cadillac (for which he paid $5,000,000 cash), the Oldsmobile, Oakland and several others.

Wall Street saw his company developing fast. It was a lucious melon and they longed to sing their teeth into it. They did.

Within two years he lost control of General Motors when he was forced to sell five-year notes in the Street. His company had expanded so fast he needed additional capital and needed it madly. There was only one place to get it.

But he maintained his stock interest and when the notes were paid off he had himself re-elected chief executive of the company.

His fortune accummulated. He was riding on the crest of the wave. Then the smash and four years of silence.

Now Durant is back—for the third time—fighting harder than ever. And Wall Street is afraid.

RICH AMERICANS PUZZLE OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE

LONDON, Sept. 19. —Americans are always welcome at Cambridge and Oxford Universities, according to their officials, but the sons of wealthy Amercans, who seek to enter merely for pleasure, without any desire to study, present an embarrassing problem.

There would be plenty of room for as many Americans as wish to come to London or other English Universities, they say, but this particular class is attracted by the glamor of Oxford and Cambridge, and nothing else.

HUNDREDS SEARCH LONELY BUSH

bush as far as she dared and shouted to her mate. Until late into the night she kept up her search, and then called her neighbor, Mrs. Hanan. Only this family and Richard Lindsay, an Indian, live near the scene of the mysterious disappearance.

Search parties were organized and the bush land scoured in every direction. All night and all next day, and every day since, large parties have combed the rough country. On Sunday over two hundred men lined up on the road and advanced, ten yards apart, straight into the bush. At times crawling on their hands and knees, and often hidden from one another, these volunteers from bush and farm and village went straight ahead for miles, searching every cranny and looking under every bush. Yesterday there were a dozen car-loads of men still searching, and a truck-load from Norwood was early on the job. Constable W. D. Lennox of Norwood was prominent in leading the search.

Volunteers have carried on the hunt with remarkable pertinacity, considering the apparent hopelessness of the task. Almost impenetrable bush is encountered throughout the section. Moss-covered rocks simulate recumbent bodies. Pits and trenches are treacherously covered by sticks and leaves. Grapevines and creepers form a labyrinth through which it is impossible to keep direction, and ferns and rank weeds add to the general difficulties in searching one of the wildest sectors in Central Ontario. Sound, too, is deceptive in this maze of forest and rock. Cowbells, appearing only a few yards away, lure the unwary searcher from a path which he may never regain, the sound thrown from rock to rock by weird echoes. Criss-cross paths that promise to lead out of the bush wind in never-ending circles, and forked paths, unseen when going north, appear unexpectedly when returning south and lead from the travelled trail into unknown waste land.

A fearsome enough place in midday with the sun to guide, the man who becomes lost there near nightfall would have a harrowing experience.

Today the grass is beaten down by the feet of searchers, and the hard ground showed no trace to the first seekers of the path the old man took when he started to drive home his five cows.

Feared the Bush.

Henry Hughes was nervous in the bush, his wife said, and was never known to leave a path. On more than one occasion, when the cows had wandered into the bush, Mr. Hughes had given a neighbor boy five or ten cents to bring them out, while he remained on a trail. The effect on such a man of becoming wandered in so unwholesome a place would be disastrous.

In addition to the danger from wandering until exhausted, the missing man faced the menace of a bottomless swamp a few miles from his home. The morass is called Rotten Lake, doubtless having been named before it developed its present treacherous covering. As a test yesterday, a twenty-foot pole was thrust straight down in this swamp near the edge, and failed to touch bottom. When the top of the pole was just level with the water it was sucked under by the undertow.

A Second Theory.

Despite the denials made by Mrs. Hughes, it is believed by some, notably Mrs. Little, that Mr. Hughes left home deliberately after a quarrel with his wife. In support of this theory it is pointed out that for some days previous to his disappearance Mrs. Hughes had missed articles of food from her larder, and he may have been hoarding these for his getaway.

That there was a slight difference just before her husband left home on the fateful evening is admitted by Mrs. Hughes, who, however, minimizes its importance. Mr. Hughes had wanted to buy a dog from a neighbor, but Mrs. Hughes would not give him the $10 he required. He brought the would-be vendor to the house to endeavour to persuade his wife to part with the money. "I couldn't have a dog here and starve myself to feed it," she explained to the Examiner. "He would have tired of it in a few days and sold it for fifty cents, like he has done before. He wasn't cruel. He liked dogs, but he tired of them quickly. I have my cows to feed and I have to get enough for myself."

Even if Mr. Hughes had secured some food and had overcome his fear of the bush sufficiently to enable him to run away, he had very little money on his person and only wore his working clothes. He left his overcoat at home. The only money he could possibly have, Mrs. Hughes avers, is $7, the proceeds of a cheque dated August 29 which he did not hand over to her. Mrs. Hughes said her husband did not do any more work than he was compelled to do and stayed in the house most of his time.

Seen in Norwood.

A remarkable corroboration of the theory advance by Mrs. Little and others is the testimony of Basil and Kathleen Darling, son and daughter of Albert P. Darling, proprietor of Darling's Hotel in Norwood. These young people declare positively that they saw Mr. Hughes in the hotel pool-room at 5.30 on the evening he disappeared from his home. At that time he wore an overcoat and carried a parcel.

Miss Darling, a girl of about seventeen, is particularly certain that she is not mistaken. She had often served the missing man with meals in the hotel dining-room, and actually talked with him on the night he left home. He entered the hotel parlor and asked for the proprietor. On being told that Mr. Darling was asleep, Hughes turned and walked out. Darling, in his room upstairs, recognized the voice as that of Hughes, he thinks.

Henry Hughes was remarkably active for his years, and a fast walker. It is suggested by some that he might have walked to the village in the two hours or more, supposing his own clock to have been advanced an hour, but where he went from there is a mystery. He was well known in the village, being a regular visitor to sell eggs, and would have been recognized by someone if attempting to leave.

Clairvoyant Sees Him.

Mrs. Booth, 80, a crystal gazer and reputed clairvoyant living near Marmora, was called upon for assistance and gave an accurate description of a location she had never, so far as is known, seen. In the depths of her crystal, she said, she saw a man lying in the open southeast of the Bickell camp on the Finlay Company timber limits. The location was searched without result, but other suggestions made by the clairvoyant are being followed out.

A remarkable instance of the powers possessed by Mrs. Booth and one which went a long way towards persuading sceptics of the authenticity of her claims, was given during an audience with some of the searchers. "There are a lot of people searching today," she said as she gazed in her crystal. "I see a man standing on the roof of a house signalling to the others with his hand." On returning to the Hughes home, ten miles away, the men who had interviewed Mrs. Booth learned that there had indeed been a man on the roof signalling to the searchers in the surrounding bush.

On another occasion Mrs. Booth told her visitors "the man on the grey horse came very near Mr. Hughes."

Have Large Family.

Mr. and Mrs. Hughes have a family of eight, four boys and four girls. They are as follows: Mrs. Hugh Little, R. R. 2, Lakefield; Mrs. William Williams, Vancouver, B. C.; Mrs. David Williams, Swift Current, Sask.; and Mrs. William Coffy, Swift Current, Sask.; Joseph Hughes, Dearborn, Mich.; William Robert Hughes, Roche Plains, Sask.; Alfred James Hughes, Regina, Sask.; and George Henry Hughes, Carlton, Ont. A sister of Mrs. Hughes, Mrs. Herman Rosene of Peterborough, and a brother, James Metcalfe of Asphodel, were with her yesterday.

Foul Play Hinted.

While it seems scarcely probable that anyone would do away with the old man for the $7 that he is supposed to have carried, such a possibility is being investigated by the police. The ninth line of Dummer is as notorious as Lucan and Biddulph, and the police are not overlooking the unsavoury reputation the district has gained, in common with all other sections of the bad lands, in the criminal courts.

THE WORM HAS TURNED; SHORTAGE OF TENANTS.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Free occupancy until October 1 is offered by owners of apartment houses on the near north side of Chicago, because the building of many new flats has caused numerous vacancies. Rental leases usually are made in October and May.

Instead of the usual $10 to $15 rent advances during the winter months, some cuts of $5 and more are being made, the newspaper says. In the "Bohemian" quarter, unfurnished rooms, labelled "studios," are at a premium at $50 a month, basement rooms are full and there are no attics to be had.

Yale has started a "communications course."

Snowy Table Linen

The pure lather of Sunlight Soap cleanses the clothes naturally, NOT chemically. The $5,000 Guarantee of Purity is stamped on every tablet of Sunlight Soap.

OF all things, table cloths and napkins benefit most from the mild, cleansing Sunlight bath. An ordinary washing wears table linen out even more than table use. How different the Sunlight way! Just soak the clothes, after rubbing lightly with Sunlight Soap, and all dirt is loosened, all grease dissolved—and this without any grinding rub on the wash board. Then you rinse and the dirt just runs away. Result: freshness, purity and snowy cleanliness.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1924.

A CHANCE FOR THE BOY.

The appeal of the Ontario Government for the assistance and co-operation of Rotarians and Kiwanians and members of other service clubs in connection with the new institution for the promotion of welfare work among delinquent and neglected boys, is one that should be sympathetically received.

The farm at Bowmanville where such boys are to be taken care of will be an ideal place for such work.

Cottages are to be erected with comforts and conveniences for the inmates. Bathing facilities, a central dining-room, a school to educate the boys not only in public school subjects but in high school work as well, and a carpenter shop and other departments of training will be provided.

Nothing will be omitted that will add to the efficacy of the plan, and the potentialities of such a method of dealing with handicapped boys are obvious.

The Government is wise in seeking the co-operation of such organizations as the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs.

The further the Bowmanville farm gets away from the Government-run idea the better will be its chances for successful work.

It is a splendid effort, deserves general support and promises to earn rich dividends in making useful and contented citizens out of youngsters who have hitherto not had a chance.

THE FLOWER SHOW.

The Flower Show, under the auspices of the Peterborough Horticultural Society, which was opened in the Armouries last evening, will come to a close tonight, and the attendance should be such as to leave no doubt as to the financial success of the event.

The show, which contains a striking display of flowers by amateur gardeners, children and adults, as well as splendid exhibits by professional florists, who, of course, are not competing for prizes, is full of interesting features, and as a spectacle and an entertainment is well worthy of popular support.

And, in addition to the merit of the attraction itself, there is the added incentive that attendance at the Flower Show means financial assistance for that organization that has done so much to add to the beautification of the city—the Peterborough Horticultural Society.

It seems scarcely necessary to point out what the society has accomplished in the face of the indifference of a very large proportion of the population.

Its annual competitions have inspired many citizens to pay more than the usual attention to the care of their lawns and gardens, with results that have been distinctly pleasing.

Its efforts to improve spots that were formerly an eye-sore have been equally successful.

The society is doing a community work of undoubted value and deserves a much bigger membership.

Citizens can, however, make up for their neglect of this organization by providing a large attendance at the final session of the Flower Show tonight.

THE ISSUE IS CLEAR.

The issue upon which the people of Ontario will vote next month when the O. T. A. plebiscite is submitted is clean-cut.

Some fault was found by Prohibition leaders because the Premier did not see fit to announce in making his statement in regard to the plebiscite that in the event of the present Temperance Act being sustained the Government would strengthen its weak spots and afford a vigorous enforcement of the measure.

This omission has been rectified by Mr. Ferguson's letter to Rev. Dr. T. Herbert Moore, Secretary of the Ontario Plebiscite Committee, in which he expresses surprise that this question should be raised, and points out that if the people vote for the continuance of the Ontario Temperance Act the Government will treat it as any other piece of legislation, will strengthen any weaknesses that may be revealed from time to time and "give it active and vigorous enforcement."

The fight is now on with the issue sharply defined.

The people know just what their votes will mean.

If the majority favour the Ontario Temperance Act that legislation will not only continue in force, but will be further strengthened by the Government and vigorously enforced.

On the other hand, if the larger proportion of the votes are marked in favour of the second question, the Government will establish a system of Government sale o fbeer and liquor.

There is no room for any misunderstanding.

PETERBOROUGH WAS RIGHT.

Chief Constable Dickson of Toronto informed the Board of Control on Wednesday that twenty miles per hour was much too high as a limit upon motor vehicle speed in the Queen City.

The Chief Constable's experience in dealing with motor accidents has forced him to the conclusion that the present limit is entirely excessive and should be lowered in order that public safety be protected.

Yet it was only a session or two ago that an amendment sponsored in Peterborough and originating from local bodies designed to change the speed limit to fifteen miles an hour in cities and towns was laughed out of court by the committee of the Legislature which discussed it.

And the leaders in the onslaught were the Toronto members of the Legislature, who declared that fifteen miles an hour might be fast enough in Peterborough, but it was ridiculously slow for Toronto.

The result was that the amendment was laughingly snowed under.

Apparently, in the opinion o fthe man who is in the best position to judge, namely, the head of the Toronto Police Department, the Peterborough amendment was sound, and the Queen City members who killed it, with the assistance of other legislators from urban centres, were entirely in the front.

To sanction a limit of twenty miles under the traffic conditions that exist in Toronto and other large cities is to invite accidents, and there are always plenty of motorists willing to take advantage of such a generous limit.

A WISE DECISION.

President Coolidge has taken the path of wisdom in his action halting the plans to elevate the big guns of the American fleet, says the Montreal Star. When the proposal was first made, it will be recalled, criticism on the other side of the Atlantic was withheld, pending expert consideration. Later, a formal protest was lodged by the British Ambassador at Washington against the proposal as being contrary to the spirit and understanding of the Washington disarmament agreement. This protest was taken under advisement by the authorities at Washington, but no public statement was made as to their opinion regarding the point it raised.

It is now made quite clear that, while the United States does not abandon its claim that under the treaty it is entitled to elevate the big guns, yet the President has abandoned the plan to ask Congress for an appropriation for this purpose, because he realizes that such action on the part of the American naval administration would inevitably lead to competitive action of some sort, and thus would involve additional expenditure upon naval forces which it was the specific object of the Washington Conference to obviate. The President's active intervention in the matter will be regarded as additional proof not only of his friendly feeling towards Great Britain, but of his determination that no action shall be taken by the United States during his administration that could be construed as indicating an intent to augment the American naval forces and thus foster competitive expenditure among the naval Powers of the world. It makes for a strengthening of the Anglo-American Entente upon which, in the last resort, the peace of the world depends.

LEOPOLD, LOEB ET AL.

"The most lawless nation in the world" is an indictment levelled at the people of the United States by Judge Alfred Talley at the Court of General Sessions in New York City. In inducting a new member of the Bench Judge Talley said:

"One of the things that you will come to learn is that you have come on the bench of the greatest criminal court in the world, and the oldest court of any kind in the United States, at a time when this country is suffering under an indictment which proclaims it to be the most lawless on earth.

"You will find that the United States must plead guilty to that indictment."

He proceeded to expand his remarks by some statistics on the subject of murder in the United States as compared with other countries. His figures were taken chiefly from a recent tabulation prepared by Frederic L. Hoffman, statistician of the Prudential Insurance Company, in which he set forth the homicide record for 1923, Judge Talley summarizing it as follows:

"This table is the most amazing murder record for any civilized country for which the data is available. It indicates a state of affairs so startling and of such significance that no Government, Federal or State, can rightfully ignore the situation. Compared with the beginning of the period, the murder deathrate has practically doubled in 24 years."

The figures of Mr. Hoffman point out that in the United States last year there were approximately 10,000 murders, or about 100 to every million of population. Contrasted with this figure was the record for England and Wales in 1923, which showed 200 murders, or at the rate of about four deaths per million from murder as against 100 per million in the United States. In Scotland the ratio of murder was even less, for in a population of about five million there occurred but 18 deaths from homicide, or at the rate of about three and one-half per million. In Canada last year the ratio of murder to population was only a trifle higher than in England, namely at the rate of five homicides to a million of population. Thus in our own English-speaking country contiguous to the United States the murder rate is only about one-twentieth of the rate among our neighbors.

These are interesting facts coming close on the heels of the practical escape from punishment of Leopold and Loeb in Chicago, two of the most cold-blooded murderers of whom there is any record in the history of humanity. Judge Talley does not mention these men nor make any reference to their case, although his address came subsequent to their trial. He merely attempts to explain in general terms the reasons for the extraordinary prevalence of crime in the United States. We may say, by the way, that statistics show it is not merely in the matter of murder, but of all crimes of violence and even of theft that the United States is infinitely worse than any other country of the civilized world. Judge Talley attempting to give explanations, says: "What we need here is justice that will be prompt, adequate and final." Consider the case of Leopold and Loeb in this connection. They committed their crime, one absolutely without provocation, cause or mercy, utterly deliberate, utterly vile, they were discovered and arrested almost at once, they speedily confessed, yet it took nearly four months to enable a conviction to be registered against them. In Canada or in England, the same thing would have taken but a few days. Even those who are opposed to the principle of capital punishment must realize that even the sentence of imprisonment for life with which Leopold and Loeb escaped came three months too late.

Judge Talley complains that the root of the trouble in the United States is what he calls "the apathetic attitude of the people toward the strict enforcement of the laws and the punishment of the criminal, and second the unwillingness of the people themselves to respect and obey, the law of the land, and to train the children of the country to obedience and respect to their lawful constituted authority." Of course, that is so; and, of course, there will be no improvement in the ways of justice in the United States or in punishment of criminals until the more decent sort of people there move in real earnest to promote the more rapid administration of justice. As for us in Canada the moral seems to be to use all possible vigilance and resolution in supporting vigorous and prompt and impartial administration of law, and incidentally being very careful how we interfere with the principle of capital punishment so long as we maintain every safeguard for only its just use.—Ottawa Journal.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, September 18. — With cattle sales on Wednesday at the Union Stock Yards of 1411 sales for the three days totalled 8165 head and receipts for the week were 8528. The market will be cleaned up to-day except for some stockers held by the specialists. This morning's receipts were only six cars, 44 cattle, 27 calves 206 hogs and 3 sheep and lambs. Any butchers on sale to-day held quite steady and medium butchers were if anything a shade firmer. A mixed bunch of these were sold to Gunns at $5.75 a cwt.

Two loads of heavy steers remained in one of the alleys not being badly wanted by the exporters. Rogers & Maybee shipped out 1300 cattle this week and are carrying 200 towards next week's shipments, and they will require around 1200 in addition to these. A few 120-lb. steers sold to-day at $6.10 and a fair quantity of handyweight heifers at $5.75 a cwt. Butchers cows were steady. One good cow brought $4.75, and good mediums were $3.60 and $3.65. Neil Coutts bought a load of stockers over 800 lbs. at $4.30 a cwt.

The calf market closed the week a little easier. The Buffalo market was also down a half dollar a cwt. During the week about 1000 calves have been brought here and shipped to Buffalo. Top calves are worth 11 to 11½ cents a pound. Heavy fat calves are not much wanted and sold at 5 and 5½ cents.

Packers made the week-end lamb market 11c a pound, and are still hankering for lower prices. There were no fresh lambs in to-day. Heavy sheep sold at 5c a lb.

There is a firm bid of $9 a cwt. f.o.b. on hogs, and some of the best selections are going at $9.25 a cwt.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—(Canadian Press). — Broad new demand for corn sprang up yesterday, following Wednesday's big collapse in prices. A forecast of cooler weather with a possibility of frost over Montana and Wyoming did a good deal to stimulate new buying. Closing quotations for corn were strong, 1 cent to 2½ cents net higher, December 109 3-8 to 109 1-2. Wheat closed firm, 1 1-4 to 2 1-4 cents up; oats at ½c to 1c gain, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to a rise of 25c.

Buy Coal Now!

Nature Study

You have to hand it to Old Man Squirrel for being a true exponent of the Doctrine of Preparedness. He doesn't wait until the nuts are all gone or covered up with dead leaves or snow, but puts in his Winter supply in the Summer and early Fall, when they are plentiful and easy to get. Then, when cold weather comes, he just grows a heavy coat of fur and takes life easy, secure in the knowledge that, come what may, he's sure of three square meals each and every day.

If the lowly little squirrel sees the wisdom of preparing for shortage in time of plenty, what excuse can humans offer for not putting in their Winter supply of coal now? Good Coal is cheap and plentiful now and, even though there be no strikes next Winter, coal will be scarcer and higher. Car shortages, bad weather, increased demand and transportation tie-ups will make it so.

DISTRICT MEET THE DAUGHTERS OF THE EMPIRE

Seventy-five Delegates From All Parts of the District In Cobourg Yesterday.

WAR MEMORIAL.

Large Sum of Money Still To Get For the National Memorial.

COBOURG, Sept. 19—The seventh annual District Rally of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, was held in Cobourg yesterday. There were about seventy five ladies present. Mrs. Spragge, regent of the Cobourg Chapter presided. The two sessions morning and afternoon were held in St. Peters Hall.

The morning session opened at eleven o'clock with the I. O. D. E. prayer followed by the Lords prayer.

The minutes of last year's Rally, held at Port Hope, were read by the District Secretary, Mrs. D. L. McLaren of Peterborough.

Mrs. Burkholder of Hamilton, Provincial President, and Miss R. M. Church of Toronto, First Vice-President of the National Chapter, were visitors and were on the platform with the Presiding Regent.

The reports from the different chapters of the district were given by the different delegates, as follows:—Peterboro, three chapters, 57th chapter, Delegates Mrs. Jamieson; Otonabee Chapter," Delegates, Mrs. W. Wrightman; "Peter Robinson Chapter," Delegate Mrs. D. L. MacLaren. Cobourg Chapter, Delegate, Mrs. D. B.McGuire. Norwood, 40th Northumberland," Chapter, Delegate, Mrs. B. W. Squires. Hastings, Chapter, Delegate, Mrs. Walter Fowlds. Campbellford Chapter, Delegate, Mrs. A. Haig. The Port Hope Chapter, "Col. Arthur Williams," sent their report through Miss E. M. White. Madoc, "Moira Chapter," sent a report through Mrs. F. E. Jenkins.

Havelock's "Harry Lauder," Chapter, report sent by Miss N. Haig. Several of the chapters did not send in reports. Those given were very encouraging and all showed a very great interest in the work of war memorials, several places already have theirs and the others planning to have them in the near future. Cobourg expects to have their monument unveiled some time in November.

Mrs. D. L. McLaren of Peterboro was again anpointed District Secretary on motion of Mrs. Clegg and Mrs. Stenson of Peterborough.

Shortly after 12 o'clock luncheon was served in the lower room of the hall by the ladies of the Cobourg Chapter, after which all enjoyed an hour of rest and recreation.

The afternoon session opened at two o'clock with a beautiful piano duet by Mrs. J. J. Kerr and Mrs. Arnold Staples of Cobourg, followed by kind words of welcome from the Regent on behalf of the Cobourg I. O.D.E. to the visiting ladies, to which Mrs. Birdsall of Birdsall, in well chosen words, replied.

Mrs. Burkholder of Hamilton, Provincial President then gave an address, most of which pertained to the business side of the work of the National and Provincial Chapters. She asked that every chapter endeavour to send in something for the completion of the "National War Memorial," of the five hundred thousand dollars needed for this; there is still left a balance of one hundred and thirteen thousand dollars to get.

She spoke of a plan being started to have a silver anniversary in February.

Words of appreciation for the Ontario government were spoken, for the framing of the war pictures. Ontario is the first province to complete the sending out of these pictures for the schools.

An appeal was made for the "Echoes," asking that the secretaries send in reports of what is being done in each Chapter, thus helping the smaller chapters in their work.

Special mention was made of the Provincial meeting to be held in London, on October 30 and 31, 1924, and Mrs. Burkholder urged that each chapter send a representative. She closed her address by sending a message of best wishes to each chapter. This splendid address received hearty applause.

Miss R. M. Church of Toronto, 1st Vice-President of the National Chapter, was the next to address the meeting. She said she liked the word Rally as it brought to mind the bringing together of the colors. The greatest scheme of the I.O.D.E. is the National War Memorial.

There are three important factors, the Bursaries for the sons and daughters of disabled sailors and soldiers. The War Memorial Pictures and Education, the grandest gift that mortals could give to those of our own country.

She read a letter from a student at Oxford, who said that he hoped all these students, thus helped would do their best to make themselves fitted to help the British Empire go forward.

She spoke of one young girl especially who won a scholarship thus enabling her to attend university. She told of the beautiful work done by the disabled soldiers, showing their genius and latent talent. One third of the C.E.F. have gone to the United States for a livelihood as they have no chance of getting employment here. This Empire has been made by sacrifice and as Canon Scott said, "We should never forget the great sacrifice of our soldiers. Miss Church recited the following beautiful words by Canon Scott:

"May the ears of Canada never be deaf to the plea of the widow and orphans and our crippled men, for care and support. May the eyes of Canada, never be blind to the glorious light which shines on our national life from the deeds of those who counted "life not dear unto themselves."

May the lips of Canada never be dumb to tell to future generations the deeds of heroism which will kindle the imagination and fire the patriotism of children yet unborn."

Miss Church also spoke of the Soldiers Comfort and the work of the blind.

This splendid address was heartily applauded.

The presiding Regent made an appeal to the chapters to get their Christmas cards that were made in Canada or England.

The audience enjoyed another instrumental duett by Mrs. Kerr and Mrs. Staples.

The ladies of Peterboro extended an invitation to have the eighth District Rally next year in Peterboro.

Mrs. [illegible] Donald, a member of a [illegible]apter at Edmonton, was [illegible] upon to say something [illegible] the work of the order in the west.

The hope of the British people is in the Canadianizing of the younger generation of the foreigners in the west.

There are great opportunities also.

She told of an instance when two hundred women miles away in lonely places, were entertained by ladies in Edmonton for a week. During the months of isolation this made them more ready to brave the lonely days. They also sent papers, magazines and books to the lonely settlers in the West. One person had written, "The world seems to be forgetting what we have done, but the last ones to remember are the Daughters of the Empire." If we all pull together we can make these foreigners British subjects.

A hearty vote of thanks from the Conference was tendered the speakers, and all who took part in the programme, on motion of Miss Eyre and Mrs. W. H. Dundas, of Cobourg. The Thursday in the third week in September was decided upon for the date of the district rally, on motion of Mrs. A. Hay, Campbellford,and Mrs. Joseph Mills, Peterboro.

The Regent of Cobourg Chapter asked that each Chapter, for the next few years, take orders for the work done by disabled soldiers and the blind. The Provincial President will plan to have an exhibit of the different articles at the convention in London.

A resolution, moved by Miss Kerr of Cobourg, and seconded by Mrs. W. Fowlds, Hastings, that a request be sent to the Ontario Government, through the National Chapter, asking that the grant that was cut off this year for the Soldiers' Comfort be re-established again.

The singing of the National Anthem closed the seventh District Rally of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire.

All the ladies were invited to afternoon tea before returning to their homes.

SHOOTING ACCIDENT.

The Gun Discharged While Thomas Sumner Was Getting Over Fence.

NORTH MONAGHAN, Sept. 19.—While out shooting in Harper's Woods yesterday afternoon, Thomas Sumner, 103 Rubidge Street, had the muscles of his right arm torn away when the gun discharged while getting over a fence. Miss Evelyn Jay rendered first aid, and Sumner was removed to Nicholls Hospital in the ambulance. Aid was also rendered by the C. N. R. sectionmen who were nearby.

A DISPUTE SETTLED.

Ontario Railway and Municipal Board Settled Matter.

BRIGHTON, Sept. 19.— In the dispute between Brighton Township Council and Andrew Coulter in regard to a bridge which Coulter secured a petition from some fifty ratepayers to have the Council build to enable him to reach a twenty acre field, and which the Council thought required too large an outlay in such an isolated place, they estimatein the cost at $400.00 while Coulter offered to build it for $200.00.

Things took a turn unexpected by the plaintiff and petitioners when the Council referred the matter to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board.

The petitioners when signing thought they were doing a neghbourly turn trusting that the Council would throw the matter over and there the matter would end as far as they were concerned. After the Board examined the premises they awarded the plaintiff $200.00 and relieved the corporation of all future liabilty.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto Montreal--Winnipeg

day was quiet, the demand from foreign buyers for spring wheat grades was small. The tone of the market was firm.

The market for winter flour was without any new feature to note, prices being well maintained. The tone of white corn flour was firm.

The trade in millfeed here yesterday was dull, which was attributed to the fact that Ontario millers were offering to sell at lower figures than those quoted by local sellers. A fair business was done for country account. The market for standard grades of oats was firm.

A steady trade continues to be done in baled hay, and the market was moderate active with a good undertone.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 19. —(Canadian Press).—The wheat market displayed a firm and stubborn tone yesterday, and while prices within narrow limits were mostly above previous close and final quotations 1¼ to 1 7-8 higher. Weather continues fine throughout the West. In coarse grains, oats steady, barley strong and rye firm and a little higher. Flax again a little easier. Cash market very dull, displaying a re-actionary tendency.

HASTINGS WON GAME.

Colborne Provided the Opposition—Played a Good Game.

HASTINGS, Sept. 19.— Colborne and Hastinsg met on Wednesday afternoon in one of the most exciting baseball games of the season. Hastings won by a score of 15 to 11. Coyle of Colborne handled the game behind the bat while C. Varcoe of Roseneath acted as base umpire.

The game was called for 4 o'clock but the visitors were late and the game was delayed until about 4.45 p.m. The score in no way indicated the play. Stevenson pitched his usual good game for the home team with many strike outs to his credit.

Ross was good for the visitors and was replaced in the seventh by Miles.

The first of the game was all for the visitors when they scored three runs to the locals one.

The locals score remained the same when in the sixth innings eight runs were credited to them. The remainder of the game was even play on both sides.

Much credit can be given to Varco in handling the bases as he did, being fair to both sides. Varco is an old Roseneath ball player and knows the game thoroughly.

Darkness falling, the visitors stopped the play in the last of the ninth innings, with Hastings to bat, three bases full and one man down. The score:

Colborne ..... 0 1 0 0 0 8 0 0 2—11
Hastings ..... 3 0 0 4 3 0 3 2 0—15

The teams —Colborne — Pitcher, Ross; Catcher, Mayhew, 1st base, Wilson, 2nd base Miles, 3rd base Billcox, right field Delaney, left field, Bartlett, centre field, Hawkins short-stop, Ives.

Hastings — Pitcher, Stevenson, catcher, Scriver, 1st base Herrington 2nd base, Cruikshanks, 3rd base, A. Lemorie, short stop, Collins, right field, Keogan, left field, P. Lemoire, centre field, L. Lambert.

ACQUITTED OF MURDER.

Mrs. Helen Gilbertson, Haldimand County, Charged With Slaying Husband.

CAYUGA, Sept. 19.—(Canadian Press).—For the third time in about a quarter of a century, Haldimand County jury yesterday acquitted a woman on the charge of murdering her husband. After deliberating on the evidence for four hours, the jury in the Gilbertson murder charge trial at Cayuga informed Mr. Justice Kelly it had found Mrs. Helen Gilbertson not guilty on the charge of poisoning her husband, George Gilbertson, on June 22nd last.

Mrs. Gilbertson, who appeared confident and cheerful during the four hours the jury was out, received the verdict quietly. When the Judge discharged her she stepped lightly from the prisoners' dock, and, walking over to the jurymen, shook each man's hand.

SOLD OUT STORE.

Postmastership at Codrington Changes Hands With Store Business.

CORDINGTON, Sept. 19.— Mr. Mowat Austin who has run a general store here for the past 14 years has sold out to Mr. Foster of Picton who takes over the business next week.

Mr. Foster also takes over the Postmastership from Mr. Austin. Mr. Austin is moving to Toronto where he is running a rooming and house.

Toronto Police Changes.

Chief Inspector Promoted To Be Deputy Chief.

TORONTO, Sept. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Robert J. Beatty, chief inspector of the Toronto Police Force, was yesterday afternoon appointed Deputy Chief of Police, succeeding T. R. Geddes, who retired recently on a pension. Inspector John Pogue succeeds Mr. Beatty as Chief Inspector. The Board of Police Commissioners also appointed five new inspectors, nine sergeants, one detective sergeant, and eleven patrol sergeants.

WORKMAN A DIRECTOR.

Assistant Foreman Elected to the Board of Procter & Gamble.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Clifford Wimmer, an assistant foreman in the oil refinery plant of Procter & Gamble, soap manufacturers, has been elected by the employees of that company to serve on the company's board of directors for a one-year term. He had the highest number of votes in a field of five candidates, all employees.

The new director will attend all board meetings as a direct representative of the workers, following the plan inaugurated six years ago whereby employee representation on the directorate was made a part of the company's industrial relations programme, which also included profit-sharing, insurance, sick benefits and guaranteed year-round employment.

Wimmer is 31 years old and lives in Norwood, Ohio. He has been in the employ of the Procter & Gamble Co. since 1912 and started as a laborer.

THE FORDSON TRACTOR is absolutely indispensable at this particular time for the following reasons:

1. You have been unable to keep up with your work as you would like to have done.

2. Grass and weeds of all kinds are particularly bad, on account of so much wet weather.

3. The Fall is late and a Stiff Tooth Cultivator or Tandum Disc will solve the problem of first plowing in a reasonably satisfactory manner.

4. When the days are hot and the flies are bad, when most can be accomplished, the tractor is at its best.

5. For many reasons land requires much more cultivation than heretofore, without which the growing of good crops is impossible.

6. Power on the farm is becoming more and more an important factor.

Spirits Responsible For MacLaren's Ill Luck, Say Islanders

TOKIO, Sept. 19.—Ill fortune, which attended the attempt of A. Stuart MacLaren, British round-the-world aviator, and his companions to fly across the remainder of the globe after leaving Japan, is attributed by the natives of Urup Island, one of the bleak Kuriles, to the airman's own indifference to evil spirits.

When Major MacLaren's big Vickers amphibian hopped off from Toshimoye, Yetorofu Island, one day in July, with Paramushiru Island, at the north of the Kurile chain, as his goal, fogs and wind compelled him to land at Totokan Bay, on the southwest coast of Urup Island. The bay is exposed, and when the wind rose Major MacLaren flew his plane a short distance inland, alighting on a body of brackish water known as Totokan Peg. In so doing, according to the sparse population of Urup Island, he courted the malevolence of evil spirits.

Totokan Bog is an ill-omened water. The natives say it is bottomless, and that no man has ever entered its water and come out alive. There is an evil female spirit, the natives believe, who makes a specialty of handsome men, and when such a one comes to the bog he "vanishes like smoke" and his body is seen no more.

Four years ago two sailors attempted to cross the bog by swimming. They were seen to reach the middle of the lake, swimming strongly, and then together went down without a sound.

Major MacLaren rested for four days on the shores of the bog, flying at an experimental fox farm maintained on the island by the Japanese Department of Agriculture and Commerce, and then hopped off on a successful flight to Paramushiru.

"WE DELIVER ANYTHING, ANYWHERE, ANYTIME"

HIS CUROSITY WRECKED TRAIN

Nine Year Old Boy Wired Blocks On Track To See What Would Happen.

ENGINEER KILLED.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 19.—Ralph Roberts, nine-year-old Toledo boy, who admitted wrecking a fast New York passenger train near Athens, O., causing the death of the engineer, serious injury to the fireman and endangering the lives of fifty passengers, does not blame the movies.

He says he wired heavy blocks of wood to the railroad tracks "just to see what would happen."

Bewildered at the publicity his costly amusement has received, the child plays in the jail yard with the children of Sheriff Pete McKinley, of Athens. Ralph has been held by the Juvenile Court, and it is said he may be charged with the death of Engineer Harry Sargeant, 55, but he is not held at the jail. He is staying at the sheriff's home.

Twice before the boy unsuccessfully attempted to wreck a train, according to the sheriff and railroad officials who questioned him. But each time someone saw the obstruction on the track and removed it before the train (the fastest on the Athens division) was due.

Shortly after his second attempt to stage a wreck had been frustrated, it is said, the boy returned to the track, wired a two-by-four block of wood securely to the rails and retired to a nearby post to await the crash.

A few minutes later New York Central Passenger Train No. 6 came roaring down the valley at a speed said to have been nearly fifty miles an hour. The engine struck the block and passed over safely; but the tender, laden with coal, left the tracks, pulling with it the engine.

At the entreaties of Sargeant, Fireman Peter Cline, 47, jumped as the train slowed down. He was so severely injured in the leap, however, that little hope is held for his recovery.

Sargeant had almost succeeded in bringing the train to a halt when the huge engine, unable to resist the pulling force of the derelict tender, reared and plunged from the track, pinning beneath it the engineer.

No action will be taken in the case until the Athens Probate Judge returns to the bench, which probably will be early in September.

Meantime, little Ralph plays with the sheriff's children when strange railroad detectives and coroner's deputies are not poking questions at him. All of these he answers obediently. Throughout all the questioning he has not deviated from the original story—that his sole motive for wiring the wood to the rails was to "see what would happen."

The child, scarcely more than a babe, apparently enjoyed the company of his new-found friends and playmates—the young McKinleys—for the first few days; but before long he was crying to return to the farm of his grandmother, near the scene of the wreck. He said he wished to help her with the milking.

He was not permitted to leave, but his loneliness was appeased to a certain extent when the sheriff's children took Ralph around the corner to hear the music of the Salvation Army.

Earl Roberts, the boy's father, came from Toledo to be with his son, aiding materially in lessening the lad's yearning for home.

Now he sits, almost unconcerned, cracking walnuts, and awaiting the return of the Judge who will decide his punishment.

MEDICAL MEN CLOSE SESSION IN PETERBORO

Dinner at Empress Hotel Was Pleasant Affair Last Night.

EMINENT GUESTS.

Organization Stimulates Interest in Medical Work and Helps the Practitioners.

An afternoon session at Nicholls Hospital, with tea on the lawn, a dinner at the Empress Hotel, attended by sixty members of the convention, and about twenty of their wives, followed by two addresses dealing with Radiological Diagnosis, delivered at the Peterborough Club, formed the second portion of the District Medical Meeting of the Ontario Medical Association in Counsellor District Number Six, held here yesterday.

The dinner at the Empress Hotel, an enjoyable affair in which Mine Host Graham surpassed himself in the excellence of his cuisine, was held in the grill room, the ladies having separate tables in the dining rooms, to allow of their departure, if desired, before the speeches began. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, and His Worship Mayor Turner, were guests at the dinner, which was featured by short addresses delivered by the president of the Ontario Medical Association, Dr. George S. Young, of Toronto, and Dr. T. C. Routley, secretary of the O.M. A. and general secretary of the Canadian Medical Association.

At last night's dinner in the Empress Hotel, Belleville was decided on as the meeting place for next year. Dr. E. A. McQuade of Trenton, present District Counsellor, was nominated for the position for another year, the election of a Counsellor taking place at the next annual meeting. Dr. J. R. Fraser, of Lakefield was also nominated.

Dr. F. C. Neal was unanimously elected as Vice-Counsellor for the district.

Felicitations and congratulations on a well-attended meeting were extended the member by Mayor Turner last evening, voicing in his usual happy fashion, the city's pleasure on welcoming the doctors, and extending a hearty invitation for a return visit. His Worship spoke of the high calling of a physician, and of the notable advancements made in the realms of science and medicine during recent years. He drew the attention of his hearers to the quality of the filtered water supplied in Peterborough, a remark which drew from Mr. G. N. Gordon the assertion that, before the passing of the O.T.A., the people of Peterborough did not pay any attention to the question of filtered water.

Mr. Gordon, in a few well chosen words, repeated the welcome voiced by Mayor Turner. He referred to the good work done by the physicians of Canada in helping on the passing of legislation retarding the importation and use of narcotic drugs, and to their splendid efforts to advance public health endeavors, making for a revolution of harmful living conditions.

President's Address.

The president of the Ontario Medical Association, Dr. Geo. S. Young, of Toronto, spoke in concise fashion. He characterized yesterday's meeting as one of the best district meetings ever attended by him, and went on to a consideration of the advance of the organizatiuon of which he is presiding officer. "It is not very far back to the time," said Dr. Young, "when the doctor practised medicine in an isolated way. He did not come into contact with his confreres and as a result, friction often developed. During the past twenty-five or thirty years, the practice of medicine has changed very much. To-day the doctor has not the confidence of the community that he had years ago, and perhaps rightly so. People are being educated mentally along the lines of medicine, by newspapers, by advertisements and such things. The doctor's practice is affected by public health workers and by lay organizations interested in promoting health. It is also affected by insurance, which might easily become state insurance, and also by a large body of men and women who have not been trained as he has and yet who call themselves doctors and practice medicine in one way or another. All these things involve problems which he cannot meet as an individual. It is impossible. In the past few years we have been realizing the importance of organization. To-day we have a paid-up membership of over 1,800 physicians in the province of Ontario. That means that the O.M.A. is a representative body and has influence."

Referring to the democratic spirit of the O.M.A. and its desire to build up a membership total of 2,500, Dr. Young passed to a consideration of the stimulus afforded medical work by the organization. He said: "We have not been doing our duty if we allow advertisements to appear in the papers declaring that gall-tones can be removed by a species of glorified massage. It is not fair to the public. We have been studying our duty to the public and as a result, have developed a plan whereby men can go out and speak before laymen authoritatively on such subjects."

Secretary's Talk.

Dr. T. C. Routley, of Toronto, secretary of the Ontario Medical Association, also general secretary of the Canadian Medical Association, gave an outline of the progress being made by the O.M.A. He compared the total of 27 speakers sent out in one year by a similar United States' organization to the aggregate of 250 speakers sent by the O.M.A. Six years ago, the members of voluntary medical associations in Canada were paying $6,000 into the coffers of their organizations. In 1924, the sum of $60,000 was paid in.

Dr. Routley referred to a situation prevailing in Saskatchewan two years ago, when the osteopaths applied for an Act of Parliament, giving them equal rights with the medical profession, and the bill met defeat by only one vote. In the meantime, organizers from Ontario went out by invitation to Saskatchewan and organized the profession so effectively that several pieces of similar legislation coming up for consideration last year met defeat by a considerable majority. These bills, which failed to pass in every instance, had to do with the following: (1) A bill sponsored by the osteopaths of the province, asking equal standing with practitioners of medicine. (2) A bill making it possible for persons not trained fully in medicine to sign birth and death certificates. (3) A bill which would open hospitals to practitioners without requisite medical training. (4) A bill making it a requirement that doctors should describe the disease from which the patient was suffering, on prescriptions.

Dr. Routley emphasized the point that the medical practitioners were not seeking to establish a monopoly, but they maintained that anyone desirous of treating the sick should first have sufficient technical education for the work. He spoke of the significance of the figures supplied by Great Britain, where fourteen years ago, 700 odd medical men on full time supplied medical service to the people of England, and where at the present time, 14,500 physicians were employed on full time by the country. When Lloyd George launched his mammoth insurance scheme, the doctors who went to him were insufficiently organized to have any influence, and it was not until they organized that they were enabled to effect some changes in the insurance bill in England.

Dr. Routley also commended to the attention of the members, for consideration at their county meetings, an expression of opinion on whether lodge practice is a type of medical practice that the profession should engage in. "Is it remunerative, and should we take cognizance of this practice and take steps to find out what remuneration is received, and should steps be taken to have it done away with?"

Dr. McQuade, District Counsellor, expressed thanks to Mayor Turner and Mr. G. N. Gordon for their kind words, and also thanked Dr. Neal and the members of the Peterborough Medical Society for making the meeting so successful.

At the afternoon session, held at Nicholls Hospital, Dr. Moir presiding, the first paper heard was a discussion of Methods of Diagnosis and Therapeutic Procedures in certain Surgical Lesions of the Genito-Urinary Tract, illustrated by lantern slides, and given by Dr. W. E. Lower, of Cleveland, an internationally famous surgeon who was accorded at its conclusion a hearty vote of thanks by Drs. McQuade and Neal, Counsellor and Vice-Counsellor of the District.

The afternoon session, with three papers by prominent speakers, was highly technical. The addresses bristled with terms which seemed to be most interesting to the medical practitioners present, but might be slightly confusing to a lay mind.

Dr. Lower dealt with his subject from the point of view of an expert, and his address was listened to with profound attention. The slides showed various types of the lesions which he was discussing, and gave an insight into methods of diagnosis and procedure.

Rheumatic Disorders.

"The Chronic Arthritides," having to do with rheumatic troubles of various types, was the contribution of Dr. Clarence L. Starr, Professor of Surgery at the University of Toronto, to the afternoon's programme. The ordinary type of rheumatism, or acute rheumatic fever, was described in its technical categories by the speaker, who spoke of the etiological factors and pathological changes in this disease. Regarding treatment, Dr. Starr advocated special attention to hygienic and general living conditions, change of occupation from undesirable surroundings, and a thorough search for systemic sources of infection. He declared that the tonsils should be thoroughly investigated, but thought that the assertion made by some specialists that, if the tonsils were not diseased, they were better out anyway, was a bad thing. "There are a lot of tonsils that are not a particular cause of infection, and teeth also have been promiscuously removed that were never the source of infection." Definite causes of toxin might be discovered in such things as sinus infections, disturbances of the genito-intestinal tract, skin infections, etc. Patients had often been benefited considerably by short periods of starvation, but faulty metabolism was a comparatively rare source of infection, and sugar tolerance also was another vexed question. "Few people are benefited materially by cutting off their carbo-hydrates." Complete rest, especially in the early stages, and some sort of fixative apparatus, were excellent.

Intestinal Trouble.

Dr. A. T. Bazin, of Montreal, Superintendent of the General Hospital in that city, illustrating his address with a number of lantern slides, gave an interesting report of a case of Intussuscention, which means, as far as could be ascertained, a condition in the intestines comparable to the doubling up of a small rubber tube within a larger tube of the same sort. Two cases in young infants were described at length, and the methods of their relief given. The removal of mucous cystic tumours from the intestines was illustrated by several slides.

At the conclusion of the afternoon session, tea was served on the lawn at the hospital, the table and verandah decorated prettily with quantities of asters and gladioli. Mrs. F. M. Leeson received, the guests. The assistant superintendent and night supervisor, Miss Meda Walsh and Miss Marion McCallum, poured tea. A drive for visiting ladies provided by some of the doctors' wives, preceded the tea hour.

Concluding Session.

Following the dinner at the Empress Hotel, a final meeting was held in the Peterboro Club rooms, when addresses, profusely illustrated with lantern slides, were given by two visiting doctors from Toronto.

Dr. H. M. Tovell, Radiologist at St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, spoke on Radiological Diagnosis of Abdominal Tumors, external to Gastro-Intestinal Tract, but producing Gastro-Intestinal Symptoms. He spoke of the commencement which was being made in Radiological Diagnosis, and of the advance which might be anticipated later on. His slides, described in detail, showed differing types of tumors of the liver, the abdominal tract, the gall bladder and the pancreas. A series of a "phantom tumor," as diagnosed by physicians was interesting.

Dr. A. H. Rolph, Radiologist at the Sick Children's Hospital, Toronto, gave slides showing Radiological Diagnosis of Pathological Bone Conditions in Children, in which diseases of the bones in infants and young children were illustrated and described. The slides had to do mainly with deformities and lesions resulting from rickets, scurvy and congenital syphilis, in young children, and showed the typical infections resulting from the differing diseases.

MONKEY TALK.

The language of the monkeys—if they have one—seems to be an open book to three-year-old Marian Erickson. Her father, Fred Erickson, a mining man from Ecuador, who has just arrived in San Francisco with his family, tells of how the monkeys sat beside her bed and carried on conversations with her. And Marian can speak English, Spanish and French.

STABLES BURNED DOWN.

Loss at the Connaught Park Jockey Club Is $30,000.

OTTAWA, September 19. Canadian Press. — Six stables, at Connaught Park Jockey Club, on the Aylmer Road near Deschense, were destroyed by fire of unknown origin, which broke out last night, causing a loss estimated at $30,000, by T. P. Gorman, secretary of the club. The loss is half covered by insurance.

The blaze was discovered by Max Skead and Dr. Valin, who were playing at the Riversmead Golf Club near by. The Hull and Aylmer fire brigades responded, but the water tank was too far away, and the fire burnt itself out.

The last horse in the stable, 'Sure to Win,' Pat Gorman's racer, was removed yesterday.

SASH CIRDLES.

Sash girdles are seen on some of the fashionable fur coats, worn low over the hips.

HAMILTON MAN IS NOT DR. M'DONALD

Another Individual Masquerading as a Doctor—Used Same Tactics as Peterborough Visitor.

POLICE BAFFLED.

Local police officials have obtained no clue to the mysterious Dr. MacDonald, who suddenly invaded Peterboro some time ago with a record as a skilled surgeon, to leave just as suddenly shortly afterwards, with a record as a slippery thief and impersonator.

Last week, an individual was arrested in Hamilton for masquerading as a doctor and selling a half interest to two persons in a private hospital which was non-existent. His tactics so resembled the cunning visitor to Peterboro, who baffled and banqueted the medios, foiled the police and a hotel proprietor, it was thought for certain, the same personage was playing in Hamilton. However, it proved to be another and the anonymous Dr. MacDonald is still at large and several unfortunate individuals in Peterboro and Millbrook still out of pocket.

STIRLING FAIR A BIG SUCCESS

Large Crowd Present From All Parts of the District —Good Races.

(By A STAFF REPORTER)

STIRLING, Sept. 18.—When W. H. Heath was elected president of the Stirling Agricultural Society at the annual meeting last winter, he modestly tried to side-step the honor on account of his youth, and recommended that another man be chosen. The members, however, insisted that his is the day of young men, and Mr. Heath was finally prevailed upon to accept the presidency. Yesterday the first fair was held under his administration and its success in every department is ample evidence that the members in putting Mr. Heath into the highest office made no mistake.

There was a good crowd out from all parts of the district and Belleville, and some of the surrounding towns were well represented. The receipts at the gate totalled $741, which stands well in comparison with those of former years, and is perfectly satisfactory to the directors. The exhibitors of live stock were up to the record, and the number of fine horses of all types on exhibition was greater than ever.

The Races.

As is always the case at a country fair the races proved the main attraction and as soon as these were called the crowd flocked into the grandstand and into the space in the neighborhood of the wire. There were three races on the programme, one for green races, the 2.30 trot or pace and the free-for-all.

Havelock Horse Wins.

Armstrong and McQuaig of Havelock had two horses, Mack R. and Peter Raven, in the 2.30 race, the former driven by Steve McQuaig, one of the owners, and the latter by Jim Sutherland of Peterboro'. Mack R. won this race in straight heats, Peter Raven taking third money, S. Mack, owned by C. Gorman of Frankford, being second. Mack R. was on his good behavior in every heat, the gallant little pacer going without hopples and never making a break or a skip. His stable mate, Peter Raven, has plenty of speed and grit, and will be crowding Mack R. for the lead before the season is over.

The Free For All.

Doris Patch won first, and Thor Patch second money in the free-for-all, which required four heats to decide. Both these horses are owned by S. McMillan of Campbellcroft. Leo Stewart, owned by Mr. Coulter of Thornburg was third and Bertha Todd, the property of J. McNaught, Tweed, finished fourth.

A Veteran Driver.

It is not often that a man who has lived a quiet life on a farm until he is over 70 years of age, gets the racing fever, but this is just what John Sherman of Plainfield did. At the fall fairs last year he made his debut on the race track at the age of 71, much to the surprise of his friends and neighbors. His success last season encouraged him to stay in the game, and yesterday he had two horses on the Stirling track, Bobby K., in the green race, and Dolly K. in the 2.30 class, both horses having been raised and trained by their veteran owner. But yesterday was not Mr. Sherman's lucky day, and though he handled his horses with the skill of a professional, he was unable to finish with either inside the money, and both were drawn in the final heats. Bobby K. was in his first race, and for a three-year-old behaved well. The winners of this race were: Barney Kelly, Si Garrison; Butcher Girl, W. J. Stacey; Wooler and Tim Alert, George Weelman, Marmora.

The judges of the horse races were: Clayton Tucker, ex-president of the fair, starter; C. Y. Bailey and Leonard Sharp, judges; W. H. Heath and E. M. Teal, timekeeper; W. T. Sine, clerk.

Campbellford Man Won.

George Hendy, who resides near Campbellford, got first prize in the general purpose class for his handsome black team that captured the same honor at the Campbellford fair last year; Victor Irwin, of near Campbellford, was second.

Mr. Hendy won six first and five second prizes for Leicester sheep, and five firsts and three seconds for turkeys.

In The Hall.

Stirling is one of the neatest and prettiest villages in Central Ontario, and the flower gardens around the handsome residence on Main Street, are a standing testimony to the good taste of the residents. Stirling is one of the smaller places that can boast of a vigorous horticultural society and the display of flowers in the hall was something rarely equalled at a country fair. The district also excels as a dairy centre and there was a large exhibit of the cheese, which has done so much to make Stirling famous. There was also fruit, vegetables and grain in abundance.

The School Parade.

One feature of the Stirling Fair every year is the parade of school children. This event was won yesterday by Springbrook School, S.S. No. 20, Rawdon, of which Miss Gladys Danford is teacher. Bonar Law School, No. 5, Miss V. A. Bradshaw, teacher, was second. These two were the only schools to compete and the pupils of each made a splendid showing.

Secretary Stone and Director Horkins were on the grounds and secured a large number of promises from exhibitors to come to the Campbellford Fair next week. All the best horses seen here yesterday have been entered for Campbellford.

The Foxboro Band supplied excellent music during the afternoon and the day closed with an entertainment in the Opera House.

FLOWERS AWAIT ADMIRING CROWD AT ARMOURIES

Exhibits Have Never Been Equalled Here For Number and Beauty.

GOOD ENTERTAINMENT.

Children's Fancy Costume Parade Takes Place This Evening.

Arrayed in their best bibs and tuckers, the prize flowers of Peterboro wait in the big Armouries building to welcome the flower-lovers of the city. With the sun by day and blaze of electricity by night to lift their thousands of happy faces to the light, they made one of the prettiest showings ever seen here. Against the white walls are arrayed masses of palms and ferns and evergreens, interpersed with blossoms of various types, and low tables with aprons of fluted green paper, their centres in white, outlined with aprons of fluted green paper, theeir centres in white, outlined by cedar boughs, hold the many different flowers that are comprised in 462 entries. There are 56 tables and their arrangement is delightful. An artistic and unique setting for the many lovely blooms has been contrived by careful hands, resulting in an effect very much out of the ordinary. Lovers of flowers and their love should make a point of patronizing the Flower Show at the Armouries this evening, when a special entertainment programme has been prepared.

Everything possible has been done to carry out the very artistic atmosphere of the show, and the contrivers of the big set wall-pieces have surpassed themselves in the effects achieved. Arranged against the walls are exhibits by the Peterboro Floral Company, who show a collection of gladioli and asters and snapdragon, with a funeral wreath of oak leaves and one particularly lovely basket of many-shaded purple asters, tied with big decorative mauve tulle bow. Pordan Brothers' exhibit has a number of very pretty fern baskets and their collection is centred with a unique design with the letters "G. W. V. A." in a mass of white asters fringed with deep red asters, the surface picked out with pale pink roses and spiked with what the florists call lilium rubrum, white lilies with ruby streaks. Jordon Brothers also show a quanttiy of foliage and potted plants, and Mr. J. H. Callander displays some of his gorgeous gladioli in marvellous shades, asters and his unique group of cacti.

Joseph Grierson's collection of flowers is bordered with red leaves and crinkly straw flowers and centred with a wonderful display of the dahlias that attract so much comment.

W. H. Young has a special showing of velvet pansies, gladioli and a beautiful basket of roses, Messrs. A. Blade and Son has a pretty wall mass of asters, phlox and gladioli, with some of the odd straw flowers, or everlastings, with their dry rustle in a variety called "statice" with with myriads of tiny white yellow and purple blossoms.

The Peterboro Floral Company's display also includes a second arrangement with quantities of tiger lilies, phlox, palms and ferns.

Arranged on the long tables in glass holders or wicker standards are prize blooms from the gardens of the city, in all the rainbow tints possessed by the flower world. Asters in multiple shades, petunias, odd heavy zinnias, geraniums and dahlias dignified gladioli, with their crystal clear colorings, sweet peas and tall Shasta daisies ,stocks and begonias feathery hydrangea, a brown jar filled with sunflowers, nasturtiums arranged strikingly in tiny vases on a mirror plate, roses and snapdragon, pansies and phlox, single and ball marigolds on a table that is a blaze of orange light, wild flowers, they are all here, perfect blossomes waiting for inspection and admiration. There is also an interesting showing of vegetables in a separate section.

In the centre of the hall, the orchestra stand occupies a prominent place, edged with large window-box form J. J. Turner and Son's factory. Flanking it are the refreshment booths conducted by the Catholic Women's League, and farther down are the three tables that represent contributions to a novel competition; that of setting up a dining-room table for prizes. In three enclosures these have been attractively arranged with pretty linens and china. The Cressman Company's design bordered with bronze foliage, has black candles and floral centerpiece of nasturtiums; Richard Hall & Son's outfit is elaborate and effective, its luncheon setting booth bordered with grapes on the table, yellow candles and big bowl of fruit, with salpiglossis in tiny ornamental bird flower-holders. Comstock and Sons use African marigolds in a silver bowl and orange candles.

At the entrance is a small table, showing some skilled handicraft in a miniature fisherman's schooner, trig with sails and nameplate, "The Prince Charlie", done by Mr. Tom Smith of Hamilton, formerly of Peterboro and owned by Mr. Chas. Garside, and the full-rigged ship, with upstanding spars, and background of a tiny town, that occupies the interior of a glass bottle. This bottle formerly contained Spanish wine and made the journey from Valparaiso around the Horn. Mr. Stroyan Leith was the producer of this ingenious little novelty.

This evening's programme promises an interesting entertainment in connection with the show. The musical events include a school children's chorus, conducted by Miss M. R. Rannie, selections by the orchestra conducted by Prof. Glidden, which gave some delightful music last evening, and a repetition of the numbers by the Y.W.C.A. dancing classes, supervised by Miss C. Littlefield, who gave the pretty dances, a Russian Rhapsody and Dutch Playtime, in costume, last night. The Children's Fancy Costume Parade, for which prizes are being donated by the Kiwanis Club, will take place this evening, each child representing a certain flower, fruit or vegetable. There will also be dancing in the banquet room, a programme by the Caledonian Pipe Band, and presentation of prizes by Mayor J. J. Turner.

Girls taking part in the interpretive dances last evening, contributed by Miss Littlefield's dancing classes, were: Russian Rhapsody: Ethel Cooper, Gladys Graham, Jean Mervin, Isabel Davidson, Violet Davidson, Dorothy Tyrer and Sheila Thompson. Dutch Playtime: Mary Dunlop, Margaret Lacheur, Bertha Edmondson, Viola Harvey, Dorothy Foster, Barbara Foster, Bertha Lobban, Evelyn Armstrong, Margaret Dunlop, Molly Wood.

SENIOR SCHOLARS REGULATE TRAFFIC

Boys' Council Suggests Plan To Protect Smaller Children.

TORONTO, Sept. 19.— (Canadian Press.)—Regulation of traffic by Public school youths for the benefit of smaller children is the scheme said to have the approval of Police Chief Dickson, which will be considered by the Management committee of the Board of Education.

The plan was explained at last night's meeting of the Board by two representatives of the Toronto Boys' Council, from which body the idea emanated. The Boy's Council had sent numerous letters to the police department asking that more constables be assigned for the assistance of smaller children having to cross busy streets on their way to school. As the department could not comply with this request, owing to lack of funds, the Boys' Council suggested that the principals of all city schools be asked to select two or three senior boys from each institution to act in somewhat the capacity of special constables for the purpose of assisting the smaller children through the traffic.

Chief Dickson had agreed to issue cards of authority to such boys as were selected and in addition to instruct the policemen to support the youngsters against motorists who refused to respond to their instructions.

LIMITED PRODUCTION OF OPIUM IS FINAL GOAL OF MRS. WRIGHT

GENEVA, Sept. 19.—(Associated Press).—Mrs. Hamilton Wright of Washington intends actively to continue her endeavors to secure a limitation of the production of opium in those countries which grow the poppy plant, despite the failure of the League of Nations Opium Commission to find any solution of this problem. At a recent meeting of the Opium Commission Mrs. Wright introduced a resolution asking the Council of the league to approach the Governments of Persia and Turkey to ascertain whether they are contemplating the substitution of other crops for such opium as is produced over and above the legitimate world requirements, but in view of the objections raised by various European delegates, she withdrew her resolution.

The Opium Commission seems to feel that there is no practical way of forcing any individual country to curb its poppy planting short of a decision to send an army of enforcement into the affected countries. As nobody thinks seriously of going to this extreme, the experts have framed a project to be submitted to the International Opium Conference in November which provides for the setting up of an international board of control to handle the whole question of narcotic drugs and which stipulates that every country shall make an annual estimate of its requirements in opium and narcotic drugs like morphine, heroin and cocaine. Extensive powers are given to the board of control to reject any national estimate which is deemed unreasonable. The experts believe that by this system national consumption will be checked, and that quite naturally the producing countries will find extensive opium growing an unpaying proposition.

But Mrs. Wright, like many other Americans, is firmly convinced that the opium evil cannot be met adequately unless direct steps are taken to limit production in countries like Persia and Turkey. Outlining her views to the correspondent of the Associated Press, Mrs. Wright declared that there was no use whatsoever in attempting to boycott the producing countries, as some people favored doing, because, in her opinion, the producing countries could easily retort by themselves going into the business of manufacturing narcotic drugs and by subsequently flooding the international markets, not only with raw opium, but with the habit-forming narcotics which are derived from opium. She said that she favored amicable direct negotiations with Persia and Turkey based on practical propositions to replace the opium crops with crops of silk, cotton, tobacco or wheat.

Mrs. Wright explained that she is trying to induce the National Silk Association of the United States to start silk factories in Persia as a first step towards substitution of the opium crops with the idea of demonstrating to the Persians that silk is just as good a money proposition as opium. Another way of achieving results, she said, was for the powers to agree to give economic independence to Persia in the way of import duties, thus giving something tangible to Persia in return for her abandonment of opium growing.

"What else?" She lowered the mirror, and her bold, insolent eyes met his own quite fearlessly. "Thou'll not tell me that it was any part of his design when he went forth?"

He frowned; his head sank slowly in thought. Observing the advantage gained, she thrust it home.

"It was a lucky wind that blew that Dutchman into his path, and luckier still her being so richly fraught that he may dazzle thine eyes with the sight of gold and gems, and so blind thee to the real purpose of his voyage."

"Its real purpose?" he asked dully. "What was its real purpose?"

"Its real purpose?" he asked dully

She smiled a smile of infinite knowledge to hide her utter ignorance, her inability to supply even a reason that should wear an air of truth.

"Dost ask me, O perspicuous Asad? Are not thine eyes as sharp, thy wits as keen at least as mine, that what is clear to me should be hidden from thee? Or hath this Sakr-el-Bahr bewitched thee with enchantments of Babyl?"

He strode to her and caught her wrist in a cruelly rough grip of his sinewy old hand.

"His purpose, thou jade! Pour out the foulness of thy mind. Speak!"

She sat up, flushed and defiant.

"I will not speak," said she.

"Thou wilt not? Now, by the Head of Allah! Dost dare to stand before my face and defy me, thy lord? I'll have thee whipped, Fenzileh. I have been too tender of thee these many years—so tender that thou hast forgot the rods that await the disobedient wife. Speak, then, ere thy flesh is bruised or speak thereafter at thy pleasure."

"I will not," she repeated. "Though I be flung to the hooks, not another word will I say of Sakr-el-Bahr. Shall I unveil the truth to be spurned and scorned and dubbed a liar and the mother of lies?"

Then, abruptly changing, she fell to weeping.

"O source of my life!" she cried to him. "How cruelly unjust to me art thou!"

She was grovelling now, a thing of suppiest grace, her lovely arms entwining his knees.

"When my love for thee drives me to utter what I see I earn but thy anger, which is more than I can endure. I swoon beneath the weight of it."

He flung her off impatiently.

"What a weariness is a woman's tongue!" he cried, and stalked out again, convinced from past experiences that did he linger he would be whelmed in a torrent of words.

But her poison was shrewdly administered and slowly did its work. It abode in his mind to torture him with the doubts that were its very essence. No reason, however well founded, that she might have urged for Sakr-el-Bahr's strange conduct could have been half so insidious as her suggestion that there was a reason. It gave him something vague and intangible to consider. Something that he could not repel, since it had no substance he could grapple with. Impatiently he awaited the morning and the coming of Sakr-el-Bahr himself, but he no longer awaited it with the ardent wholehearted eagerness as of a father awaiting the coming of a beloved son.

Sakr-el-Bahr himself paced the poop deck of the carack and watched the lights perish one by one in the little town that straggled up the hillside before him. The moon came up and bathed it in a white hard light, throwing sharp inky shadows of rustling date palm and spear-like minaret, and flinging shafts of silver athwart the peaceful bay.

His wound was healed, and he was fully himself once more. Two days ago he had come on deck for the first time since the fight with the Dutchman, and he had spent there the greater portion of the time since then. Once only had he visited his captives. He had risen from his couch to repair straight to the cabin in the poop where Rosamund was confined. He had found her pale and very wistful, but with her courage entirely unbroken.

The Godolphins were a stiff-necked race, and Rosamund bore in her frail body the spirit of a man. She looked up when he entered, started a little in surprise to see him at last, for it was the first time he stood before her since he had carried her off from Arwenack some four weeks ago. Then she had averted her eyes and sat there, elbows on the table, as if carved of wood, as if blind to his presence and deaf to his words.

To the expressions of regret—and they were sincere, for already he repented him his unpremeditated act so far as she was concerned—she returned no slightest answer, gave no sign, indeed, that she heard a word of it. Baffled, he stood gnawing his lip a moment and gradually, unreasonably perhaps, anger welled up from his heart. He turned and went out again. Next he had visited his brother, to consider in silence a moment the haggard, wild eyed, unshorn wretch who shrank and cowered before him in the consciousness of guilt. At last he returned to the deck, and there, as I have said, he spent the greater portion of the last three days of that strange voyage, reclining for the most part in the sun and gathering strength from its ardor.

Tonight as he paced under the moon a stealthy shadow crept up the companion to call him gently by his English name:

"Sir Oliver!"

He started as if a ghost had suddenly leaped up to greet him. It was Jasper Leigh who hailed him thus.

"Come up," he said. And when the fellow stood before him on the poop:

"I have told you already that there is no Sir Oliver. I am Oliver-Reis or Sakr-el-Bahr, as you please, one of the Faithful of the Prophet's House. And now what is your will?"

"Have I not served you faithfully and well?" quoth Captain Leigh.

"Who has denied it?"

"None. But neither has any acknowledged it. When you lay wounded below it had been an easy thing for me to ha' played the traitor. I might ha' sailed these ships into the mouth of Tagus. I might so, by God!"

"You'd have been carved in pieces on the spot," said Sakr-el-Bahr.

"I might have hugged the land and run the risk of capture and then claimed my liberation from captivity."

"And found yourself back on the galleys of his Catholic Majesty. But there! I grant that you have dealt loyally by me. You have kept your part of the bond. I shall keep mine, never doubt it."

"I do not. But your part of the bond was to send me home again."

"Well?"

"The hell of it is that I know not where to find a home, I know not where home may be after these years. If ye send me forth I shall become a wanderer of no account."

"What else am I to do with you?"

"Faith, now, I am as full weary of Christians and Christendom as you was yourself when the Moslems took the galley on which you toiled. I am a man of parts, Sir Ol— Sakr-el-Bahr. No better navigator ever sailed a ship from an English port, and I ha' seen a mort o' fighting and you know the art of it upon the sea. Can ye make naught of me here?"

"You would become a renegade like me?" His tone was bitter.

"I ha' been thinking that 'renegade' is a word that depends upon which side you're on. I'll prefer to say that I've a wish to be converted to the faith of Mahound."

"Converted to the faith of piracy and plunder and robbery upon the seas is what you mean," said Sakr-el-Bahr.

"Nay, now. To that I should need no converting, for all that I were afore," Captain Leigh admitted frankly. "I ask but to sail under another flag than the Jolly Roger."

"You'll need to abjure strong drink," said Sakr-el-Bahr.

"There be compensations," said Master Leigh.

Sakr-el-Bahr considered. The rogue's appeal smote a responsive chord in his heart. It would be good to have a man of his own race beside him, even though it were but such a rascal as this.

"Be it as you will," he said at last. "You deserve to be hanged in spite of what promises I made you. But no matter for that. So that you become a Moslem I will take you to serve beside me, one of my own lieutenants to begin with, and so long as you are loyal to me, Jasper, all will be well. But at the first sign of faithlessness a rope and the yard-arm, my friend, and an airy dance into hell for you."

The rascally skipper stooped in his emotion, caught up Sakr-el-Bahr's hand and bore it to his lips.

"It is agreed," he said. "Ye have shown me mercy who have little deserved it from you. Never fear for my loyalty. My life belongs to you, and worthless thing though it may be, ye may do with it as ye please."

Despite himself Sakr-el-Bahr tightened his grip upon the rogue's hand, and Jasper shuffled off and down the companionway that he knew to be undeserved, but which he swore should be deserved ere all was done.

CHAPTER XV

MARZAK-BEN-ASAD

It took no less than forty camels to convey the cargo of that Dutch argosy from the mole to the Kasbah, and the procession—carefully marshaled by Sakr el-Bahr, who knew the value of such pageants to impress the mob—was such as never yet had been seen in the narrow streets of Algiers upon the return of any corsair. It was full worthy of the greatest Moslem conqueror that sailed the seas, of one who, not content to keep to the tideless Mediterranean as had hitherto been the rule of his kind, had ventured forth upon the wider ocean.

Ahead marched a hundred of his rovers in their short caftans of every conceivable color, their waists swathed in gaudy scarves, some of which supported a very arsenal of assorted cutlery; many wore body armor of mail and the gleaming spike of a casque thrust up above their turbans. After them, dejected and in chains, came the five-score prisoners taken aboard the Dutchman, urged along by the whips of the corsairs who flanked them. Then marched another regiment of corasirs, and after these the lone line of stately, sneering camels, shuffling cumbrously along and led by shouting Saharowis. After them followed yet more corsairs, and then, mounted on a white Arab jennet, his head swathed in a turban of cloth of gold, came Sakr-el-Bahr.

In the narrower streets, with their white and yellow washed houses, which presented blank windowless walls broken here and there by no more than a slit to admit light and air, the spectators huddled themselves fearfully into doorways to avoid being crushed to death by the camels, whose burdens bulging on either side entirely filled those narrow ways. But the more open spaces, such as the strand on either side of the mole, the square before the sok and the approaches of Asad's fortress, were thronged with a motley, roaring crowd.

There were stately Moors in flowing robes cheek by jowl with half-naked blacks from the Sus and the Draa; lean, enduring Arabs in their spotless white djellabas rubbed shoulders with Berbers from the highlands in black camel-hair cloaks; there were Levantine Turks, and Jewish refugees from Spain ostentatiously dressed in European garments, tolerated there because bound to the Moor by ties of common suffering and common exile from that land that once had been their own.

Under the glaring African sun this amazing crowd stood assembled to welcome Sakr-el-Bahr; and welcome him it did with such vocal thunder that an echo of it from the mole reached the very Kasbah on the hill-top to herald his approach.

By the time, however, that he reached the fortesss his procession had dwindled by more than half. At the sok his forces had divided, and his corsairs, headed by Othmani, had marched the captives away to the bagnio whilst the camels had continued up the hill. Under the great gateway of the Kasbah they padded into the vast courtyard to be ranged along two sides of it by their Saharowi drivers, and there brought clumsily to their knees. After them followed but some two score corsairs a sa guard of honor to their leader. They took their stand upon either side of the gateway after profoundly salaaming to Ased-ed-Din. The Basha sat in the shade of an awning enthroned upon a divan, attended by his wazeer Tsamanni and by Marzak, and guarded by a half-dozen janissaries, whose sable garments made an effective background to the green and gold of his jewelled robes. In his white turban glowed an emerald crescent.

The Basha's countenance was dark and brooding as he watched the advent of that line of burdened camels. His thoughts were still laboring with the doubt of Sakr-el-Bahr which Fenzileh's crafty speech and craftier reticence had planted in them. But at sight of the corsair leader himself his countenance cleared suddenly, his eyes sparkled, and he rose to his feet to welcome him as a father might welcome a son who had been through perils in a service dear to both.

Sakr-el-Bahr entered the courtyard on foot, having dismounted at the gate. Tall and imposing, with his head high and his forked beard thrusting forward, he stalked with great dignity to the foot of the divan, followed by Ali and a mahogany-faced fellow, turbaned and red-bearded, in whom it needed more than a glance to recognize the rascally Jasper Leigh, now in all the panoply of your complete renegado.

Sakr-el-Bahr went down upon his knees and prostrated himself solemnly before his prince.

"The blessing of Allah and His peace upon thee, my lord," was his greeting.

And Asad, stooping to lift that splendi figure in his arms, gave him a welcome that caused the spying Fenzileh to clench her teeth behind the fretted lattice that concealed her.

"The praise to Allah and to our Lord Mahomet that thou art returned and in health, my son. Already hath my old heart been gladdened by the news of thy victories in the service of the Faith."

Then followed the display of all those riches wrested from the Dutch, and greatly though Asad's expectations had been fed already by Othmani, the sight now spread before his eyes by far exceeded all those espectations.

In the end all was dismissed to the treasury, and Tsamanni was bidden to go cast up the account of it and mark the share that fell to the portion of those concerned—for in these ventures all were partners, from the Basha himself, who represented the State, down to the meanest corsair who had manned the victorious vessels of the Faith, and each had his share of the booty, greater or less according to his rank, one-twentieth of the total falling to Sakr-el-Bahr himself.

In the courtyard were left none but Asad, Marzak, and the janissaries, and Sakr-el-Bahr with Ali and Jasper. It was then that Sakr-el-Bahr presented his new officer to the Basha, as one upon whom the grace of Allah had descended, a great fighter and a skilled seaman, who had offered up his talents and his life to the service of Islam, who had been accepted by Sakr-el-Bahr, and stood now before Asad to be confirmed in his office.

Marzak interposed petulantly, to exclaim that already were there too many erstwhile Nasrani dogs in the ranks of the soldiers of the Faith, and that it was unwise to increase their number and presumptuous in Sakr-el-Bahr to take so much upon himself.

Sakr-el-Bahr measured him with an eye in which scorn and surprise were nicely blended.

"D9st say that it is presumptuous to win a convert to the banner of Our Lord Mahomet?" quoth he. "Go read the Most Perspicuous Book and see what is there enjoined as a duty upon every True-Believer. And bethink thee, O son of Asad, that when thou dost in thy little wisdom cast scorn upon those whom Allah has blessed and led from he night wherein they dwelt into the bright noontide of Faith, thou dost cast scorn upon me and upon thine own mother, which is but a little matter, and thou dost blaspheme the Blessed name of Allah, which is to tread the ways that lead unto the Pit."

Angry but defeated and silenced, Marzak fell back a step and stood biting his lip and glowering upon the corsair, what time Asad nodded his head and smiled approval.

"Verily art thou full learned in the True Belief, Sakr-el-Bahr," he said. "Thou are the very father of wisdom as of valor."

And therupon he gave welcome to Master Leigh, whom he hailed to the ranks of the Faithful under the designation of Jasper-Reis.

That done, the renegade and Ali were both dismissed, as were also the janissaries, who, quitting their position behind Asad, went to take their stand on guard at the gateway. Then the Basha beat his hands together, and to the slaves who came in answer to his summons he gave orders to set food, and he bade Sakr-el-Bahr to come sit beside him on the divan.

Water was brought that they might wash. That done, the slaves placed before them a savory stew of meat and eggs with olives, limes and spices.

Asad broke bread with a reverently pronounced, "Bismillah!" and dipped his fingers into the earthenware bowl, leading the way for Sakr-el-Bahr and Marzak, and as they ate he invited the corsair himself to recite the tale of his adventure.

When he had done so, and again Asad had praised him in high and loving terms, Marzak set him a question.

"Was it to obtain just these two English slaves that thou didst undertake this perilous voyage to that distant land?"

"That was but a part of my design," was the calm reply. "I went to rove the seas in the Prophet's service, as the result of my voyage gives proof."

"Thou didst not know that this Dutch argosy would cross thy path," said Marzak, in the very words his mother had prompted him.

"Did I not?" quoth Sakr-el-Bahr, and he smiled confidently, so confidently that Asad scarce needed to hear the words that so cunningly gave the lie to the junuendo.

"Had I no trust in Allah, the All-wise, the All-knowing?"

"Well answered, by the Koran!" Asad approved him heartily, the more heartily since it rebutted insinuations which he desired above all to hear rebutted.

But Marzak did not yet own himself defeated. He had been soundly schooled by his guileful Sicilian mother.

"Yet there is something in all this I do not understand," he murmured, with false gentleness.

"All things are possible to Allah," said Sakr-el-Bahr in tones of incredulity, as if he suggested—not without a suspicion of irony—that it was incredible there should be anything in all the world that could elude the penetration of Marzak.

STOLEN SPEEDER STRUCK EXPRESS

Man Jumped For Life in Path of Trans-Canada—Arrested.

COAT WAS CLUE.

PEMBROKE, Sept. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Compelled to jump for his life from a speeder stolen from the C.P.R. was the experience of Henry Meccamanine of Montreal, who is to appear before Chief Magistrate Stewart on Saturday, charged with placing an obstacle on the railroad track and endangering the lives of passengers. Meccamanine was arrested at Chalk River. He was identified by his coat, which was removed from the cow catcher of engine No. 8, C.P.R. when the flier arrived at Chalk River Station following a collision with the speeder. Meccamanine, giving his address as Montreal, was walking east on the ties a distance above Chalk River, when he borrowed a speeder which belonged to a section man. He folded his coat for a cushion, and was proceeding on his eastward journey. Suddenly he found himself head-on with the Trans-Canada flier, which was rounding a curve, and jumped for his life. The speeder was smashed to kindling. In the crash the man's coat became entangled in the cowcatcher, from which it was removed at Chalk River on arrival of the train there. Some time later the traveller walked into Chalk River Station and claimed the coat, whereupon he was immediately arrested.

AIRPLANES PELT GATHERING ARMY

Shan-Hai-Kwan Is Subjected To Aerial Bombardment.

TIEN TSIN, Sept. 19.—(Canadian Press). — Eastern extremity of the Great Wall of China, one considered an adeuate defense against Manchurian and Mongolian invaders, was being pelted to day from air by Chang Tso-Lin's aviators from Mukden, the principal city of Manchuria.

The airmen appeared over Shan Hai Kwan, the mobilzation point for the armies of General Wu Pei Fu, military head of the Pekin government and started dropping bombs on the city yesterday morning.

Shan Hai Kwan, located midway between Peking and Mukden, divides Chihlie Province from Manchuria. It contains a gate in the Chinese wall known to antiquity as "The first gate of the Realm," a barrier which occupied a most important position in the ancient defenses.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS.

Women's Institute Held a Corn Roast—Roads Being Repaired.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Sept. 19.—The Rylstone Women's Institute entertained a large crowd of young people at a corn roast which was held at the home of Mr. Sanford Meiklejohn on Tuesday evening.

The weather was very favorable and everyone reported having a splendid time.

The early part of the evening was spent in preparing the fire-place and the corn. Later on in the evening a large bon-fire was lit which helped to light up the whole surroundings with the red flames and also to add much beauty to the scene.

After everyone had done full justice to the large pans of steaming corn, some retired to a shadier spot where they spend the evening playing games in the fresh air.

Repairing Road.

A large number of farmers of this locality have been busy this last week conveying crushed stone the crusher which is situated in Mr. John Simpson's field just above the school. The crushed stone is being applied to the road between the school and the church.

Mr. Garnet Kerr has been away for some time, showing his valuable herd of jerseys at the surrounding fairs. He has already shown at Petterboro and Lindsay where he carried off most of the red ribbons in that class.

The weekly prayer service was held as usual on Thursday evening, Mr. A. Barnum having charge of the meeting and Rev. Chas. Daniels taking the topic for the evening.

The monthy meeting of the Ladies Aid was held on Wednesday last at the home of Mrs. Alfred Barnum, despite the unfavourable weather a large crowd was present. A considerable amount of business was transacted after which a dainty lunch was served. The next meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Thos. Brunton.

Mr. Geo. Anderson, truant officer for the township called at the various schools in this district on Wednesday and found the attendance veray favourable.

The semi-monthly meeting of the L.O.L. No. 2322 was held on Tuesday evening with a very large crowd present. A great deal of business was transacted and it was decided to hold a box social November 25.

Horse Ran Away.

A rather serious accident took place on Wednesday morning, when Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Barnum were driving to town, the horse became frightened and turned the buggy and its contents over in the ditch, injuring Mr. Barnum to the extent that he was unconscious for some time, while Mrs. Barnum was a little more lucky in getting off with a bad shaking up.

Mr. John Simpson appeared on the scene shortly after the accident, taking Mr Barnum to town where he received medical attention. After remaining in there for some hours he was brought home where it is hoped he will speedily recover.

Mr. Geo. Hay disposed of the stock and implements of Mr. Albert McGowan on Wednesday afternoon. A fairly large crowd were present.

Russian Detectives Trail Diary of Nikolai Lenine

VIENNA, Sept. 19.—Reports are current that the personal diary of Lenine, smuggled out tof Russia, was recently offered for sale in Vienna. These documents are being trailed by Moscow secret service operators, but up to the present they have failed to find them. The apartments of several anti-Soviet Russians in Vienna, Berlin, Warsaw and Prague have been searched, but without avail.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

Parsons Must Acquire Better Pulpit Voices

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The comedy parson, one of the standing jokes on the English variety stage, is threatened with extinction. With the enthusiastic support of the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, a scheme is to be launched in October whereby all theological students preparing for Holy Orders in the Church of England will be trained in the right production and management of voice.

Already the sum of 10,000 has been secured to meet the expenses of instruction. Teachers will be assigned to train in voice production and elocution to the end that all clergymen be taught to read and preach with "clearness, sympathy and reverence."

GERMAN ACTORS LACK WORK

BERLIN, Sept. 19.—It is estimated that 900 out of every 1,000 actors and actresses of the Berlin theatres are without jobs this summer. A great many of the playhouses are closed. The situation in filmdom is also in the doldrums.

HARRIS THINKS CHANCES GOOD

Leader of Senators Says the Team Is Pulling Hard For Walter Johnson.

TIED WITH YANKS.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 19.—Declaring that his team has a good chance to win the American League pennant, Stanley Harris, manager of the Washington team, said that he would feel easier after leaving Cleveland last night.

"We have not forgotten the seven out of eight defeats the Indians handed us on our first trip here this year," Harris said.

Discussing the Senators' chances, Harris said:

"We have two great qualities that a pennant contender must have—fine pitching and a winning spirit. Certainly none of New York's pitchers are as good as Walter Johnson, and we are much better fortified with reserve pitching. We are striving for something that is new to Washington. The Yankees have won the championship three times and they do not get the thrill out of it we do. We also have another incentive—to win a pennant for the sake of Walter Johnson. We want him to close his major league ba ball career on a championship team."

The standing of the leading teams in both Leagues, together with the number of games that each has to play, follows:

American League.

	W.	L.	P.C.	To Play
New York	85	59	.590	10
Washington	85	59	.590	10
Detroit	79	67	.541	8

QUESTIONS

1. Overflow crowd in right field. A rope is stretched in front of crowd. There is a spot in extreme right center that is free from spectators. A ground rule limits hit into this territory to two bases.

There are two out and runners on second and third. Batter hits a fly ball to right field. Right fielder steps over the ropes and catches ball in territory free fom spectators but roped off as part of the restricted territory Is the side retired?—T.R.H.

2. Is theer any set way that a runner must turn after crossing first base on a hit, in returning to that bag?—V.B.N.

3. A says that a pitcher in a minor league,, who used the spitball delivery prior t othe majors legislating against it, could use the spitter if secured by some major league club. B claims ball delivery prior to the majors at the time the delivery was eliminated, had the right to continue to use it in the big leagues. Who is right?—D.N.

ANSWERS

1. The batsman was entitled to two bases on the fly ball that the fielder caught after jumping into restricted territory. The runners on second and third were entitled to score on the hit.

2. There is no set rule as to how a runner should turn in returning to first, after reaching and crossing that base. Only when he makes an attempt to go to second does he make himself liable to be put out.

3. B is right. No pitcher can come into the majors now and use the spitball delivery, even though he used such a style of pitching in the minors prior to the delivery being given by Dr. A. H. Rolph, Radialo-

SOCCER STAR DIES.

Meehan of Chelsea Club Victim of Sleeping Sickness.

By the death of Thomas Meehan in St. George's Hospital, London, from sleeping sickness, the Chelsea Football Club of the English League has suffered a severe loss. Meehan, who was a native of Manchester, was a left half back of marked ability, and though rather below medium weight and lightly built, he made up for his lack of weight with his clever anticipation of plays and skilful footwork.

Meehan gained most of his experience of big league soccer football with Manchester United which club he was transferred to Chelsea in the middle of the 1920-1921 season. Since that time Meehan, who was 28, appeared regularly in the Chelsea team, and last season had the honor of being selected to play for England against Ireland at Belfast, after having previously appeared in the English League team against the Irish League eleven on the same ground.

GORDON CUP TIES ON SATURDAY

Quakers-Woollens at Oval and G.W.V.A.-Thistles at King Edward Park.

Great interest in local soccer is focused on the Gordon Cup semi-finals that take place on Saturday afternoon.

Down on King Edward Park the old rivals, the G.W.V.A. and the Thistles provide the attraction at 3 o'clock prompt. The Vets are the present holders of the Gordon Cup, and intend travelling into the finals in spite of the few set-backs they have sustained in recent games. While the Scots will endeavor to uphold their good name so as to be a contestant in the finals, as in previous years, and having the breaks, may win the cup for the first year.

Two years ago cup finalists will battle for honors at the Oval. Kick-off at 3 o'clock prompt. Recalling history, it is well to note that the Quakers defeated the Woollens in the final game two years ago and held the cup for that season. While the Canadian Woollens team is the only real participants who have never missed a year in the cup, have never had the "good luck" to win the coveted trophy. So all the fans will see a thriller, no matter what game they may choose to witness.

None of the teams have, so far, given away their probable line-up, which, no doubt, will have some dark horses to trot out for the issues.

SOCCER NOTES.

Trainer Wm. Gatfield of the Plenty Cup team had nine players at his training quarters, and the missing players were Cridland (Woollens), Wyllie (Quakers), Griffine (Vets) and Richmond (Thistles), who reported that they could not get away from business. Under the trainer's tuition and Joe Gaskill in the line-up, the players were put through a course of free exercises that developed the whole body. Then they went out for a mile run at a nice pace, while some finished at a dash. To wind up the evening all went out, trainer included, in a mile steady walk, that was finished off with the customary rub-down. All players are requested to be on hand TONIGHT at 6.30 prompt, so as to all get the same course of training.

No definite word has been received from Brantford about the date the Plenty Cup game will be played, and local officials are waiting notification so as to complete all arrangements.

The D. and D. F. A. will meet on Monday evening in Chamber of Commerce at 8 o'clock prompt.

NATIONAL LEAGUE UMPIRING IS BETTER THAN EVER THIS YEAR, PRESIDENT SAYS

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Have you ever heard a kind word for the umpires? Seldom. Well, John Arnold Heydler, president of the National League, disputes with the home fans and a majority of the players that "the umpires are rotten."

The loyal supporters of baseball seldom are interested in the lives of the umpires. Occupants of the press box pound the ink off the ribbons of their typewriters all summer long to puff the deeds of the athletes.

Rogers Hornsby has been headlined in his bid to lead the National League in hitting for the fifth straight season.

Columns have been written about Dazzy Vance's brilliant pitching with the Brooklyn Superbas.

The Pirates threw a scare into the Giants with a challenge for the lead.

And other features appeared before the eyes of the fans daily.

The umpires? Ignored as usual or hooted and jeered.

But President Heydler has a kind word for the arbiters.

"I doubt whether those who follow the game appreciate the important part umpires play in baseball," says Mr. Heydler.

"The result of the game appears to be the only thought in the minds of the fans. When the home team wins the players are applauded.

"When a game is over have you ever heard fans praising the day's work of an umpire? The hit that won, the pitcher who struck out the mighty hitter and points of the game are discussed.

"I am pleased to say that the umpiring in our league this season has been better than any time I can remember.

Players Get Applause.

"When I attend a ball game I watch the work om the umpires. I follow each ball pitched, each base decision made.

"I would not change a single decision I have seen before my eyes. This is the truth. Players have argued, which is natural, because they take only one view of the situation. When it's close they want the decision in their favor.

"The umpire, being neutral, decides against one side. Then he hears the arguments.

Praises His Umpires.

"I cannot praise my umpires too highly. Isn't O'Day a wonderful character Umpiring better this year than any time. Klem has perfect command of the game at all times. I was mightly pleased to get Charley Rigler to come back to us. He's an excellent umpire and we need good umpires. Ernie Quigley keeps the game moving and knows how to handle the players. Charley Moran knows how to take care of a ticklish situation. McCormick, Pfirman, Hart, Wilson and Sweeney get on top of their plays and call them as they see them.

"It's might difficult to develop good umpires. Look how the two major leagues have held on to the veterans.

"I hope to see the day when the fans applaud a close decision made by an umpire. If the fans knew how hard the umpires tried we'd never hear:

"'Kill the umpire!'"

PRINCE TOASTS THE U. S. VICTORS

Congratulated the American Polo Team On Defeat of Britishers—Goes West Sunday.

SCENE AT FIELD.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The Prince of Wales watched the defeat of the British team Tuesday by the score of 14 to 5, drank champagne from the International Cup, which was retained by America as a result of the second straight victory at Meadow Brook, and heartily congratulated the American players.

His arrival was announced by the handclapping of the crowd outside the stands, and before he took his seat several thousand spectators were on their feet for a look at him.

The whole stand, however, was a kind of a fogbank from thousands of hats in the Prince's style, and His Royal Highness was difficult to distinguish from the legion of those who looked like him at a distance. The Prince's thousand doubles gave lots of trouble after the game when the royal visitor was surrounded by the greatest crowd that has yet besieged him in America.

"Make way for the Prince!" shouted one of the gray-coated specials as the fight started after the game to clear a way for him. He and his colleagues cut a hole through and a score of gray-hatted and gray-suited young men plunged through.

The game had hardly started before the British made their first goal. The Prince's hat was off with a sweep of his forearm and he was on his feet waving it.

"Beautiful," he said.

The Prince's cousin, Lord Mountbatten, was still more enthusiastic. A little below the Prince's box, he danced, swung his hat and shouted, "Hooray! hooray!"

When Phipps-Hornby drove in the second British goal a few minutes later, the Prince knocked his cigarette holder out of his own mouth in his excitement, but caught it before it fell. Mountbatten shouted gleefully.

In the second chukker, when the Americans did some of their greatest work, the Prince applauded plays which were putting an end to his hopes. He turned and expressed his admiration at some of the remarkable shots by Hitchcock from difficult angles, and he commented on the superiority of American teamwork, as the players in white frequently abandoned their own chances because of their confidence that another member of their own team would soon be in a position to make a better job of it.

During the long intermission, after the fourth period, the Prince walked to the British field and talked for several minutes with Captain Lacey. Captain Guest and Julius S. Myrick, former president of the United States Tennis Association and William Myers, brought up the four Australian tennis players—Gerald Patterson, Pat O'Hara, R. E. Schlesinger and F. E. Kalms.

As they were introduced the tennis stars lifted their hats and the Prince lifted his. Nobody is able to score on the Prince in the exchange of civilities.

On his return the Prince walked 100 yards in front of the stand. He was applauded all the way and his hand travelled incessantly from his side to his head.

Examines International Cup.

The Prince looked over the international cup, which was placed in an aisle near his box for the presentation to the American team, a ceremony which had been regarded as a certainty before the game started.

When the whistle blew to put an end to the game, the cup was presented to the American players by Major Gen. Robert Lee Bullard.

The four American players of Tuesday's game and Malcolm Stevenson, who was hurt in the first game, were addressed by General Bullard on the field, as the Prince of Wales and his party, polo officials and others formed a ring about them. The photographers, who had been impounded at the north end of the field, were released and swarmed across. About ten thousand spectators, who had started to run for the train, turned back and ran after the photographers, most of them believing that the Prince of Wales was to do some special posing. The whole lansdcape was hazy with young men in Prince of Wales's garb.

"Some Englishman," said General Bullard, "has said that an hour together of play means more for good understanding and friendship than years of ordinary life. That is true. The teams that have played this trophy have thus, for nearly half a century, been the happy means of shuttling friendship and good-will back and forth across the Atlantic between the United States and Great Britain."

The Prince Applauds Heartily.

The Prince applauded that heartily, and the crowd joined in. General Bullard then turned toward the Prince, as if addressing him specially, and said:

"To the losers, our British friends, we may say that we have held on to this today because we want them to come back again, and soon."

The Prince again applauded, as did others, and General Bullard continued:

"For we know that the Britisher never quits as long as he is beaten."

The Prince applauded that sentiment with all his might.

The great silver cup was then held aloft and General Bullard presented it to the American players, who drank deep of its contents.

"Your Royal Highness," said General Bullard, "step up and drink of the water from Meadow Brook."

The Prince did not hesitate. He pushed back his hat to enable his face to enter the super-flagon and quaffed heartily.

"He's going to drink the cup and all," exclaimed an admirer of the Prince, but his Highness set it down within a fair time limit.

The British players, who had stopped to put on riding stocks and coats, now appeared at the outskirts of the crowd. After a prolonged battle with itself, it let the British players through, and they, too, drank of "the waters of Meadow Brook."

During all this time, most of the crowd that had left the field in an orderly manner, had come back as a mob, bent on seeing all that they could see. The stands and high places were filled up again. On the field men lifted women up by the waists to let them see the Prince.

"Which is the Prince?"

"He is the one with the oldest gray hat on," was the reply, and it was correct, for nearly all of the thousands of others on the field have been purchased since the Prince appeared in this country with his.

The cup held enough of "the waters of Meadow Brook" for about three rounds apiece for the polo players.

The last of the day's solemn rites was that of photographing the Prince. Fully a hundred still and motion picture cameras were pointed at him and the Prince deliberately turned and faced them. Without any instructions, he turned profile, three-quarters and full face to the camera and put on his hat and took it off. He looks at a lens nowadays with the nonchalance of "Babe" Ruth, Dempsey or Douglas Fairbanks.

As soon as the Prince decided to cease acting as camera fodder, Scotland Yard men, New York plain clothes men, State troopers and special policemen plunged into the crowd of several thousand and were beaten back. They plunged again and could not make a dent in the mob of the Prince's admirers.

They formed again and rushed into the crowd, which gave way and scattered, but reformed again at every point from which the Prince might emerge. It was at this period that all men began to look like Princes to the special policemen, and the confusion became greater and greater.

At one time three women broke through the outer guards and nearly came close enough to shake hands with the Prince.

"It won't do, sisters," said a plain clothesman, extending his arms and barring the way.

The confused specials were now being hustled out of the way and good team work got the Prince through. The crowd ran before him, beside him, after him and all around him, and on every side wheeled him around, cheering and applauding. So the polite sovereign-to-be again busied himself with his hat.

Prince to Depart on Sunday.

After the Prince had returned to the estate of James A. Burden from the polo match, Captain Lascelles, his Secretary, announced that His Highness would depart on Sunday for his ranch inAl berta. Captain Lascelles said the Prince would embark at 10 a.m. in a motor launch at Glen Cove and cross Long Island Sound to New London. He did not make it clear what would be the Prince's route after leaving New London.

However, as Captain Lascelles said that Canadian National Railway officials had been notified to prepare for the Prince's journey, it was presumed that he would travel by the Central Vermont Railroad, a subsidiary of the Canadian Government's railway system. Beyond saying that the Prince would go to his ranch by the shortest route, Captain Lascelles gave no hint of his itinerary.

After remaining at his ranch for possibly two weeks or thereabouts, the Prince probably will visit Banff, a resort in the Canadian Rockies.

Captain Lascelles declared false a report in a New York evening newspaper that the Prince had made a "coup" in Wall Street. The report said that Julius Fleischmann, host to the British polo team, had helped the Prince by giving him tips about stocks. This Captain Lascelles denied emphatically.

"His Royal Highness does not indulge in stock speculation in England, so why should he indulge in it here, where he is not even familiar with the phraseology of the business?" asked Captain Lascelles. "The Prince may have made small bets on the races, but to my knowledge, which is rather thorough, he has done no trading in stocks either in this country or at home."

Everybody wants to see Walter Johnson get in a world series .... Everybody but the guys who'll have to face him.

WEATHER IDEAL

LINDSAY, Sept. 19.—The second day of Lindsay Central Fair was favored with ideal weather conditions, but the crowd in attendance was not as large as on the same day last year. The directors claim this is due to the fact that the second day in 1923 was Citizens' Day, on which a half holiday had been proclaimed by the council. With good weather conditions on the remaining two days the directors hope for record crowds.

The speeding events were features of the afternoon's programme. They resulted as follows:

KEEN CONTESTS BALL PENNANTS

Washington and New York In Full View of the Wire— Other Teams Close.

NEW YORK, September 19. — A snarling tiger crouches low in his western cave to-day, awaiting the invasion of the Yankee foe. His tail bandaged thrice from Quaker wounds —his paw zealously guarding the frail pennant thread already worn almost beyond repair, the Bengal will fight for the honor of the west.

Similar scenes will be enacted on the Atlantic seaboard to-day when Pittsburgh and Brooklyn will play the leading role in a drama which will be tragic to one or the other.

Washington and New York in full view of the wire, are staging a mad dash down the American League stretch at breakneck speed. Detroit is struggling to keep up, but slowly its cause is becoming hopeless. It must squelch the Yankee invader or accept defeat.

Just as merciless is the pace which is being set in the National League. New York, with Brooklyn right on its heels, a half length behind, is exhausted by the dizzy pace.

The Giants yesterday had their hair parted by the Cincinnati Reds dividing a double header, losing the first game 5 to 3 but coming under wire first in the night cap, 7-5.

Brooklyn, battling frantically to overtake that meagre lead gained by the Giants, advanced to within ½ game of the 1923 champions by winning twice from St. Louis 7 to 5 and 4 to 2.

Pittsburgh, to-day still two and a half games behind the lead, was only able to break even with the Phillies yesterday, dropping the first section of its double header 6 to 5 but winning the second 6-3.

New York Yankee fans are thanking Joe Bush for victory in St. Louis yesterday; Yankees drove into the ninth innings, trailing by a lone tally when Bush slapped a home run tag on one of Wingard's scattered hits, and knocked the game, the Yankees emerging victorious in first extra inning 2 to 1.

Washington made it three straight from Cleveland by winning final game of the series 9 to 5. The Philadelphia Athletics almost ironed out Detroit's cause by winning the third straight victory from the Bengals 5 to 3.

C.G.E. Play at Colborne, Sacred Heart at Bowmanville, and Lakeviews at Belleville.

Arrangements have been completed for the three important O.B.A.A. play-offs in which Peterborough teams are interested.

In the Intermediate Series C.G.E. and Deloro will settle their argument in a game at Colborne. Deloro wanted the play-off at Belleville; C.G.E. declared for Cobourg, and finally Colborne was accepted as a compromise. It should be an interesting argument.

The Sacred Heart Midgets will meet the Humewoods, Toronto Midget champions, in the third game of the series, at Bowmanville, at 3.30 oclock to-morrow afternoon. It will be a rare pitchers' battle between Duff for Homewoods and "Casey" Masterson for Sacred Heart. The Sacred Heart will leave for Bowmanville at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning, from the corner of Charlotte and Aylmer streets.

The deadlock between Lakeviews and Kingston Circle Six will be terminated on Monday when the two teams clash at Belleville to decide the Eastern Ontario championship. The winners will go into the finals against McCormicks of Toronto.

LOCAL TEAMS TO PLAY SATURDAY

Canadian Generals at Colborne and Sacred Heart at Bowmanville

Lakeviews travel to Belleville next Monday for their fourth game with Kingston to decide which team will go into the O.B.A.A. Junior finals, with the western winners. Lakeviews tied the first game at Kingston, won at home, and lost the third contest at the Limestone City. The winner of Monday's contest will probably meet McCormicks of Toronto, who won at Guelph by 2 to 0, and play the second game at Toronto tomorrow afternoon, and should win.

Sacred Heart Midgets and Homewood of Toronto, play at Bowmanville to-morrow afternoon. This is the third and deciding game of the series, the winner of which will enter the finals for the Ontario Midget championship.

Maple Leafs are awaiting definite news from Ottawa. The Capital Juveniles weer entered in the Eastern draw, and should now be ready to meet the Leafs.

Canadian Generals having won and lost with Deloro will play the third game at Colborne to-morrow afternoon.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To Editor, The Examiner,

Dear Sir,—Regarding statement in last night's paper re pickerel eating bass and 'lunge. They may do so. The fish of all waters, including the sea have their enemies; have we not good reason to believe that the bass and 'lunge may even eat their own off-spring. If not, then the best that can be said of them is that they do not increase. When it is considered that the spawn from a single fish is sufficient to reproduce its kind even as high as a million times. Forty thousand fry dropped into a lake about once in five or six years by our fish hatcheries becomes a joke as far as increasing the supply is concerned. Why are we not getting tons of fish for every pound we are getting. Compare all the fish of the Trent Waterways with the salmon of the Fraser River whose mouth is open to the Pacific, annually pouring millions of pounds of food into British Columbia free of cost.

With the proper fish-runs established at all dams, and the mouth of the Trent opened to the St. Lawrence which has already shown us what she would pour into our waters if given even half a chance. Why should there be any reflection on the eating quality of such well known fish as pickerel when even dog-fish are brought to our city from Lake Ontario and the people buy them. If bass and 'lunge are such Jack Dempsey's on the line they should be able to hold their own with the pickerel and in all probability can. If not, let them take what's coming, but by all means let the St. Lawrence with Nature's assistance pour into our waters her vast free food supply.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

Grand

"THE LOVE TEST."

At the Grand Next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The coming of "The Love Test" to the Grand Theatre for a special engagement will introduce to local play-goers a play that will be held in fond remembrance by members of the present theatre-going generation. As a happy blending of tears and laughter, it will occupy a niche in American theatrical history with "Way Down East" and "Lightnin'," while among those who praised the religious appeal of "Ben Hur," it will be cited as a comedy without blushes. The story deals with a type of youth common to every small town in America—the youth who leaves home to seek his fortune in the city. How Tom Hudson succumbs to the influence of fast company and is restored to the right track by mother-love is told in a story abounding with interest in three acts.

Seats for the coming engagement of John Golden's famous comedy success "The First Year" will be placed on sale at the box office on Friday. "The First Year" is called a comic tragedy of married life and has to do with the struggles of a pair of newly weds during the first year of marital life.

The cast which will present the comedy here was personally selected by the famous producer of clean shows, John Golden and has been rehearsed under the direction of his chief stage manager, included in the company are Lucille Sears, Bert Chapman, Stella Boniface Weaver, John P. Braun, Rose Tiffany, Ray L. Royce, Mary Marble, Paul McGrath, Earl McLellan and others.

Miss Doreen Thompson, the gifted singer and dancer who comes to the Grand for three days next week, commencing Thursday, Sept. 25, with two performances daily, at 2.15 and 8.15, in "The Man They Could Not Hang," is almost as well known in Canada as in the United Sttaes, where she resided for several years after leaving England. She last played this city as leading lady with the well known soldier show, "M'selle from Armentiers," formerly known as "The P.B.I," had principal parts in both Vaughan Glasers celebrated Toronto pantomimes and has appeared in many concerts locally.

AT THE ROYAL.

HUMAN ELEMENTS OF RACING PORTRAYED IN "RIDERS UP."

Royal Now Playing.
Irving Cummings Directed From a Beaumont Red Book Story.

There are many thousands of persons who have seen the "bang tails" striving down the home stretch, but there are comparatively few who have had the experience which gives them knowledge of the many phases of the life going on about the stables or of the private life of those merchandisers of information about the horses, namely the "touts."

In either case, and, too, in the case of those whose knowledge of any phrase of race track life is nil, "Riders Up," newest Universal all star picture, which opened yesterday at the ROYAL Theatre will prove enjoyable entertainment. Real race horses contest on a real track, the picture was filmed in Tia Juana and real stable boys and the other hangers-on going about their vocations and their amusements eliminate every suggestiton of a "staginess."

Creighton Hale has one of the most interesting roles of his career — the "sure thing". The cast includes George Cooper, Robert Brower, Kate Price and Ethel Shannon, all prominently known to screen fans. Irving Cummings directed the production. Gerald Beaumont wrote the original which was published under the title of "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," in Red Book.

The story is that of a tout whose widowed mother and sister wait anxiously for him to come home. Always he promises, but never seems to be in a position to keep his word. But the "dope" consistently goes wrong and Johnny and others of his calling are unable to pay their bill at Mother Ryan's boarding house. Finally, chance puts them in possession of information that angles them to make a killing, and Johnny prepares to keep his oft-broken promise to visit his folks. But fate again intervenes. There comes complications in the person of General Jeff, a Civil War veteran reduced to peddling newspapers and it appears that the visit must be postponed again — but a way is provided, novel in scope because the tout's knowledge of inside "dope."

The picture is full of those little touches of human emotion that bring moisture to the eye. Also, there is some wholesome comedy, as well as a charming love interest between the likeable "Sure Thing" Johnny and Peggy, daughter of Mother Ryan, which is never overdone.

NOW IT'S RENOV-ATED.

Don't say "divorced," —say "Renovated."

"Renovated has long been a favorite expression with Rupert Hughes, famous author and motion picture director.

The expression is used as a subtitle in Hughes' new picture, "Reno," coming next Monday to the ROYAL Theatre.

NEW LEATHER PUSHERS AT ROYAL MONDAY

The new series of Leather Pushers prize ring stories have been booked at the Royal and commence next Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday. These stories by N. C. Witever in Colliers make admirable screen material and Billy Sullivan who is starred is well liked for his portrayal of the Information Kid in Fast Steppers. The first one, "The Kid from Madrid" will be screened on Monday.

AT THE REGENT.

NAMES OF CAST ALL STRONG IN DRAWING POWER

Fourteen Slayers in "Desire," With Powerful Box Office Appeal.

Truly a remarkable cast has been assembled in "Desire." Carefully selected by Director Rowland V. Lee, each individual was chosen because of his or her particular adaptability to enact the role assigned. Not only was histrionic ability considered but "box office names" were also uppermost in the minds of those who undertook the selection.

How well they succeeded may be understood from the fact that no less than fourteen players, well known to film fans are seen in the leading roles.

Here is the cast then that exhibitors can make much of. It will mean additional business to use all of the brief biographical sketches printed below. They are particularly well suited to use in house programmes, in the newspapers and for heralds and other printed matter.

MARGUERITE DE LA MOTTE.

Miss De La Motte has one of the finest roles of her brilliant career in "Desire," a Metro photoplay of modern society. This charming actress who made such a distinctive hit with Douglas Fairbanks in "The Mark of Zorro" and "The Three Musketeers," has also scored in pictures with H. B. Warner, William Desmond and Jack Pickford.

Playing leading roles in Metro productions Miss De La Motte has greatly added to her prestige and following. In "Desire" she is seen as the grand-daughter of a lovable, old music master; a sweet, innocent young girl who falls madly in love with a millionaire youth.

She is called upon to enact a number of highly emotional scenes, in each of which she never fails to register strongly. It is certain that Miss De La Motte will add thousands of new friends to her legions of admirers because of her superb work in Metro's "Desire," which is now playing at the Regent Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"The Covered Wagon" opened at the Capitol Theatre yesterday, with the usual enthusiastic audiences, for a picture that seems to have a universal appeal. It is one of those productions that not to have seen argues oneself as being distinctly behind the times, and it is a picture that has no subtleties. Old and young alike can see and enjoy "The Covered Wagon," the epic drama of the long trek of the Oregon trailers in the days of '49.

"The Covered Wagon," filmed by James Cruze, without any idea of making the notable picture that it proved to be, gives an effect of simplicity in construction that is lacking from many of the big screen pieces turned out with an eye only to an effect which often never transpires. It is massive, and yet not tiring, and there is always the appeal of the open spaces, the charm of long distances and the heart-tug of achievement attained after long struggling.

Exceptional heart interest is in "The Covered Wagon," and yet the romance in its unfolding is always subordinated to the main theme, the story that catches the imagination, the epic travail of the men and women who took the long trail in those far-off days, the journeying of those hardy people whose defeats and triumphs stir a responsive thrill in the minds of moderns far removed from such scenes and such struggles.

It is not pictured men and women who move and live and toil on the screen that unwinds the story of this big piece. Rather, they seem to be real, and that constitutes its main charm. Although they are dressed in the prim clothes of another age, their thoughts and hopes and fears seem to be those of their descendants, who can sit and watch their filmed joys and sorrows with a feeling of close affinity.

The picture teems with action, from the moment that the line of prairie schooners moves out on the long trek, through the buffalo hunt, with its human touches, through the Indian attack and the prairie fire, through the involving elements of jealousy and love and courage, on to the last bit, when the lovers, battered remnants of the huge wagon train, meet once again in far-off California.

There is not too much pathos nor fun, not too many tears nor smiles, in the big picture. It is life-like, a mixture of both, and a touch of the high romance, the doing of courageous deeds for the sake of an ideal goal, makes it a picture that is memorable and unforgettable.

A fact, substantiated by the Statistic Division of the Motion Picture Chamber of Commerce of New York, whose business it is to check up all facts and claims made by press agents concerning record runs, is the assertion that "The Covered Wagon" has played to more people than any other attraction ever made. In its two-and-one-half years of existence, it has been shown to more paid admissions than the record-breaking "Birth of a Nation." This record shows the terrific grip this picture has on its audiences, and the tremendous appeal it makes to people in every part of the country.

With the big picture, the Capitol Theatre is using the original musical score, prepared by Dr. Hugo Reisenfelt, director of the Paramount Theatres in New York, and ued by him at the Criterion Theatre in that city, where "The Covered Wagon" had a run of over two years in length.

Prices such as are only possible in a store backed by its own manufacturing plant; where the manufacturer sells "direct to the wearer;" where the middleman is entirely eliminated; where a huge turnover compels selling prices to be cut to the lowest point—that is why Grafton's are selling men's new $35 and $37.50 overcoats at $28.50, $30 and $32.50 overcoats for $24; $25 and $28.50 overcoats for $19.75. In Grafton's huge boys' department, a magnificent stock of boys' overcoats, boys' suits and boys' underwear, etc., in all sizes, is marked at such astonishingly low prices as to constantly elicit favorable comment from the many pleased customers, who steadily patronize this section. See Grafton's large announcement in to-day's Examiner.

CONFERENCE IN JUNE PROPOSED FOR REDUCTION OF ARMAMENTS

Draft Agreement On Arbitration and Security Outlined at Geneva and Statesmen Confident Of Its Ratification —Will Be Discussed Next Week.

INVITE U. S. AND OTHER NATIONS.

GENEVA, Sept. 20.— After three weeks of constant labour, success loomed over Geneva last night as crowning the efforts of representatives of sixtiy nations who are striving to put an end to all wars through arbitration, security and a reduction in armament.

A protocol on arbitration and security has virtually been agreed on and so confident do the leading statesmen feel that it will be ratified that the so called 'big twelve" of the present assembly of the league of nations decided yesterday to recommend the convocation of a great international conference on reduction of armament to be held in Geneva on June 15, 1925.

Invite Other Nations.

The United States and other countries that are not members of the league will be invited to participate in the conference. As soon as the league assembly ratifies the protocol the league experts will settle down to the work of preparing the program for the conference, which must be forwarded to all governments at least two months before the time set for the opening session.

The text of the protocol will be whipped into shape or will probably be presented to the assembly next Wednesday, allowing for two days discussion before the full disarmament commission. The present plans are that 15 states must ratify the protocol before the arms conference can actually be held. Several of these states, probably three or four of them must have representatives on the council of the league of nations but the question regarding the number necessary for ratification has not yet been definitely determined upon.

Expect Ratification.

The "big twelve" the name given the group of leaders handling the disarmament discussion, are proceeding on the theory that the necessary ratification will be obtained, hence their determination to strke out boldly and fix a definite date for the conference, which of course will be postponed if the number of ratifications is insufficient.

WILL WED TO PA Y OFF MORTGAGE

If you are a young fellow with no matrimonial prospects, here is your opportunity—or rather opportunities —to get yourself a wife. These two Chicago maidens, June Zeiser, 21 (left), and her sister, Cecelia, 25, are only too willing to wed. But there's one little catch to it. The man—or men—who take advantage of their bargain must agree to pay off forthwith a $3500 mortgage on their mother's 60 acre farm near Milwaukee. That's why they are making the offer. And the acceptance—or acceptances—must come quickly, as a sheriff's sale is looming.

NOVELIST'S SON CUTS OFF WIFE AT MOTHER'S BID

Too Much Mother-in-law Separates Robert W. Chambers' Son and Wife.

ALLOWANCE ENDS.

Young Wife Prefers England Although "Broke"—Chambers Family Impossible.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—"The whole point is that I am fed up on the impossible attitude of my husband's family. I intend to remain in England, broke, and I like it better than being rich in New York."

This is the summary of a long afternoon's airing of her woes by Mrs. Robert Husted Chambers, daughter-in-law of Robert W. Chambers, the novelist.

Thursday the London Times printed a notice, signed Robert Husted Chambers, that he would be no longer responsible for his wife's debts, whereupon three night clubs promptly cancelled the previously easy admittance of Mrs. Chambers.

She asserted she is intending to sue Robert W. Chambers for $500,000 for alienation of her husband's affections.

"He Knew All About Me."

After that she gave an interview in the lounge of a Piccadilly hotel. She began:

"This is really a stupid story, but I cannot see why I should not tell it. For years I had Oxford boys for my friends and when I met young Chambers I liked him and presently grew to love him. Eventually we were married, here in London at the Marylebone registry office.

"He knew all there was to know about me and I prepared to settle down with him. But almost immediately after I had taken a year's lease on a flat in London, his parents cabled from America for us to come and meet them.

Treated Abominably.

"I agreed to go and was met by his father who then treated me decently, but after we arrived at their home and his mother had one look at me his father treated me abominably.

"As a matter of fact both father and son are dominated by the strong-minded woman who made her husband and son thereafter behave terribly to me. Three weeks in that household was quite enough for me.

"One morning while we were there, and while I was in bed, I sent a message to my husband who was breakfasting with his mother, that I wanted to see him. As he did not appear, I dressed and descended. I saw him in the hall and asked him if he had my message, and he said no. Then I went into the dining-room and asked his mother if her maid had delivered my message.

"She said that the maid had delivered the message but that she had told Robert to pay no attention to it.

Has Entered No Suit.

"After that my husband came to me and said that his mother wanted to know how much I would take to return to England and remain there forever. I told him that if his mother had any such proposition to make she would have to make it to me. Actually the subject was never broached again.

"But finally my nerves gave way after three weeks of being treated as a servant in front of their servants. I went to my husband and told him that as he was miserable and I was miserable the only sensible thing to do was to leave.

"He reported this to his parents with the result that I got a first-class passage to England which they paid for, and a very small additional sum of money with which I came home."

She adds that her husband's allowance was cut off by his parents. She has entered no suit as her friends have told her that Dudley Field Malone is the only New York lawyer who can successfully fight her case.

HAMILTON MEN UNDER ARREST

Three Charged With Falsifying City's Tax Rolls— Held Out Stubs

LOCAL SENSATION.

HAMILTON, Ont., September 20.—Canadian Press. — Ernest King of the city tax department, G. Hartley, accountant in the Dominion income tax office here, and George Saunders also of the Dominion income tax office here, were arrested on Friday afternoon as the outcome of the alleged discovery of the falsifying of the city tax rolls.

It is alleged that stubs attached to the tax papers were held out along with the cash and after the returns were checked up several days later the stubs were surreptitiously placed amongst the cheques and entered in the books. The discovery of the alleged offence is said to have been made by accountants checking up the civic bank accounts.

The arrest of the three young men, following so closely on the discovery a few days ago that the city cashier, Harold Forbes, was short in his accounts to the amount of $32,000, and missing, created something of a sensation.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL OF LIQUOR FAVORED BY LABOR CONVENTION

Resolution at Dominion Trades Congress Session Carried By Sweeping Majority—Nova Scotian Delegate Declared It Piece Of Wet Propaganda.

SAYS LIQUOR HURTS WORKINGMAN.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—With hardly a dissenting voice the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress at Friday's session endorsed a resolution favoring government control and sale of beer and spirituous liquors.

At the beginning of the session the questions raised by the resolutions of the postal workers' delegates occupied a prominent place in the session, but at eleven o'clock when a resolution from the Toronto brewery, flour and soft drink workers was presented and a recommendation from the resolution committee was added specifying beer and spirituous liquors, a new zest was introduced into the discussion.

The delegates from Quebec refrained from voting, as they did not wish to be criticized in the light of trying to influence a dry province in a question of this kind. Some of their delegates, however, spoke on the question and protested vigorously that there was less immorality in their own province than in Ontario.

The debate was confined entirely to the floor and none of the executive took part in it.

McLeod Favors Prohibition

Delegate McLeod of Nova Scotia, made an attack on the recommendation of the committee and characterized the whole resolution as a piece of wet propaganda, being brought up here to influence the coming plebiscite in Ontario.

"I am entirely opposed to the sale of liquor no matter by whom," he said, "and want to be recorded in that way. Liquor has created more sorrows and hardships in the homes of working men than any other one cause, I regard this resolution as reactionary in every sense. It is in the same class as much other action by the congress during these sessions this year. As with the questions of autonomy for the Canadian trades unions and affiliations, the congress is living up to a standard of reactionism. The sale of liquor simply means a greater control by the capitalist of the working classes.

Would Reimburse Depositors

Delegate McLeod, however, was in a minority that must have numbered less than a dozen and his opposition was completely snowed under when the resolution was put to the congress.

Resolutions favoring the reimbursemeat by the government of Home Bank depositors, 100 per cent and the bringing of the directors to justice and in favor of keeping all children in school until they were sixteen years old were passed.

James Murdock came in for a further condemnation when the postal workers requisition came before the convention. The postal workers delegates charged the minister of labor with misrepresentation, when he denied holding a meeting with members of the postal delegates during the strike and in the interpretation of "Unconditional return" under which the strikers had been induced to return.

WORLD WOULD RISE AGAINST BRITISH IF FLEET PLACED AT DISPOSAL OF LEAGUE

Lord Parmoor's Efforts For Peace Might Lay Foundation of Another War.

OPINION OF PRESS.

Parliament Alone Has Control of Navy—Proposal Is Unthinkable.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The British Press is complaining against the proposal which was aired at Geneva to have the British fleet put at the service of the League of Nations when an aggression has to be met or sanctions imposed upon a misbehaving nation. Everyone of the literary weeklies takes the position that the father of the scheme, is criticized and laughed at by editorial writers.

Most of the journals point out that neither Lord Parmoor nor his government or any other British government has power to place the Empire's fleet at the disposal of anyone without consulting Parliament.

Endanger U. S. Relations.

Both the Spectator and the New Statesman remind the country that to put the fleet at the disposal of the league, while the United States remains out of that organization might endanger the relations of the two countries.

"Suppose for instance," says the Spectator, "that the British fleets were used in operation where United States interests were concerned. That would be especially awkward, as the United States is not a member of the league. Or suppose the Dominions disagreed with the policies of the league and were not consulted."

Scheme Impracticable.

The Saturday Review says. "The British nation will never stand for the putting of its fleet at the league's disposal, not because the nation is lacking in idealism but because it has too hard-headed an appreciation of facts to fool itself into imagining that the scheme would be practicable.

"As we have often emphasised, the growth of the league must be gradual, and until it has attained the strength of a man to give it without supervision the weapons of a man is a highly dangerous proceeding."

The Nation and Atheneum dismisses the whole proposal as impracticable while the Outlook remarks:—"Lord Larmoor's efforts to secure peace of the world may easily lay the foundations of another war. If his suggestion were adopted the whole world would rise in revolt against the oppression of the Brittish and the League of Nations would be forgotten in the general execration of ourselves."

Surrender of Shanghai Viewed As Possibility

SHANGHAI, Sept. 20.— Surrender of Shanghai to the Kiangsu armies seeking to capture it was admitted this morning at head-quarters of the defenders at Lungwha to be a possibility. It was asserted however, that contrary to common reports, the defending Chekiang soldiers were not in retreat.

LINDSAY CLAIMS RECORD FRIDAY

Estimated Attendance of 13,000 On Third Day of Fair.

WEATHER HELPING

LINDSAY, Sept. 19.—The attendance at the Lindsay Central Fair took a big jump forward, and the directors sttae that it will more than make up for the slim attendance on the first two days of the event. According to a statement given out by one of the officials, it is claimed that 13,000 people passed through the gates, which, if correct, will establish a record for the third day. The weather was ideal, and a great many people took no chances on what conditions would be like Saturday by patronizing the Fair to-day. There saw quite a delegation from Peterborough, and quite a number from the county were exhibitors in different classes. N. W. McConkey, of Peterborough, exhibited some fine Holsteins; Harry Lush and R. M. Brown, of the same city, were also exhibitors in poultry.

LOVE WRECKED ON HONEYMOON

Wealthy Chicago Couple Divorced After Yacht Trip Around World.

NEGLECT CHARGED.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Mrs. Gene Gowen, the only woman ever to circle the globe in a 98-foot yacht, won a divorce yesterday from Albert L. Gowen, vice-president of the Portland Cement Company, with whom she made the hazardous trip in the yacht Specjacks three years ago.

Mrs. Gowen, when she filed her suit last June, made a formal charge of neglect against her wealthy husband. They were married in New York City in July, 1919.

Noted for their daring and love of yachting both young people postponed their honeymoon trip two years and then embarked on a voyage that made their friends doubtful of their return. The world watched them as their tiny craft flying the flag of the Adventurers' Club, was battered by heavy seas and was lost for weeks at a time.

After travelling more than 35,000 miles the Specjack pulled into New York amid the plaudits of hundreds who had waited for the daring couple.

If the trip, which Mrs. Gowen described as too harrowing ever to attempt again, was a love test, it has proven unavailing. The marriage ship of the Gowen's is wrecked.

CANADA'S WHEAT KING STRICKEN

James Carruthers Died In Montreal Hospital Following Seizure In Office.

BUSINESS LEADER.

MONTREAL, September 20. — James Carruthers, grain merchant and director of financial institutions, picturesquely referred to in past years as "Canada's Wheat King," died at 5.30 on Friday afternoon at the Montreal General Hospital to which institution he had been taken earlier in the afternoon, following a seizure in his office.

Mr. Carruthers had during the early part of the day shown his usual keen interest in business, but after lunch he complained of an illness, and was then hurried to the hospital. Hemorhage of the brain ensued and his death followed.

Mr. Carruthers was known from coast to coast and beyond the boundaries of the Dominion because his particular activities made him an international figure and his name was well known in the United States and Europe.

Mr. Carruthers became a member of boards of trade, grain exchanges and produce exchanges in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, New York, Minneapolis and Chicago, and with that development also grew his interest in elevator organizations, transportation companies and contracting firms which was followed by active participation in the direction of banks insurance companies and other business enterprises. Mr. Carruthers was president of the Canada Steamship Lines for a considerable time. Other directories of which he was a member, included the Dominion Bank, Canadian Locomotive Company, London and Liverpool Globe Insurance Company, Liverpool, and the Manitoba Assurance Company, and the Eastern Trust Company.

He was born in Toronto, August 13, 1853, the son of Andrew and Janet Carruthers, who were natives of Dumfriesshire, Scotland.

SAYS GOLD NOT MONEY STANDARD

Dig Gold From Under the Earth Merely To Horde It, a Comic.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Great Britain digs gold in South Africa to pay her war debt to America, and America buries the precious metal again so that it will not interefer with the economic life of the United States, Pethick Lawrence, Labor member of Parliament, told an audience recently at the Independent Labor Party Summer School at Cloughton, near Scarborough.

"It is almost comic," said Mr. Lawrence, "that we employ people to dig gold from under the earth and send it to those who bury it under the earth.

The speaker who is one of the intellectuals of the British Labor movement, referred to the annual payment Great Britain makes to the United States in settlement of the enormous debt left over from the war. He said that events of the last decade had destroyed confidence in the gold basis, and that a paper basis for currency must be established.

BOTTLES FOUND IN WOMAN'S CAR

Two of Lindsay Fair Visitors Collide With Another Car.

WOMAN DRUNK ?

LINDSAY, Sept. 20—Two women, Lena Mathieson, of Lorneville, and Fanny Lafontaine, who is said to reside near Beaverton, were arrested Friday by Chief Umphrey, following an automobile accident on Queen Street. The pair were in a car, and while proceeding along the street crashed into another car, driven by Allan Kent, of Hindon Hill, Haliburton County. The Mathieson woman was driving, and the police claim that she had been drinking. The Chief searched the car and found two bottles of liquor which had been purchased at a local drug store. The car, which was damaged somewhat, was taken over by the police and the two women placed under arrest. At a session of the police court yesterday afternoon the pair were charged with having liquor in their possession in a place other than their private abode. They pleaded not guilty, and were remanded until today. Two sureties of $1,000 each were given as bail by friends of the accused.

YOUTH JUMPED FROM WINDOW

Preferred Death To Jail—Fell 20 Feet at Ottawa Police Station.

ON WAY TO CELL.

OTTAWA, Sept. 20.—(Canadian Press).—After declaring "If I go back to jail I will never come back alive," Cecil Winters, aged sixteen years, dived through a half-open window in the Ottawa Police Station Friday afternoon, shortly after he had been convicted of theft and housebreaking, and is now in hospital in a critical condition. He landed on a rock twenty feet below.

The lad was on his way to the cells while the authorities decided whether he would go to the Ontario Reformatory or not. He was escorted by a detective, to whom he uttered the words before he escaped. His mother was a horrified witness of the affair. The boy's face was a mass of bruises, and both wrists were broken. He also complained of back injuries after recovering consciousness.

Government Control and the Taxes

The big cry in British Columbia was: "Government Control will bring down the taxes"—Has it?

The British Columbia Provincial debt is increasing by leaps and bounds; and the Municipalities of the Province, which receive 50 per cent. of the profits from the Dispensaries, are in financial difficulties.

Recently the City Council of Vancouver submitted to the taxpayers, money by-laws amounting to $1,060,000, for local improvements. The "Associated Property Owners" of Vancouver, who led the campaign against this expenditure, cited the following reasons:—

That taxes had increased from 1917 (last year under prohibition) to 1922, by 45 per cent. although the population had decreased

That there was a deficit of $2,345,699 in the City's Sinking Fund.

That 2,843 City lots had reverted to the City following tax sales.

That the arrears of taxes, on December 1922, were $2,527,419.

All the by-laws were defeated.

BRISK BUYING FARM PRODUCE

Butter Quoted on Market At 35 and 40 Cents—Eggs 35 and 36.

FRUIT PLENTIFUL.

Buying was brisk on the farmers' market this morning, and there was plenty of produce to satisfy all demands. Dairy supplies are not any lower in price. Butter was quoted from 35 to 40 cents a pound, eggs were 35 and 36 cents a dozen. Chickens were 28 and 30 cents a pound and ducks 25 cents.

Wild grapes at 40 cents a basket were offered in the basket section, and there were late strawberries at 25 cents a box. Three bright-eyed little children were selling bunches of marigolds at a dime and small green peppers at 3 for ten cents. One woman had green tomatoes at 35 cents a large basket. A man had home-made woollen socks at 50 and 75 cents a pair.

Flowers can be bought at many of the tables, and the arrangement of some of the bouquets shows a good deal of artistic perception.

A lovely bunch of pale pink and white asters clustered about a big rose might be had for a nickel, there were combinations of deep purple asters and blazing orange marigolds and gladioli made stately bunches all by themselves.

Down stairs plums were doing a big business, Blue 55, Lombards, 60 and green gages, 65, were the quotation at one corner; another man had blue plums at 3 quarts for a quarter with big glass plums at 2 quarts for the same two bits, while blue plums and green Lombards sold for 40 cents a basket at another cart, and blue damsons were 4 quarts for twenty five cents.

Eating pears were 60 cents a peck, or, as one man who had an eye to psychological effect termed it, "30 cents for half a peck" And pickling pears were 25 cents a basket.

Melons were new arrivals this morning, ranging from the small egg shapes at a nickel apiece to the big 'Montreal" type at half a dollar. Water melons were 25 cents apiece, in fair sizes.

Apples were not as plentiful as on last Saturday's market. Good looking windfalls were 25 cents a peck, and big Wolf Rivers the same price.

Peppers ranged in price from 25 cents a dozen for the small variety to 40 cents a dozen for larger samples. String beans were 25 cents for two quarts, red onions forty cents a peck, and small white onions 50 cents, tomatoes were 35 cents a large basket, and potatoes 20 and 25 cents a peck or a dollar a bag.

Golden Giant corn was selling at 2 dozen for a quarter, and Golden Bantam at 10 cents a dozen.

Crabapples were 50 cents a peck.

Clover honey sections upstairs were 30 cents apiece.

Five-pound pails were priced at 80 cents for the clover and 60 cents for the amber variety.

Children Must Give Up Seats To Their Elders

But Girls of Twelve Are To Be Treated as "Ladies" Under New Rule.

BERLIN, Sept. 20.—(Canadian Press.)—Twelve year old flappers are to be treated as "ladies," according to regulations issued by the Berlin Street Car Company to its employees.

Generally, children are to give up their seats in favor of persons of age and are to be asked to do so by conductors if their parents do not. "Girls of more than twelve years, of age, however, are ladies and need not give up their seats," say the regulations.

Preacher Meets the Devil in Prohibition America fi

And Sees His Handiwork In Fashion Shows On Ship

LONDON, Sept. 20.—(United Press.)—Dr. D. J. Jones, of the Bournemouth Congregational Church, went over to Prohibition America to take a rest from his life work of fighting the devil. He soon came back, having found that the devil did not spend all his time in Bournemouth. He was unable even to get a rest on the voyage back "My daughter and I hardly spoke to anyone on the ship," he said. "The passengers belonged, as it seemed to me, to the rich and loud set. The ladies turned the ship into a fashion parade. Almost all of them smoked cigarettes and drank cocktails."

CANADA GRAIN KING DIED AFTER STROKE

James Carruthers Was An International Figure In Big Business.

MONTREAL, Sept. 20.—(Canadian Press.) — James Carruthers, grain merchant and director of financial institutions, picturesquely referred to in past years as "Canada's Wheat King," died last evening at Montreal General Hospital, to which institution he had been taken in the afternoon following a seizure in his office.

Mr. Carruthers had during the early part of the day shown his usual interest in business, but after lunch he complained of an illness and was then hurried to the hospital. Hemmorhage of the brain ensued and death followed.

Mr. Carruthers was known from coast to coast and beyond the boundaries of the Dominion, because his particular activities made him an international figure and his name was well known in the United States and Europe. The late Mr. Carruthers was born in Toronto, August 13th, 1853.

LEAVE POSTERITY TO DECIDE GUILT

German Nationalist Party Capitulates—No Innocence Note.

BERLIN, Sept. 20. — (United Press).—The German Nationalist party capitulated yesterday.

After months of loud protestations that Germany must send an innocence note immediately, the party decided to accept Prime Minister MacDonald's idea that history, in half a century, will decide Germany's war guilt.

Furthermore, the party is willing to let Herr Marx and Herr Stresemann retain the head of the Government should they enter the Cabinet.

Lord Parmoor sent a letter to Germany last night saying he regretted the disagreeable incidents making mountains of mole hills through the "discussion of unimport details."

ONTARIO APPOINTS IMMIGRATION AGENT

New Post Created To Prevent Shipping of Immigrants To West.

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—(Canadian Press).—The creation by the Ontario Government of the post of Immigration Agent, and the appointment to it of Captain F. H. Stewart, was announced yesterday at the Parliament Buildings by Hon. John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture.

The new position is designed by the Government to combat in the British Isles, influences which send a flood of British emigrants to Western Canada instead of to Ontario. Capt. Stewart, who has already left for overseas to take up his duties, is an experienced immigration official.

The Immigration Agent, Hon. Mr. Martin stated yesterday, would be expected to serve as a point of contact between the immigration officials of the British shipping companies, the immigration officials of the Dominion Government, and the opportunities which face British settlers in that province.

SMITH WAS ONLY A RUBBER STAMP

Admits Under Cross Examination That He Was Mere Bookkeeper.

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—(Canadian Press). — "It seems to me your duties might almost have been performed with a rubber stamp" Crown Prosecutor D. L. McCarthy, K.C., was constrained to say when he took up the cross-examination yesterday of Ocean G. Smith, former chief accountant of the Home Bank, after the latter, during a long examination by his counsel, Gordon N. Shaver, had disclaimed the responsibility for many transactions and reiterated that he was merely carrying out instructions.

"That's almost correct," was the astonishing reply made by the accused. In some degree this brief comment and equally brief reply, epitomized the proceedings during the day, consisting as they did of the accused under examination stating that he merely acted as bookkeeper and holding firmly to that statement under persistent cross-examination.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

Peterborough,
Sept. 19, 1924.

To the Editor Examiner.

After going to the splendid exhibit of flowers in the Armouries held under the auspices of the Peterborough Horticultural Society it occurred to me that the bare outlines of the Armoury might be much improved and made quite attractive by the planting of vines along the east front and by a row of trees. From George street this front looks very bare as a background to the park, and I would suggest to our efficient and energetic member, Mr. Gordon, that he might induce the proper authorities to attend to this. The effectiveness of vines as a means of beautifying otherwise plain business buildings can be judged by looking at the J. J. Turner & Sons building, and those of the Canadian Woollens and the De Laval Company.

Our public schools might also be improved in this way, and if vines were planted at the Inverlea and Hunter street bridges in such a way that they would grow over the outside it would make these bridges much more attractive. This could be done at a very small expense.

Yours, etc., "H."

To the Editor Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Of the many evils caused by drink, the worst is degeneracy, by which I mean the poisoning of so many babes before they are born so that a large number die before they are a year old. Those that grow up are sure to be defective in some way. A large number die of consumption. Others are just nervous weaklings and very few are able in time of war to pass the medical examination. Many a family born of strong parents I have seen almost wiped out by tuberculosis.

I used to wonder at this until Government commissions in several countries revealed the fact that alcohol, whether in the form of beer, wine or spirits, lessened the power of the system to defend itself against disease, thus striking at the very foundation of our national vitality.

Drunkenness, poverty and crime are bad enough, but the poisoning of the infants is horrible and still there are men anxious to increase the dreadful business, for that is what so-called Government control has done wherever tried. A great many plans have been tried to lessen the drink evil, and prohibition is the only one which has proved satisfactory. Maine has had it over seventy years and Kansas over forty-four, and they are quite satisfied with it and have little trouble in enforcing it, and now the United States have put it into their Constitution forever. It has done wonders for us here, but we must give it time. No other law is enforced any better and no other law has done one-tenth of the good which prohibition has.

It is being savagely attacked. Come out and save it or we will get what they have in Quebec, Manitoba and British Columbia—a perfect flood of drink and a plague of bootleggers.

PRINCE IN MOVIE ACT.

H.R.H. Thought Acting Was Rather Good Form.

SYOSSET, N.Y., Sept. 20.—(Canadian Press).—On his own private lawn, cut off from public gaze, with only the members of his staff and half a dozen motion picture and newspaper photographers present, the Prince of Wales did an act for the movies in a manner that indicated that he thought it rather good fun.

When the cameras were set up, the Prince, in a light grey check suit, came gaily out of the door. With a smile and a puff of cigarette smoke, he placed himself in the hands of the photographers with, "Well, what am I supposed to do?"

The Prince went off to one side to greet several guests and then skipped back to receive further direction from the movie leader.

MAURETANIA'S SPEED COSTS $16,000 A DAY

Liner's Engineers Tell of the High Power Developed In Furnaces.

LONDON, Sept. 19.— Engineers of the Cunard line yesterday revealed several generally unknown facts regarding the record-breaking Mauretania.

Three weeks ago the liner set new figures for the eastward crossing of the Atlantic, and her most recent achievement left New York and London only five days apart This speed costs her owners $16,000 a day.

The experts attribute the wonderful speed of this seventeen-year-old steamship to the installation of oil-burning furnaces in 1922.

The shaft horse-power necessary for an average speed of 26.25 knots which the Mauretania maintained throughout her record-breaking voyage, approximates 88,000. On the last day, from 12 m. to 5.42 p.m., nearly six hours, coming into Cherbourg, she averaged the astonishing speed of 28.25 knots. To obtain this, her engines had to develop 120,000 shaft horse-power.

As the speed increases there is a corresponding rise in the consumption of fuel. Assuming that the consumption is one pound per shaft horse-power per hour, the amount necessary for a day's steaming at 26.25 knots is 820 tons. With oil at $20 a ton, the price of a day's travel is about $16,000.

DOZEN CARS OFF.

Grain Train's Mishap at Collins' Bay—No One Hurt.

KINGSTON, Sept. 20—More than a dozen freight cars, loaded with grain, left the rails on Friday at Collins Bay station and were piled along the tracks and in the ditch, when a C. N. R. east bound freight was suddenly derailed about ten a.m. The locomotive left the tracks and plunged along over the ties, but in some unexplained manner got itself back on the rails again.

The tracks were badly torn up, traffic being completely tied up both to the east and the west for several hours. At 2 p.m. the wrecking crew had arrived and all efforts were being put forth to have the line cleared again in a short a time as possible, No one was injured. Passengers trains were kept running by sending them around via Harrowsmith.

"Nerves in Bad State Could Not Sleep"

Mrs. H. N. Tardell, Harrowsmith, Ont., writes:

"My nerves were in a very bad state, and for nearly six months I did not know what it was to have a good night's rest. I could not eat, and never felt well. I heard about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and thought I would try it. After taking it for a few days I began to feel better, and soon was able to sleep well at night. My appetite also returned, and I felt stronger and better, and after taking three boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was quite well. I have also given the Nerve Food to my little girl, with good results."

PROMOTING GOOD-WILL.

Forty members of the London Chamber of Commerce, travelling in a caravan of sixteen motor cars and headed by a Scottish pipe band, are touring Western Ontario for the purpose of visiting many of their neighboring towns to preach the doctrine of friendliness and co-operation and to urge the creation of a united Western Ontario.

The idea is a very happy one.

There is no doubt that municipalities, like individuals, are the better for a closer knowledge of each other, and that greater friendliness among the towns of any particular district is an excellent thing for the towns themselves, the district and the country in general.

It is likewise true that by co-operation it is possible for municipalities situated in the same section to accomplish much more for their district and themselves than could possibly be effected by individual effort.

That is the idea of the London crusade, and the plan deserves to succeed.

It could be followed admirably in Eastern Ontario, where inter-city relationships are not as amicable as they might be and where a movement to establish more friendly associations would find a splendid field in which to operate.

A HAPPY MEDIUM.

The complaint is made in connection with the Lindsay Fair that the midway attractions furnished by a carnival company are so numerous and so large that they have dwarfed the rest of the Exhibition.

The majority of visitors spend most of their time viewing the wonders of the midway and other features are neglected.

This condition of affairs illustrates a difficulty that lies in the path of most exhibition managements, the danger that amusement and entertainment will crowd out the less spectacular but more important departments.

The drift is in that direction, and exhibitions of today have departed a long distance from the standards of yesterday.

If the tendency continues the annual fall fair will become more of a circus than an exhibition.

The ideal fair combines exhibits with amusement features, displays of field products and manufactured goods with midway features.

It should be, in fact, an all-round affair, with something for everybody.

A purely agricultural fair would not be sufficiently patronized to be successful; a fair in which amusement predominates defeats the object for which such events are designed.

There is a happy medium somewhere in between that constitutes the ideal exhibition, and fair boards should seek to find it before their programmes are monopolized by the entertainment features.

ENGLISH WEATHER.

Today a certain American newspaper states that the prevalence of "English weather" induced the Prince of Wales to visit New York, the rain, which showed signs of keeping up all day, etc., etc., having made polo impossible, says the Montreal Star. It is not easy to picture the curious warp in the minds of the presumably intelligent that must be responsible for credibility towards such statements as that just noted. The idea that rain is the main characteristic of the English climate probably had its orgin in a letter written by some marauding Roman pirate to his spouse at home after he had tried to raid some Cornish village in December and been driven back into the Channel fog with half his robbers left behind. But the persistence with which that idea is encouraged by otherwise intelligent people is due to a very different cause. It is explained by the fact that of the American and Canadian visitors to England, not more than a bare five per cent.—and even that may be too large an allowance—ever go beyond the borders of London during their brief stay in England, and base all their criticisms of and comments upon England by what they see and experience in London.

London weather is at no time and under no circumstances typical of English weather generally. The tremendous volume of smoke that goes up from that vast congerie of cities alone would make its weather different. Its proximity to the seaway into the North Sea and other geographical considerations make it a place very much subject to fog and mist in the wintertime. And in the summer it is less bright than the country beyond, and has a heavier rainfall. But this year even visitors to London who anticipated the—for them—proverbial continuous rain must have been disappointed. For London has experienced considerable spells of weather that has been compared by experienced travellers to the weather of the Adriatic coast.

SIGNS AND PORTENTS IN ITALY.

Nowhere under the round and shining sun has life been so dramatic, intense and colorful since the war as in Italy. The greatest political drama since Russia went Red was the storming of Rome by the Black Shirts in October, 1922. This week 250,000 Italians watched 30,000 Fascisti bury their murdered Deputy Casalina. A while ago all Italy was in a fever of fear because of the murder of an anti-Fascist Deputy, one Matteoti.

These two murders have rounded out the first two years—and it may be the last two years—of the domination of Italy by Mussolini and his Black Shirts. Just now the fate of the Black Shirts and their dictator seems to rest on the knees of whatever political godlings may be guarding Italy.

Mussolini is in the shadow of a reaction against himself, his methods and his men. Communism in Italy is raising its scarlet head again. Demagoguery is getting its second wind. Mussolini has made his mistakes. His Fascisti have not been able to remain at concert-pitch. They have become human beings rather than patriotic demigods. After the manner of poor, weak mortals everywhere, they want some of "the spoils." The enthusiasm has died. Mussolini has his hands full of trouble.

In sum, Italy has forgotten its miserable condition of two years ago. Then the Communists and Socialists ran the country, mocked a spineless and cowardly Government and spat with freedom and unction on the Italian flag. Italy's memory of its despair under the demands of wild and arrogant agitators has faded. Then the value of Italian money was falling month by month. Property values were slipping into the abyss. Life was uncertain, Patriotism had hidden itself. Italy was idle, grafting and corrupt. The air was full of panic, depression, hopelessness and black gloom.

It was the Black Magic of this swashbuckling ex-Socialist of a Benito Mussolini that saved the Italians and salvaged their nation. His methods were wrong, tyrannical, dangerous and almost everything they should not have been. Yet they were eminently practical and crammed with the common sense of opportunism. He pushed over the rotting Facta government. Communists were chased over the borders so fast their coat-tails stood straight in the breeze of their going. Strikes ended in Italy. Italians went to work. The taxpayer and patriot were no longer in despair.

Now the Mussolini experiment is fighting for life. The tide has turned in Italy. Fascism had to be curbed by its leaders, but the old craving for excitement is rising again. Opposition is raising its crest. Italian Reds and Latin politicians are snapping and snarling. Mussolini has his work cut out for him.

Mussolini was and is a bad symptom. Nevertheless, he was good for what ailed Italy back in 1919-1923. He taught the traitor the meaning of patriotism. Service was his religion. He has done the work of ten men. Everybody around him has worked. Political barnacles have been scraped from the Italian Ship of State. Government employes by tens of thousands have been kicked out of soft nests. Italian railways again run on schedule. Looting has stopped. Government by tigerish minorities gave way to an autocracy.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

ACKNOWLEDGING THEIR GUILT.

If the Germans thought for a moment that their refusal to make public declaration of their war guilt would jeopardize their chance of securing the proceeds of the international loan which is to be floated as the integral part of the Dawes Plan, they would severally and jointly proclaim their wrongdoing and their penitence from the highest tower in the capital. They have no such fear.

The making of an issue on this minor point is so typical of German diplomacy that it would have been strange if they had omitted to raise it. Ever since the days of Brockdorff-Rantzau the Germans have delighted in their little hagglings and bargainings. The motif of all their international policy is to attempt to pare down the terms imposed upon them up to the very last moment and "vowing they will never consent" to capitulate with as little clumsiness as possible.

The Dawes plan is, after all, the imposition of the will of the Allies upon the German people. It is true that it is not the tryannical mandate of an old-time conqueror. It is true, also, that many of the boasts which the Allies made in the flush of victory regarding the penalties they were going to exact have had to be abandoned. Yet if they have been given up it has been because Germany has persistently broken her pledged word and set at naught her promises.

Nevertheless the Allies after consultation with the power that was associated with them in the winning of the war have agreed upon joint action in getting Germany to pay some at least of the cost of the war. The plan includes the raising of a large loan by international bankers to be used for the rehabilitation of German industry in order that that country can do something towards paying her debts. Germany stands in the same position today as the bankrupt who has concluded a thriving business before he embarked on reckless and dishonest trading and whom his bankers agree to stake a little so that he can start his factory going again in order that he may repay to his creditors some of the losses which his madness has entailed.

After all, it matters little or nothing whether Germany acknowledges her war guilt or not. Ninety per cent. of the German people as a result of some of the subtlest and most cunning propaganda which crafty publicists could circulate believe that the war was forced upon them and many of them believe that the struggle ended in a draw, with the balance of advantage in their favor. Their statesmen might shout their guilt from the housetops and Fritz would still think there was "some catch" in the declaration. Stresemann knows this and he is trying to secure a little political advantage for himself by posing as the friend of the Nationalists and the Junkers and telling them that German honor forbids her to acknowledge her guilt. Of course, it is a risky game with politics in the state of flux that they are in both France and England. There is always the possibility that a large party in France may grow tired of this dilly dallying and resentful of the German attitude which by implication fastens a share of the guilt of the war on France and the Allies.

All this talk, however, seems to be making a mountain out of a molehill. Germany has already acknowledged her guilt at Versailles. She will repudiate that acknowledgment the moment that she feels strong enough to do so. In the meanwhile it pleases the German politicians to play with fire. All the world knows that their hands are stained with blood.—Montreal Star.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Sept. 20. — The top for export steers this week was $7.80 a cwt., but the bulk were bought close to $7 and some were as low as $6.50. Export heifers cost $6.25 to $6.75, cows $5 to $5.50, and bulls $3.75 to $4.25.

It was again difficult to get a sufficient supply of real good butchers' cattle with the proper finish. Handyweights in this class are bringing $6.50 to $6.75 a cwt., and finished steers over 1,100 lbs. are good for $7 to $7.25 a cwt. The cattle from the west are competing with all other offerings of butchers' stuff and compelling easier prices. Good medium butchers sold early in the week at $5 to $5.25 and heifers with a fair killing promise at $4 to $4.25 a cwt.

Baby beeves are more wanted than available and any quantity will bring $9 to $10.50 a cwt.

The exporters took a fair supply of feeders from $6 to $6.50 a cwt. and two good loads were bought by Isaac Groff at the same price for domestic finishing. There has not been much activity in stockers but the market was able to take care of the supply at steady prices. The average price for fair quality stocker steers of around 800 lbs. each has been $4.25 a cwt. and heifers have ruled 25 cents a cwt. lower. For next week Rogers & Maybee will want 1,200 cattle for export and there will be a local demand for good butchers and some commission men are inclined to think the market will be firmer.

Exporters to the Buffalo market kept the calf market keyed up all week, but prices eased about 50 cents a cwt. on Wednesday. Choice calves sold all week from 11 to 12 cents a pound. Medium to good calves were 9 to 10 cents and common ones 6 to 8 cents. Heavy calves, though fat, were not a good sale above 5 to 5½ cents.

Packers have exerted pressure on lamb prices since Monday's opening, when they tried to break the quotations to 11 cents a pound. This was not accomplished till Wednesday and the week closes at this figure, a dollar a cwt. down for the week. Packers are still in the mind of trying for still lower prices. There is a demand for breeding ewes and supplies are far too small. Prices for these are 7 to 8 cents a pound.

A steady market has ruled in the hog pens this week, with the standard quotation $9 a cwt. for the thick smooth f.o.b. Sales for a good many hogs have been made at $9.15 and $9.25 a cwt.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Sept. 19. — There continues to be a steady enquiry from foreign buyers for all lines of grain here for shipment in all positions. There was some demand from local and export buyers for Ontario grain. The trade in car lots of Canadian Western oats was quiet and prices were unchanged.

The flour market was without any special feature to note. The feeling was firm. There continues to be some business passing in spring wheat grades for export account.

A moderate amount of business was transacted in winter flour, with a firm undertone prevailing. The demand for white corn flour was moderate and sales of broken lots was made at $7.00 to $7.20 per barrel in jute bags.

A fairly good trade was done in most lines of millfeed for domestic and country account and the tone of the market was steady. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats showed some improvement.

The condition of the market for baled hay was unchanged and prices ruled steady.

A feature of the local egg trade has been the strength in the market of late for fresh extras and prices were firmer. There was no change in storage eggs.

A stronger feeling prevailed in butter to-day and prices advanced 1-2 to 3-4 cents per pound, which was attributed to the fact that further orders were received from foreign buyers for supplies but apart from this the market was quiet.

Little business was done in the cheese maket and prices remained unchanged throughout the day.

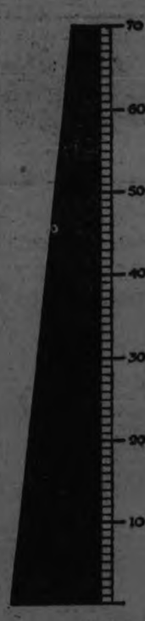
CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 19. —Rains and colder weather that interfered with threshing and the crop movement both in the Canadian northwest and Montana tends to make wheat prices to-day average higher. Closing prices here for wheat were firm at the same as yesterdays' finish to 3-4 up; December 133 3-4 to 133 7-8 and May 139 5-9 to 139 3-4 with corn unchanged to 3-4 down, oats varying from 1-4c decline to 3-8c advance and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12 cents.

Upturns in the wheat market were associated with gossip that serious delay to the crop movement in Canada would be likely to increase the export buying of wheat in the United States. In this connection it was pointed out that only 3,129,000 bushels of wheat were delivered at Canadian country elevators yesterday as against 5,297,00 obushels a year ago and that just 320 carloads arrived at Winnipeg, a falling off of about 1,300 cars compared with the corresponding day last year.

Talk was also current that the quality of Canadian wheat this season is below the usual standard and that prolonged moisture would render the situation worse.

The Measure of Life



CUT this rule measure out and paste it on your mirror, or some place where you will see it frequently. It represents the normal span of seventy years of life for men and women, narrowing towards the top because expectation of life narrows from year to year, and each year seems to pass more quickly than the last. The scale breaks off suddenly at the end because, even if extended a few years, active life is practically at an end.

Take a pencil and place it upon the exact point in the scale which represents your age. Look ahead and count up the years. Think seriously whether you have sufficient time ahead of you to permit of procrastinating the carrying out of any plan of life you may have decided upon.

You have always intended to take on adequate insurance. With this scale measure before you, decide now whether you have taken on sufficient insurance. Every year you delay increases the risk and the cost of carrying that risk.

The Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada holds out to you practically every plan of insurance in which insurance actuaries have confidence. The Mutual Life of Canada offers insurance at cost.

Let your next policy be a Mutual Policy.

Unequaled Results With Unexampled Economy

The Brougham

Every one who drives the Chrysler Six is moved to wonder at the ease with which it rides and drives under all conditions. Unusually low center of gravity and scientific weight distribution enable it to hold the road with the tenacity of a two-ton car; a new practice in spring suspension eliminates side-sway, even when making a turn at 50 miles an hour. Chrysler-Lockheed hydraulic four-wheel brakes contribute vastly to these driving and riding qualities and add an extra degree of safety. Special design six-ply, high-speed balloon tires are standard.

The Chrysler Six

Pronounced as though spelled Crysler

It is true that the Chrysler Six performs in a manner that has centered the attention of America on this car. Yet the wonder of its accomplishments becomes all the more wonderful by reason of the economy with which these results are obtained.

You get better than 24 miles to the gallon of gasoline—in itself an achievement for a car that can travel over 70 miles an hour. But this is not the whole economy story.

The oil-filter automatically cleanses all the oil in the crankcase every 25 miles; the air-cleaner prevents the entry of dust and dirt through the carburetor; the crankshaft revolves in seven bearings instead of three or five, thus preventing destructive engine vibration.

These are some of the contributing factors to motoring results that are revolutionary—not only in themselves, but in the lower costs at which they are obtained.

You cannot grasp their full importance until you drive the Chrysler Six yourself.

Chrysler and Maxwell dealers are in a position to extend the convenience of time-payments, on a plan that is attractive to the buyer.

The youth bowed to him acknowledgment.

"Tell me, O mighty Sakr-el-Bahr," he begged, "how it came to pass that having reached those distant shores thou wert content to take thence but two poor slaves, since with thy followers and the favor of Allah thou might easily have taken fifty times that number."

And he looked ingenuously into the corsair's swarthy, rugged face, whilst Asad frowned thoughtfully, for the thought was one that had occurred to him already.

It became necessary that Sakr-el-Bahr should lie to clear himself. Here no high-sounding phrase of Faith would serve. An explanation was unavoidable, and he was conscious that he could not afford one that did not go a little lame.

"Why, as to that," said he, "these prisoners were wrested from the first house upon which we came, and their capture occasioned some alarm. Moreover, it was night time when we landed, and I dared not adventure the lives of my followers by taking them farther from the ship and attacking a village which might have risen to cut off our good retreat."

The frown remained stamped upon the brow of Asad as Marzak slyly observed.

"Yet Othmani," said he, "urged thee to fall upon a slumbering village all unconscious of thy presence, and thou didst refuse."

Asad looked up sharply at that, and Sakr-el-Bahr realized with a tightening about the heart something of the undercurrents at work against him and all the pains that had been taken to glean information that might be used to his undoing.

"Is it so?" demanded Asad, looking from his son to his lieutenant with that lowering look that rendered his face evil and cruel.

Sakr-el-Bahr took a high tone. He met Asad's glance with an eye of challenge.

"And if it were so, my lord?" he demanded.

"I asked thee is it so."

"Aye, but knowing thy wisdom I disbelieved my ears," said Sakr-el-Bahr. "Shall it signify what Othmani may have said? Do I take my orders or am I to be guided by Othmani? If so, best set Othmani in my place—give him the command and the responsibility for the lives of the Faithful who fight beside him." He ended with an indignant snort.

"Thou art over-quick to anger," Asad reproved him, scowling still.

"And by the Head of Allah, who will deny my right to it? Am I to conduct such an enterprise as this, from which I am returned laden with spoils that might well be the fruits of a year's raiding, to be questioned by a beardless stripling as to why I was not guided by Othmani?"

He heaved himself up and stood towering there in the intensity of a passion that was entirely simulated. He must bluster here, and crush down suspicion with whorling periods and broad, fierce gestures.

"To what should Othmani have guided me?" he demanded scornfully. "Could he have guided me to more than I have this day laid at thy feet? What I have done speaks eloquently with its own voice. What he would have had me do might well have ended in disaster. Had it so ended, would the blame of it have fallen upon Othmani? Nay, by Allah! but upon me. And upon me rest then the credit, and let none dare question it without better cause."

Now these were daring words to address to the tyrant Asad, and still more daring was the tone, the light hard eyes aflash and the sweeping gestures of contempt with which they were delivered. But of his ascendancy over the Basha there was no doubt. And here now was proof of it.

Asad almost cowered before his fury. The scowl faded from his face to be replaced by an expression of dismay.

"Nay, nay, Sakr-el-Bahr, this tone!" he cried.

Sakr-el-Bahr, having slammed the door of conciliation in the face of the Basha, now opened it again. He became instantly submissive.

"Forgive it," he said. "Blame the devotion of thy servant to thee and to the Faith he serves with little reck of life. In this very expedition was I wounded nigh unto death. The livid scar of it is a dumb witness to my zeal. Where are thy scars, Marzak?"

Marzak quailed before the sudden blaze of that question, and Sakr-el-Bahr laughed softly in contempt.

"Sit," Asad bade him. "I have been less than just.

"Thou art the very fount and spring of justice, O my lord, as thine admission proves," protested the corsair.

He sat down again, folding his legs under him.

"I will confess to you that, being come so near to England in that cruise of mine, I determined to land and seize one who some years ago did injure me, and between whom and me there was a score to settle. I exceeded my intentions in that I carried off two prisoners instead of one. These prisoners," he ran on, judging that the moment of reaction in Asad's mind was entirely favorable to the preferment of the request he had to make, "are not in the bagnio with the others. They are still confined aboard the carack I seized."

"And why is this?" quoth Asad, but with suspicion now.

"Because, my lord, I have a boon to ask in some reward for the service I have rendered."

"Ask it, my son."

"Give me leave to keep these captives for myself."

Asad considered him, frowning again slightly. Despite himself, despite his affection for Sakr-el-Bahr, and his desire to soothe him now, that rankling poison of Fenzileh's infusing was at work again in his mind.

"My leave thou hast," said he. "But not the law's, and the law runs that no corsair shall subtract so much as the value of an Asper from booty until the division has been made and his own share allotted him," was the grave answer.

"The law?" quoth Sakr-el-Bahr. "But thou art the law, exalted lord."

"Not so, my son. The law is above the Basha, who must himself conform to it so that he be just and worthy of his high office. And the law I have recited thee applies even should the corsair raider be the Basha himself. The slaves of thine must forthwith be sent to the bagnio to join the others that, to-morrow, all may be sold in the sok. See it done, Sakr-el-Bahr."

The corsair would have renewed his pleadings, but that his eye caught the eager white face of Marzak and the gleaming, expectant eyes, looking so hopefully for his ruin. He checked, and bowed his head with an assumption of indifference.

"Name thou their price, then, and forthwith will I pay it into thy treasury."

But Asad shook his head.

"It is not for me to name their price, but for the buyers," he replied. "I might set the price too high, and that were unjust to thee, or too low, and that were unjust to others who would acquire them. Deliver them over to the bagnio."

"It shall be done," said Sakr-el-Bahr, daring to insist no further and dissembling his chagrin.

Very soon thereafter he departed upon that errand, giving orders, however, that Rosamund and Lionel should be kept apart from the other prisoners until the hour of the sale on the morrow, when perforce they must take their place with the rest.

BATTLE OF NORTH BEGINS IN CHINA

Reports That Shan-Hai-Kwan Is Menaced, Should Be Taken With Salt.

(By Moto Takata., Written for the United Press.)

OSKA, Sept. 19.—The battle of the North has begun at Shan-Hai-Kwan, gateway city in the great wall of China, where Ching Tso Lin's Manchurian forces are encountering the Chi-li troops of Wu Pei Fu, according to the Osaka Mainichi's correspondent.

Chang's airplanes, which bombed Shan-Hai-Kwan yesterday, are reported to be taking an active part in the battle.

Shan-Hai-Kwan, an important railway centre on the main line from Pekin to Mukden, was a concentration point for the Chi-li army which was mobilizing to meet the attack from the North. Last reports of the fighting on this front did not indicate that Chan Tso Lin's forces were anywhere near the gateway city and the above dispatch, emanating from Japanese sources, which have in the past been favorable to the Manchurian Tu-esun, may be accepted with reserve.

BRITISH TRADE TAKES CHANCES ON THE FUTURE

Temporary Boom in German Trade Will Be Stepping Stone For Britain.

AWAIT DIVIDENDS.

Really Big Men Hate Boishevism, But See Necessity For Co-operation.

(By Charles M. McCann, United Press Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—While sections of British trade are waiting the debate which they fear will accompany the launching of the Dawes report and the re-entry of the German industrial machine into world trade most big business men are sitting back waiting for the dividends to come in.

Great Britain was leader with the United States in the fight for adoption of the Dawes report although she knew that before the war Germany was her most aggressve trade competitor and that the return of German competition would mean the opening of a world trade war.

British business men figure that the restoration of normal business conditions in Europe after the chaos of the last ten years, will mean such a stimulation to world trade that, while Great Britain may lose a little at first, she will gain in the end.

Great Britain has always regarded the world as her market. Her goods go into every corner of the world. They have ebeen going there since the war ended but they have been trickling into various countries, where they ought to have been flowing steadily. Now business men believe world trade will revive.

It has always been the general view here that world prosperity was impossible while Russia and Germany but particularly Germany were crippled. This is why Great Britain though hating the Bolshevist regime in Russia generally wants a settlement with the Moscow government. It is also why Brititsh statesmen since the war have worked against Franee to put Germany on her feet —not because they have forgotten that nearly one million Britons were killed in the war.

Many labour men here oppose the Dawes report. Fear is felt particularly in the tremendously important coal mining industry, that the Dawes report means unemployment as Germany must furnish coal to France, Italy and Belgium—which used to buy British coal.

But the big men, both in government and business have figured the thing out. They are satisfied that the country will gain by the recovery of Germany. First there is the question of stimulus to world trade. Secondly there is the fact that economists believe Germany will never be the merciless competitor in world trade that she was before the war. Then German workmen were like machines working long hours for small pay. Now the country has been de-Kaiserized. Both wages and hours of work approximate most closely these of other countries and under those conditions, British business is willing to take its chance against what it knows will be a great increase in German trade.

DISTRICT MEETING.

Peterboro District Supports the O.T.A By Resolution.

The annual financial meeting of the Peterboro District was held today in Reid Street hall.

There was a good representation of ministers and laymen from the surrounding district in attendance. Rev. C. S. Reddick of Lakefield, chairman of the District presided.

Matters of vital importance were dealt with. Financial objectives adopted making for an aggressive campaign and an advance all along the line.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted indicating the stand of the Methodist Church in this District.

Moved by Rev. R. T. Richards and seconded by A. B. Cunningham:

That we, the members of the Peterboro District assembled in Reid Street Sunday School Hall wish to place ourselves on record as follows:

(First). We believe that the Ontario Temperance Act is one of the best pieces of social legislation ever enacted by this Province.

(Second). We believe that its enforcement is possible and that with continued proper administration great benefits to the social, moral and spiritual life of this province to be derived.

(Third). We further believe that any form of government control, so-called, is only the licensed sale of liquor in some form with government prestige, which only tends to reproduce social conditions which obtained in days previous to prohibition, and the experience in every province under government control shows that boot-legging, illicit sale and use of liquor has increased by leaps and bounds.

(Fourth). We urge that all good citizens seriously consider the menace of liquor in the home which will result if government control prevails and call upon all people who would safeguard the moral and social welfare of this Province to use every effort to sustain the Ontario Temperance Act, at the polls, on the twenty-third of October next.

Rev. J. S. I. Wilson, President of the Conference was present and gave an inspiring address, urging energetic effort in the present campaign for prohibition and reminding the meeting that this year we are celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of our missionary enterprise, which will be fittingly observed this fall. His main message was the call to prayer and personal work in a campaign of intensive evangelism.

Rev. D. N. McCamus, who in 1877 was received on probation by the Peterboro District, was present and addressed the meeting giving some very interesting facts concerning former conditions and the personnel of district meetings of former years. He also stressed the message and work of the Gospel and sounded the note of personal evangelism.

Rev. H. B. Kenny was present and presented the claims of the Department of Evangelism and Social Service.

Revs. A. Lloyd Smith and Fred Langford of Toronto presented respectively the claims of the Missionary Society and the Education Society.

Our educational work is progressing but is greatly lacking in financial support. Victoria College students have brought fame to their Alma Mater and have won the Governor Generals Gold Medal twelve times in fourteen years.

Our missionary enterprise like our educational work is seriously handicapped for lack of financial support. Our society is face to face with a deficit of $70,000 on last year's operations. Missionaries heroically gave fifty dollars of their yearly salary to help reduce or ward off the deficit. Peterboro District givings were a few dollars below the givings of a year ago, but Bay of Quinte was the only conference in all Methodism which recorded an increase over the year previous.

Our district objective is $13,800 and Rev. J. A. Langford, missionary secretary and the other members of the committee, Rev. C. S. Reddick, Dr. Middleton, H. E. Hodgins and Percy Stinson are planning an aggressive and elaborate campaign hoping that the records are brought in Peterboro District will have not only reached its objective but will have gone beyond it.

R. M. PATTERSON,
Financial Secretary.

COMMITTEE MEETS.

BROCKVILLE, Sept. 20. — Recommendations suggesting a thorough application to the dairying industry of the grading and branding regulations, more rigid inspection of the conditions surrounding the production of milk, the erection of a cold storage plant at Brockville for the Leeds county cheese trade, the lowering of transportation charges on dairy products, governmental assistance towards the advertisement of dairy products, particularly cheese, in the markets of the world, and the finding of ways and means of securing free entry to the United States of Canadian dairy products, were presented Friday to the special agricultural committee of the Legislature, meeting here by Frank Halliday, Elgin, representative for Leeds County, upon the executive of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association.

John Beatty, Caintown, another witness before the committee, recommended the completion of the organization of Ontario Co-operative Products, Limited, and a continuance of the Government grant to that end. He expressed himself, however, as being opposed to one company endeavoring to market both cheese and butter.

Complaint in the matter of high freight rates, the high wages received by industrial labor as opposed to the return received by the farmer for his work were registered by various speakers at the meeting of the committee.

HISTORIC HOME IN LOUISIANA

Will Be Renovated To Provide Shelter To State Societies.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 20.—"Belle Chasse," the plantation home of Judah P. Benjamin, is to be converted into a memorial shrine and headquarters for the United Daughters of the Confederacy and the Sons of Confederate Veterans, of Louisiana.

Mr. Benjamin was a United States senator from Louisiana from 1852 until he resigned from the Congress at the outbreak of the Civil War and cast his fortunes with those of his home state. He became attorney general in the cabinet of Jefferson Davis and subsequently served also as secretary of war and secretary of state. He fled to England with the collapse of the Confederacy and died in Paris in 1884.

"Belle Chasse" is only a 20 minutes drive from Gretna, a suburb immediately across the Mississippi river from New Orleans. The property now is held by a land company, but the newly organized Judah P. Benjamin Memorial Association has arranged to purchase the old home for $6,500. It is estimated $25,000 will be required to put it into the condition desired.

GOVERNMENT TO SELL BISON MEAT

Surplus of Buffalo, Elk and Other Wild Animals on National Range.

MOISE Mont., Sept. 20.—Because buffalo, elk and other wild animals have become too numerous on the Montana national bison range, the government has decided to enter the wholesale meat business.

In bidding for meat business in outside states Frank H. Rose, game warden of the range here, is learning whether state laws elsewhere will make the sale of buffalo meat illegal.

The game herds have increased so rapidly that the government has decided to slaughter and market buffalo, elk and other meat animals to keep the range from being overgrazed.

The government next year plans to have corrals and other facilities prepared for the capture of the animals and sale of live buffalo and elk.

Orders are now being taken for delivery of dressed buffalo during November and December at prices ranging from 15 to 25 cents a pound.

OCEAN SMITH IS STILL ON STAND

Case Is Good For Another Two Or Three Days—Attendants Fall Asleep.

TORONTO, Sept 19. — Ocean George Smith, Chief accountant of the Home Bank accused of willfully making, preparing and concurring in the mailing of false returns to the government, continued on the stand before Judge Coatsworth to-day to tell his story how he was not responsible for the policy of the bank.

Gordon Shaver, his counsel, kept Smith on the stand all during the morning session. He had been over six hours on the stand up to the noon adjournment and D. L. McCarthy, K.C., will yet take some time in cross examination of the accused Points which Smith made in the evidence to-day include these: the bank's books had been regularly audited. In marking appropriations in the books he had always acted under instructions, mostly verbal.

He was still on the Canadian property company board and signing documents as such for the liquidator He had been placed on the Canadian Property Company, the banks holding company, without his knowledge and had no money in it.

He had under Col Mason's orders marked the payments to Haney among the assets because Mason said the $30,000 would be paid back

The news of the bank's failure came to him, "as a surprise and a shock" and he went home to bed after he heard it. He had to have a doctor.

He contradicted the story of J. H. Kennedy, who had told of being fired by General Mason in 1916 and said that Kennedy, according to the record was with the banks several months after that.

The case may now last until Tuesday according to predictions of the lawyers. S. Casey Wood and J. F. M. Stewart, director, were again on hand to-day and F. J. B. Russell an other director, stayed but a few minutes.

A Long Trial

The trial of Ocean G. Smith, is stretching out close to the ten day limit. It has gone eight and half days up to last night, and looks good to go into next week.

It is becoming a bit monotonous too. Yesterday one of the court attendants fell asleep in his chair while the accused was being examined, and it was also noted that a couple of the spectators were dozing in the nice warm courtroom. The gallery was full yesterday.

Up-to-date these are some of the statistics of the trial of Smith. Witnesses examined 42, exhibits filed 175 lawyers and experts engaged 13, pages of typed evidence 1,085. To-day will see the examination of Smith concluded by his counsel and then D. L. McCarthy, K. C., Crown Counsel, will be given a lively cross-examination of the accused's chief accountant. After that will come the long argument, both on the motion of Gordon Shaver for a non suit and on the merits of the case itself. It will hardly be over until Monday.

CHOIR ENTERTAINED.

St. Paul's Church Choir Motored To Chemong—Guests of Sheriff J. F. A. and Mrs. Hall.

On the invitation of Sheriff Hall and Mrs. Hall, the choir of St. Paul's Church, with their friends, motored to Chemong, arriving at the cottage about 8 o'clock last night, when their hosts had provided a most delectable corn roast, with all the other perquisites necessary to tempt the palate.

After a delightful evening spent in social intercourse, song and such other amusements as are dear to the heart of youth, they returned home fully satisfied with the outing.

The choir feel deeply grateful for this pleasant evening, and unanimously voted, not only their thanks, but that Sheriff Hall and Mrs. Hall have no peers as entertainers.

Woman Slain By Convict She Helped From Prison

PASADENA, Calif. Sept. 20.... — (Canadian Press). — Mrs. Clifton Hunn, wife of a wealthy Chicago business man, was killed last night by an ex-convict, she once befriended, who the police say, smashed her head with a hammer, shot her through the heart and looted her apartment of gems valued at twenty thousand dollars.

The police to-day are seeking as Mrs. Hunn's slayer, Harry Connor, alias Harry Garbutt who according to detectives was released from an Illinois prison through her influence after serving part of his sentence for robbery and who was aided with her money to start life anew.

LAME BESIEGED AN EVANGELIST

Dr. Charles Price Claims Two Instant Healings in Massey Hall.

LIKE PILGRIMAGES.

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—Some remarkable manifestations of faith were in evidence at a service conducted by Dr. Charles S. Price in Massey Hall, last night. Scenes reminiscent of the annual pilgrimages to the Lourdes and St. Anne De Beaupre were enacted, when the service ended. The infirm and lame went to the evangelist in the hope that the laying on of his hands coupled with their own belief could cure their own ills. Some of those present state that it was impossible to judge of the success or failure of the "cures," but Dr. Price avers that two instant healings were effected.

Then while that huge crowd put its heart and soul into the singing "The Great Physician now is near," Dr. Price called on the faithful who wished to be healed to come to the front.

Quite beyond description was the scene as the first suppliant, an old lary slowly mounted the platform, assisted by Miss Evelyn Carvel, Dr. Price's assistant. The audience had been asked to pray for the suffering and heads were bowed and lips moved silently during the slow progress. Some of the more excited were unable to restrain from a frenzy of religious fervour and shouted words of praise.

TORONTO JEWS OPEN A SCHOOL

New Building To Be Devoted To Teaching of Religion In Hebrew.

COST $200,000.

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—On Sunday, Toronto's local Jewish community will celebrate the practical completion of a new school for religious instruction, a talmud torah.

The new school building, which has been completed at a cost of approximately $200,000 is thoroughly modern in every respect.

The work of the new school will be entitrely supplementary to that of the public schools and will consist largely of instruction in the Hebrew scriptures and ancient jewish culture. All instruction will be given in Hebrew.

HELP THE KIDDIES.

Don't neglect to buy a tag on Children's Aid Tag Day, Saturday, September 27, as your contribution, with that of others, is badly needed to help some kiddies along those walks of life which lead to community respect and good citizenship. Remember, the Tag Day method of raising funds for so worthy a cause as this is one of the principle sources of revenue upon which the Children's Aid Society depends. By the Tag Day plan the public are enabled to individually "do their bit" in protecting dependent little ones from those character-polluting influences which beset every child not safeguarded by moral and Christian environments.

To train a poor child bereaved of its parents, or one whose parents are unworthy of their trust, in the way it should go, requires that sympathetic guardians which the Children's Aid Society ensures, either in their admirably supervised Shelter or in other desirable homes. And from their annual report of last year one gleans some idea of the scope of their work in that connection. For during the twelve months ending October 31, 1923, this organization placed 34 wards in comfortable homes, 18 children who are not wards were brought to the Shelter, eight little ones were made wards of the Society, while the welfare of 48 wards in foster homes was reported on.

Such, in part, is the worthy cause for which the Children's Aid will make their annual appeal next Saturday—let that appeal be as generous as your means will allow, in the interest of little folks of tender years who cannot help themselves.

LEAGUE TO FRAME A BINDING TREATY

Atmosphere of Optimism Pervades Council In Closing Days.

(By Henry Woods, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

GENEVA, Sept. 20.—The present session of the Assembly of the League of Nations may continue in session until after September 27th, the proposed date of adjournment in order to complete its work of framing a world treaty of arbitration security and disarmament. President Motta announced today.

Motta announced to-day. With success apparently about to crown their efforts to obtain basis for prevention of future wars, the league leaders bent their energy toward pushing through the final details of the programme proposed by Premiers MacDonald of England and Herriot of France before the end of 1924 assembly.

There was an atmosphere of decided optimism as the league's commissions resumed their work today.

Must Be Ratified.

No international conference on the reduction of armaments is possible, unless the Parliaments of both England and France ratify the proposed protocol on arbitration and security. That fact emerges clearly from the situation here in consequence of statements made by leaders of the League of Nations Assembly.

An English journalist having expressed his doubts that either the British Parliament or those of the Dominions would ratify the protocol, a prominent member of the French delegation promptly came back with the remark that, if England did not ratify, the world might be assured that no conference would be held.

The Frenchmen are proceeding on the theory that the London Parliament will back up the signature of the British delegation. The French leader said, "You can bank upon it that if we approve this protocol here it will not only receive the sanction of the French Government but also of the French Parliament."

SYOSSET, Sept. 20.— (Canadian Press).— The Long Island visit of the Prince of Wales will come to an end To-morrow night when he will quit the scene of many dinners, dances and polo games to travel to his ranch at High River, Alta., where he will spend a month looking over his lands.

Final plans for the trip of the Royal party from Syosset to Montreal and thence to Alberta will be completed today. It is expected that they will travel by yacht across Long Island Sound and board a special train at New London, Conn.

The Canadian Pacific Railway and The Canadian People

IN order that the people of Canada may have a clear understanding of the relation of the Canadian Pacific to the national interest and to the interest of the people individually, we have chosen the press of Canada as the medium through which to make a series of statements in which will be frankly told the story of the beginning and development of the road, and its services to Canada.

We believe the people of Canada will be interested in these statements. We believe when the people of Canada know and understand the relation of the Canadian Pacific to the country that the company will continue to receive its due measure of esteem and public confidence. The Canadian Pacific frankly desires this esteem and confidence because it is good business for a great corporation to be on terms of good will with its customers—the public.

Canada and the Canadian Pacific Railway must continue together the work of nation-building that was begun the day the C.P.R. commenced to fling its steel rails from coast to coast. This co-operation has been in the nature of a great partnership for the advancement of mutual interests.

It is one of the proudest pages of Canadian Pacific history that no government, no province, no community has ever lost a dollar through this national partnership. The record of the railway for forty years reveals one unbroken course of constructive achievement.

The creed of the Canadian Pacific has been to carry its own burdens, and to proceed with cautious and well-measured plans for the steady, forward march of its own and the national progress. Exploitation is unknown in its annals, despite the tremendous difficulties of financing in the lean eighties. For every dollar received from the nation, the Canadian Pacific has contributed an abundant dividend in national progress.

The partnership of mutual advancement must remain unbroken. It must not be weakened nor jeopardized by misunderstanding or lack of knowledge of the facts, so that the Canadian Pacific may continue to do its full share toward the greater development of Canada, as it has so abundantly proven its ability to do in the past.

The Canadian Pacific asks only to be judged by its past record and to be measured only by the service it renders. It makes no appeal for business on grounds of sentiment, but, confronted by such appeals, it does ask that its national significance, its record as a nation-builder and its world-wide services to Canada, be remembered.

Chairman and President.

CROP REPORTS

APPLE GROWERS HAD FIELD DAY IN BANNER BELT

Recent Gala Occasion Was Productive of Much Good.

NEWS OF COBOURG

Apples Must Be Sprayed, is the Big Lesson Learned.

COBOURG, Sept. 20.—The apple-growers' field day, held in the interests of the orchardists of Northumberland and Durham Counties recently, proved to be an interesting and instructive occasion. These counties constitute the banner apple-producing belt of Central Ontario, and some forty farmers and orchardists assembled in the different orchards visited in this section. It was arranged for by the Agricultural representatives of the counties. The apple orchards of Northumberland County were visited in the forenoon, and in the afternoon a number of orchards in Durham came under inspection.

Mr. J. P. Phillips, residing near Cobourg, is believed to have the best orchard in the united counties. Mr. W. E. Hare, another Cobourg grower, also has a fine orchard. In these two, the advantages of careful spraying were evident. It was noted also that in an orchard near Mr. Hare's, where the crop had not been sprayed, few of the apples were fit for commercial purposes. It was evident that to spray must be the motto of every man who wishes to grow a high grade of apples.

Mr. F. C. Paterson, Agricultural representative, Port Hope, conducted the tour of inspection, and Prof. Ceasar, Guelph, and Mr. Harry Smith, former agricultural representative for Northumberland County, were both present and conducted interesting conferences on fruit raising.

After dinner, the company went on to inspect the orchards of Durham County. There were visited the orchards of Mr. W. F. Rickard, Mr. Geo. C. Wright, Mr. Wm. E. Beman, of Newcastle, and those of Major R. J. Gill, Mr. Gerald Talcott and Mr. R. E. Stevens, Bowmanville.

Some of these orchards were sprayed under the direction and supervision of Prof. L. Ceaser, acting in conjunction with the staff of the County Office of Agriculture, while others were sprayed along lines practised on supervised orchards.

Every orchard visited showed the good results in the clean fruit, mostly free from scab and worms, of thorough, careful and systematic spraying. Some old trees of snow apples in Major Gill's orchard, which had been sprayed, had crops of one hundred per cent. scabby apples, while other trees, which had been sprayed, had a similar percentage of clean fruit.

Mr. Gerald Talcott, who resides just west of Bowmanville, has a fine crop of apples. It is estimated that it will yield six hundred barrels. Mr. W. E. Beman and Mr. W. H. Gibson, Newcastle, also have fine orchards. Mr. Beman, speaking from experience, stated that about half-past three o'clock in the morning was a good time to spray.

When discussing dusting, another man advocated working by moonlight at nights, which led a farmer to remark that things had come to such a pass that, to grow fruit for commercial purposes, the orchardist might as well make up his mind to stay right in the orchard with the spraying outfit during the growing season.

EXPERIMENT STATION.

A Government station for the study of range livestock and forage crops has been made out of a 57,000-acre tract that comprises most of the old Fort Keogh Military Reservation at Miles City, Mont. Two railroads and the Yellowstone Trail cross the territory, making it easily accessible to visitors.

Twelve Year Old Hen Mothers Duck Family

People often forget to give due credit to their humble dumb servants, but many remember them and are grateful. One of our subscribers, in telling us of a hen which she has personally watched for many years, writes to us as follows:

"I noticed an article in your paper recently concerning a hen that had died being nine years old. Well, we can beat that out here. Mrs. G. Page brought a large brown hen here ten years ago, and she was two years old then. I understand she has raised a flock of chickens every year except two, when she raised two flocks of ducks. N .H. Wallace bought her from Stanley Gordon last spring, and she sat four weeks on duck eggs and no ducks. So he bought a bunch a few days old for her and she made a very careful mother, and the ducks are ready for the table now, but the old hen drooped a few days ago and died. We should like to hear if anyone has an older hen than this. She was over 12 years old and faithful to the end."

Can any subscriber vouch for an older hen than this?

HAY CROP GOOD NEAR MARMORA

James Jones Has Had Two Big Crops—Bountiful Fruit.

WILD APPLE TREE

MARMORA, Sept. 20.—As mentioned in a previous harvesting report, James Jones leads the farmers of North Marmora with his hay crops this year. From the first crop he has filled his two barns and has some fifteen loads stalked out in the fields. His second crop is also very bountiful.

Potatoes are selling in town at 75c a bushel.

Apples, plums, peaches, pears and melons are fruit crops which are finding a ready market with housewives at present. These, with all kinds of vegetables, are being brought in daily by the growers from various more southern points.

Aster blooms are prolific at present and dahlias are in full bloom.

The unusual is to be seen in the case of a wild apple tree, which is reported to be out in bloom for the second time.

EGGS SHOWING IMPROVEMENT

Eggs are getting better.

They showed improvements in quality during 1923 over preceding years, according to a recent report of the Bureau of Chemistry.

This improvement, officials believe, may be attributed chiefly to the growing practice of candling eggs before shpiment.

Many of the larger shippers apparently have come to the realization that it is more profitable to candle eggs before shipment than to run the risk of having their shipments seized, reconditioned or destroyed because of spoilage that might easily have been prevented.

Also, favorable "egg weather" prevailed during the season when spoilage is most likely.

SOURING CREAM DOES NOT HELP INCREASE TEST

Increase in Test Under Certain Conditions Due to Evaporation.

ACIDITY INCREASES

Although Test is Higher the Pounds of Fat Remain the Same.

By O. F. HUNGIKER.

THIS question of whether sour cream tests higher than sweet cream is not a new one. It has been asked ever since sour cream has been sold and bought, and it is coming up periodically. So far as I am aware, nothing has ever appeared in print that would indicate that this subject has been subjected to careful experimental study. Notwithstanding this fact, answers to these inquiries have often been very emphatic and profuse denying that cream test is increased when the cream has been held enough

It is one thing to believe that, on account of certain scientific principles involved, certain results will happen or will not happen, but it is quite another matter to substantiate that belief by actual facts obtained as the result of unbiased study. It is not reasonable to assume that when the farmer claims time and again that he gets a higher test for sour cream than for sweet cream his statements are erroneous, just because scientifically it is hard to see how that would be possible.

In order, therefore, to be able to answer this question correctly, a careful investigation was made. In this study sweet cream, or cream testing not to exceed .2 per cent. acid, was divided up and kept for three weeks in different cream cans. Some of these cans were kept in the cooler, while others were held at room temperature. In each case one can was tightly sealed, another can was not tightly sealed but had the lid tilted, and in still another can the cream was stirred each day. Samples were also kept of this same cream under the same temperature conditions and, furthermore, a number of Babcock cream test bottles were charged with the regulation amount of cream for the fat test at the beginning and kept that way during the period of the test. The cream in all cans in all the sample tubes, and in the Babcock test bottles were tested at the end of one week, at the end of two weeks, and at the end of three weeks. The results obtained and conclusions drawn are as follows:

Does Not Increase.

1. The mere souring of the cream alone does not increase the test. If there is any change in the test due to souring alone, it is inclined to be a decrease rather than an increase in the percentage of fat, but this decrease is so slight that it is of no serious consequence. The cause of the slight decrease rather than an increase in the tendency of the butterfat of slightly decompose, resulting in a very small additional loss of volatile fatty acids during performance of the Babcock test.

May Increase Under Certain Conditions

2. In the case of cream held at room temperature in cans not tightly sealed, but with the lid on the can in a tilted position, there was a very marked increase in the test. This increase amounted to about 1 per cent. after the first week, about 2½ per cent. after the second week, and about 5 per cent. after the third week.

3. The increase in the test of the cream which was held in cans not completely sealed and at room temperature is not due to the development of acid in the cream, but it is due to the evaporation of moisture from the cream.

4. The above assertion is conclusively proven by the fact that while the acidity increased practically to the same extent in all cans, the increase in test occurred only in the cans kept at room temperature and which were not completely sealed. It did not occur in the completely sealed cans kept at room temperature nor in the case of the test made of cream that was transferred to the Babcock test bottles at the beginning of the experiment and tested at intervals of one, two or three weeks.

Acidity Increases.

The acidity in all the cans held at room temperature increased from .2 per cent. at the beginning of the test to 1.2 per cent. after the first week, 1.6 per cent. after the second week, and 2.38 per cent. after the third week. Inasmuch as the cream that was transferred to the test bottles at the beginning of the experiment was kept at the same temperature as the room temperature cans, it is safe to assume that the acidity of the cream in the test bottles increased to the same extent and was equally high at the end of each of the three weeks as it was in the cans.

5. That the increase in the test in the incompletely sealed cans at room temperature was due to evaporation is further proven by the fact that in the case of the completely sealed cans, when the lid was opened, the underside of the lid was completely covered with large drops of water which ran back into the cream. In the case of the partly opened cans, this moisture obviously escaped.

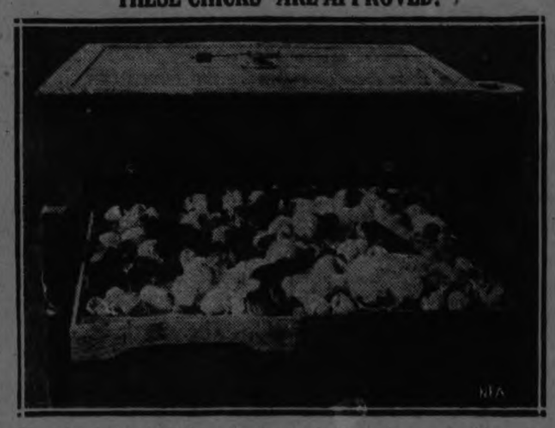
6. Inasmuch as it did not seem very feasible to weigh the cans after each week, because of the numerous samples that were taken from the cans, the weight of the cream was not determined, but the fact that the increase in test was due to evaporation of moisture from the cream makes it certain that the increase in the fat test was accompanied by a corresponding loss of weight of the cream so that, although the test was higher, the pounds of fat contained in the cream remained the same.

Nothing Gained By Holding.

7. In conclusion, I desire to emphasize that while the test of cream that is held for a week or longer in incompletely sealed cans and at room temperature does increase, and while this increase is accompanied by the souring of the cream, there is nothing gained, as far as the producer is concerned, by furnishing sour cream instead of sweet cream, but much may be lost. The pounds of fat paid for will be exactly the same, but the quality of the cream that it held long enough to sour is obviously inferior to the quality of the cream not so held and delivered promptly, and if the creamery pays for cream on the quality basis, as it should do and as many creameries do, the farmer will not get more for his sour cream but will get less, the inferior quality the lower price.

It should be understood in this discussion that excessively sour cream and old cream is more difficult to test accurately than fresh, sweek cream because of the greater difficulty of securing a truly representative sample. When held long enough to become very sour, there is a tendency for the greater bulk of the butterfat to rise and to form a leathery layer near the surface that is much richer in fat than the remainder of the cream in the can. In transportation and by just ordinary stirring this thick, leathery cream breaks up into lumps of all sizes.

THESE CHICKS ARE APPROVED.



These incubator chicks have the approval of poultry authorities for good health and future egg production. They're the products of "certified" and "standardized" hens.

CROWS TAKE SEED AT KING'S WHARF

Farmers Seek Way to Prevent Ruining of Their Fall Sowing.

KING'S WHARF, Sept. 20.—Mrs. G. Kimble of Bobcaygeon was through here Friday buying lambs. He bought a car load from Jos. Herlihey, Eugene Madigan, Thos. Begley, Patrick Perdue and Jos. Guiry.

Mr. P. Perdue shipped a fine veal calf through the U.F.O. Monday and received 8 cents per pound. The calf was only 7 weeks old and weighed 240 pounds.

The recent rains have delayed harvesting but in the few dry days most of the people got finished.

Most farmers around here have their fall wheat sown but as usual the crows are going to take the seed if something can't be done to stop them.

The buckwheat is ripe and is an abundant crop and the people are cutting it but it is very hard to cut as it is badly lodged. It is so heavy and has to be cut one way.

MARKET AT HOME.

Forty boys of Roosevelt County, N. M., who grew pure grain sorghum and broom corn seed last year, found a ready market for their product in their own neighborhoods. Exhibits from the boys' there the matter would end as far as dor of a glass bottle. This bottle for fields were shown at the County Fair and more than 5,000 pounds of the seed sold immediately.

CORNS

Lift Off—No Pain!

Doesn't hurt one bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers.

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn soft, corn or corn between the toes, and foot calluses, without soreness or irritation.

GREEN FEED KEEPS UP THE MILK FLOW

Oats and Peas Mixed Are Old Favorite—Clover Good.

By C. W. B.

Short pastures and flies combine to lessen the milk flow at this season of the year. Yet it is important to keep the flow up to the highest point. Once let a cow drop off in her yield and it will be both difficult and expensive to restore the flow of milk to the amount the cow would naturally be yielding. For this reason the provision of succulent green feeds to supplement the pasture is attaining greater popularity each year among dairymen.

Almost any sort of such green feed may be used. It will all depend on what is available. Oats and peas in a mixture are an old standby. Green clover or alfalfa is without a rival. But what if none of these are available? Generally there is green corn. Most farmers dislike to cut the corn for this purpose. But the small amount required will far outweigh in the returns obtained when this corn is thus used to keep up the steady milk flow.

Patch Is Planted Thickly.

It is because of this dislike to cut the regular field crop that I have followed the plan of planting a patch of corn each year for the sole purpose of having green feed for the cows at this time. It is so good a plan that I urge every farmer to follow it. The corn is planted thick and as early as possible in the spring. An acre or two will suffice for a small herd of cows. The corn is cultivated as the regular crop, and now that our pasture is short we are using it as needed. I always have some green corn available for green feed each year.

We feed the corn on pasture, scattering the stalk on the grass. An average small armful is allotted to each cow. The corn may be fed direct from the field or hauled out daily if many cows are kept. Our preference is to feed at night after milking. This corn gives best results according to my records and observation when fed after the ears have formed and the kernels are approaching the glazing point. Sweet corn is ideal for such cow feed.

The most simple way, of course, for providing a supply of succulent feed is to depend upon the silo. This masters the situation. The silage can be fed with the least trouble of any of the supplemental feeds. The main thing is to have a green feed of some kind, otherwise the cows will fall off in their milk yield.

FATTEN DUCKS EASILY

Plenty of Water, Sand and Green Feed Are Essential.

In fattening ducks the principal practical points I observe during the last four weeks before marketing are the supplying of an ample ration of two parts wheat bran, two parts corn meal, 5 per cent. beef scrap mixed with water to a crumbly state and fed in shallow troughs. Plenty of water, sand and green feed such as grass are also supplied.

I find the ducks do best when fattened for market if they have all they want to eat and a reasonable amount of free range. They must not have too much range, or they will run off all their flesh. Probably a water range is not best. Most commercial duck raisers allow the ducklings to run together in close quarters until marketed. Then the best are sorted out, the home flock given wider liberty, a grass range or pond, and encouraged to develop strength rather than fat.

"Don't you think this is a perfect duck of a hat?"

"Personally, I prefer a duck with a smaller bill."

FLOWER SHOW'S CLOSING NIGHT WAS A SUCCESS

Entire Two Days Full of Interest To Lovers of Flowers.

THE PRIZE LIST.

Entertainment Programme Featured Last Night's Show.

The Flower Show, put on in the Armouries on Thursday and Friday of this week, under the auspices of the local branch of the Horticultural Society, of which Mr. R. W. Cormack is president, was a decided success. The officials in charge and Mr. Leon Frazer, the energetic secretary of the society to whose unflagging efforts and untiring assistance so much of the success of the show was due, must feel pleased at the excellent results achieved in the first big Flower Show of this kind held under the auspices of the local organization. Last evening, nearly eight hundred people attended the exhibition of flowers and many appreciative comments were voiced over the splendid display.

A very fine entertainment programme featured last evening's session. The children's fancy costume parade was interesting. Although there were few entries, only ten children taking part in the affair there were some ingenious contrivances in the group. Judges for the parade were Mrs. J. Allen, Mrs. M. H. Park, Miss M. Ross and Mr. R. M. Glover. Prizes of a sweater, a fountain pen and an Eversharp pencil, donated by the Kiwanis Club, which sponsored the parade, were presented to first, second and third prize-winners respectively; Jean McKone, representing a Peony, in striking rose pink and green paper costume; Gwen Lucas, an Aster, in an effective paper dress of slashed mauve and green paper, with flat cap of the same, and little Phyllis Pink, swathed cunningly in the close green and white of an Easter Lily. Honorable mention was made of the Tiger Lily outfit of Elizabeth Mulholland, who wore a bright dress and large pointed cap of orange also the crimson red outfit of Dorothy Cooney, representing a dark red aster. Small cash prizes were also given to the other contestants, little boys and girls whose original costumes included representations of a cauliflower with tight green folds enshrouding the little lady's body and head and terminating in green shoots surround in a flat white top, a pumpkin, with barrel-like, rounded orange skirts, a water-lily with green leaved pads on a white dress, China aster, with funny little body in green smock and pink trousers his face adorned with a fierce mandarin moustache, on his head a huge Chinese cap of asters and a Scotch thistle, a small lad in Scotch plaids.

The programme opened with several vocal selections by a children's chorus, directed by Miss M. R. Ranjie. The early nature of the school term prevented a gathering of children from all the schools of the city and the 75 little boys and girls who sang so well last night were mainly recruited from the senior classes of the Queen Alexandra School. They gave, in fine style, renditions of "O Canada," "It's Only a Small Bit of Bunting," and "Ye Banks and Braes of Bonny Doon."

Nine braw pipers in the full Cameron tartan represented the Caledonian Pipe Band and played several stirring selections. They made a brave showing and their music filled the big enclosure with the bright skirl of the pipes. At the side of the leader marched little Joe Leith, the seven year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Stroyan Leith, playing his small pipes as briskly as any of his seniors.

Two pretty interpretive dances were given in costume by Miss C. Littlefield's classes from the Y. W. C. A., with Miss Gwen Donley playing accompaniments for the senior girls' dance, the Russan Rhapsody, and the Dutch Playtime number of the juniors.

Messrs. Jno. Smith and R. Handry, the "Singing Scots," two members of the Pipe Band, sang in solo and duet, their two good voices receiving much applause. Mr. Smith sang "The Wee Hoose Amang the Heather," Mr. Hendry "Bella, the Belle o' Dunoon," and a duet was the bright "It's a Fine Thing to Sing."

The orchestra conducted by Professor Gliddon also gave some well-rendered selections of appropriate music.

The presentation of prizes in the annual competitions conducted by the Horticultural Society was made last evening by Mayor J. J. Turner, the best kept grounds, surrounding as follows: Class A, open to all for premisesff 1st prize, A. W. Cressman cup for one year, to Mrs. W. Wood, 300 Pearl avenue; 2nd prize, $3, to Mrs. R. R. Hall, 459 Reid street; 3rd prize, $2, to J. J. Turner, 515 Water street.

Class F, for the best kept factory grounds: 1st prize, $3, to J. J. Turner and Sons, Ltd., 280 George street; 2nd prize, $2, to the Canadian National Railway, at King street; 3rd prize, $1, to Canadian Woollens, Ltd., McDonnel street.

Class H, for school and public institution grounds: 1st prize, $3, to the Peterborough Clinic, Charlotte street, A Youngs, caretaker; 2nd prize, $2, to the Public Library, J. Matheson, caretaker; 3rd prize, $1, to the Peterboro Collegiate Institute, W. Northcott, caretaker.

The evening concluded with a dance in the band room, Taylor's orchestra providing music.

Mr. Richard Marshall, of Toronto, a veteran flower grower of seventy-seven years of age, and caretaker of the Queen's Park in that city, did all the judging for the Show. Mr. Marshall made very complimgentary comments about Peterboro's Flower Show, characterizing it as one of the best ever seen by him.

An offer made by Mr. J. H. Callander that should have a prompt response is one made to all the children who took part in the parade at the Armories last evening. If these children will send in their names and addresses to Mr. Callander at The Examiner Office, he will mail each one a parcel of gladioli bulbs for spring planting.

Comment was made last evening on the excellent patrol and guard work done in connection with the exhibits by the Boy Scouts of Ashburnham Troop, who attended in their Scout outfits, under Scoutmaster Sedgewick and Assistand Scoutmaster Kraut.

How Not To Make Money Told In Seven Lessons

1. Loaf around in town instead of being at home and tending to business.

2. Hang on to old scrubby methods of doing things instead of listening to agricultural colleges.

3. Raise only wheat, because there are only 150 working days, while in farming with the "H" (hog, herd and hen) family there are 365 days a year.

4. Keep only one or two scrub beef cows, if any at all.

5. Harvest wheat and corn only once a year instead of harvesting milk and cream twice a day.

6. Let Bossie go unmilked on a Sunday evening because you want to see your friends.

7. Sell some of your cows during harvest because you haven't got time to feed to them.

FARMERS WORRY BECAUSE PRICES NOT EQUITABLE

Best Price Mentioned for Wheat is $1.20 a Bushel.

SEEK INCREASE

Bran, Shorts, Flour and Bread Jumped far Ahead of Grain.

By G. E. STAPLES.

CAVAN, Sept. 20.—Threshing is one of the chief activities just now in this vicinity. Isaac Fallis threshed for J. W. Perrin on Monday and Tuesday. His grain yielded well. On Monday afternoon, A Fisher moved his threshing outfit to David White's, intending to thresh there as soon as the neighbours were through at Mr. Perrin's.

Wide Range on Yield.

There is a wide spread in the yield per acre of grain this year, wheat ranging from twenty to forty bushels per acre and other grains in proportion.

This is no doubt due to the lay of the land as well as to the fertility. This season not suiting low-lying land.

Now that fall wheat is being sown for the 1925 harvest, and the 1924 crop being threshed, farmers are discussing the much talked of increase in price, with all its accruing advantages. So far the highest price mentioned for wheat has been $1.20 a bushel. They are wondering why so many weeks back the prices of bran, shorts, flour, cereals and bread took such a jump. The price of these commodities are far in advance of the price of wheat. As is usually the case, the middlemen are the ones who make the biggest profit, while the farmer, who does the work, may be thankful if he comes out with his income equal to his expenses.

Won Many Prizes.

Harry Seymour, who owns a fine herd of Holstein cattle, showed twenty head at Peterboro Exhibition and got twenty-four prizes. This brought over two hundred dollars.

Threshing Under Way—Fall Wheat Being Sown.

DOWNEYVILLE, Sept. 20. — Threshing has once again began in this locality. Wm. Bell is in the district again with his splendid outfit, both grain and clover mills and threshes the alsike and clover when he threshes grain. The grain is yielding good but the smut is very bad.

The harvest is all finished around here and the farmers are getting ready for the fall wheat.

PENNANT FEVER IN WASHINGTON

Politics Forgotten In Excitement of American League's Final Games.

STREETS JAMMED.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 —The exciting race between the New York and Washington baseball clubs for the American League pennant is absorbing the attention of everybody in Washington—even to the exclusion of the national political campaign for the Presidency.

From the newsboy in the street to the official in high office the game contest of the Griffmen—as Clark C. Griffith's team is now better known popularly than by their former nicknames of Senators and Nationals—the contest has developed a fever heat of excitement such as the nation's capital has never before experienced in the history of professional ball.

The Washington ball team was for so many years such a consistent tailender that supporters of National pastime in the capital were rather unprepared for the remarkable reversal of form the Griffmen have shown under the leadership of "Bucky" Harris, their second baseman and pilot who is the youngest manager in either of the major leagues. The thing that has caught the fancy of official and the average Washington fan the most about the Washington team this year has been its fighting spirit—and it is due mainly to this that the Griffmen are now real contenders with the Yankees for the pennant.

Thursday's victory over Cleveland when Washington came from behind a four-run lead and won out with five runs scored in the final inning, is a fair sample of the "gameness" of the rew piloted by "Bucky" Harris and it is this spirit that has brought the national capital to the point where it actually idolizes the Griffmen and will be on the verge of death from heart failure if the Yankees nose them out in the closing stages of the most grueling pennant race either league has seen in years.

Excitement over the pennant race has become so great in Washington that downtown streets have become impassable in front of newspaper offices, where each game in which the Griffmen figure is being repeated play by play from elaborate scoreboards. Interest is just as great in the games in which the Yankees figure, and one large Washington newspaper uses a megaphone to announce to the crowd, play by play whether the New York team is winning or losing.

Washington, as a whole, is anxious for the successful materialization of the best chance it ever had to figure in a world series, not only because it wants Walter Johnson, its pitching ace, who has never played with any other major league team, and who has been wearing a Washington uniform for seventeen successive seasons, to be able to demonstrate what he can do if given the chance to play in the annual baseball classic.

A prominent local sculptor is making a statute of Walter Johnson, and a committee was formed in Washington a few weeks ago to raise funds for a suitable testimonial to the great pitcher, who announced at the beginning of the present season his intention to retire from major league baseball. The ambition of Johnson, who is now very well off financially, is to manage a ball club of his own. His present purpose is to purchase the franchise of some minor league club after leaving the Washington club.

Representative Mae E. Nolan of California—the only woman member of Congress—has joined with enthusiasm the movement to give Johnson Washington's baseball hero, a fitting testimonial.

"Permit me to contribute in money and service to the Walter Johnson testimonial," Mrs. Nolan advised the committee. "He deserves all we can give him. If Washington wins the world's series—and we will—I will introduce a resolution in Congress to make Walter's birthday a legal holiday in the District of Columbia. The outstanding hero of our national pastime should be thus honoured as a constant reminder to the youth of the country to play the game square."

GIBBONS KEPT BACK BY HIS HARD LUCK

Fine Morals, Good Education and Polished Manner Injured Career as a Fighter.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—(United Press).—Tom Gibbons, the St. Paul boxer, never was a champion and probably never will be one. No lack of class or ambition prevented him from reaching the official top in his business. He was kept back by a succession of bad breaks that surely has made him the hard-luck champion, if nothing else.

One of the greatest drawbacks that handicapped Gibbons was his disposition. He is too darn nice to get to the top, because success in the boxing business entails a certain degree of advantage-taking, and Gibbons considers the other fellow.

His most recent bad break came when he signed articles to take a very reasonable percentage of the gate receipts for meeting Gene Tunney, American light heavyweight champion, in Madison Square Garden during November.

It had been said that Gibbons demanded $100,000 for appearing on the Milk Fund benefit card earlier in the season. If he did demand that much money he did no more than any other boxer of his class and drawing power. But we have reasons to believe he didn't.

If Gibbons considered himself a $100,000 fighter, he would not have listened to an indoor date for meeting Tunney. Little, 10-cent fighters of second-rate class refuse to listen to any offers for indoor shows last winter and they are doing the same thing this year, but when Tex Rickard handed him the articles he signed without a word.

Tunney had other ideas, however, when Rickard went after him. He didn't actually refuse to sign, but Rickard said a few days ago that he had almost abandoned hope for the match.

"I have signed articles in the safe from Gibbons. But Tunney has not signed. You can use your own judgment in finding the reason why the match has not been made," Rickard said.

Tunney wouldn't take the match, even after doing a lot of talking that Gibbons wouldn't fight him, and that he would take him any time a promoter could catch Gibbons. Gibbons was "caught" and then Tunney ran away.

The promoters of the Milk Fund show have no reason to criticize Gibbons. They did him a fine trick when they signed him up two years ago to meet Floyd Johnson. Gibbons went to a lot of expense for preliminary training and then was notified that he ought to accept a release and that Johnston wouldn't take him. Instead of seeking redress in the courts or instead of complaining, Gibbons accepted the violation of his contract. Even when the promoters panned him for not taking another chance with them this summer, he did not answer them.

Gibbons lost another match three years ago when Tex Rickard signed him to meet Georges Carpentier after the Frenchman had been stopped by Dempsey. Gibbons waited around and turned down other business until he became satisfied that the match could not be made.

While the managers of rival boxers and their fighters have been squawking that Gibbons would not take anything but a setup, Rickard's estimate of the St. Paul boxer does not bear them out.

"He's the easiest boxer I have done business with," Rickard said. "The trouble I have found is that I can get Gibbons, but I can't get anyone to fight him."

Gibbons went to England to fight Jack Bloomfield and got only $15,000 of the $50,000 that had been promised him. The wise crackers said he was a dumb business man. They didn't say that about Pete Herman when he went over to fight Jimmy Wilde and came back with a $20,000 check that never has been cashed. It was not good. If some other fighter had gone to England, and the match had been well managed, Gibbons then might have been criticized.

The point in this connection, is that Gibbons has enough sportsmanship in him to take a chance and gamble with promoters. The attitude of other fighters would indicate that such sportsmanship is not to be desired in the boxing business. Gibbons gambled with the promoters in Shelby last summer, and lost. He fought Jack Dempsey and didn't get a cent. There isn't another fighter in the business who would have gone into the ring under the same conditions.

One of the amusing features of the Gibbons-Tunney match is that Tunney is running around trying to force Mike McTigue into the ring with him. He claims that he has a signed contract in Rickard's office for a fight with McTigue and that the world's champion will not sign to meet him.

Rickard has a signed contract from Gibbons to meet Tunney and Tunney will not sign. Tunney ought to explain why he is unwilling to fight Gibbons instead of making public demands for an explanation from McTigue for the same thing.

It is rather unusual that Tunney allows his name to be used in the mud thrown at Gibbons because he is such a fine fellow and such a credit to the game. Gibbons and Tunney are the two highest boxers in the business. They are both good citizens of fine morals, good education and extremely likeable personalities. They are a credit to the game and they could do much to counteract the effect of commercialism on the public if they would get together.

It is entirely up to Tunney now, as Gibbons has signed.

RUGBY NEWS

There will be a three team league in city rugby this season. This was finally decided at the meeting of the rugby enthusiasts held in Central Park the other afternoon. A definite promise of a team was received from the C.G.E., Crescents and Excelsiors (Collegiate Old Boys) for this league and with luck another team may possibly be added.

Peterborough would like to enter a team in the Intermediate series of the O.R.F.U. but no local could be secured. It was hoped that a nearby town might form a team and play a schedule with the locals but it was found that rugby east of Toronto is about dead and this hope had to be abandoned. So it is not likely that the blue an white will be represented in the intermediate circles, but if the players shape up well there is one chance that a team may be thrown in to meet the winner of the Toronto group.

There will be a junior team for certain as the Excelsiors are confident that they have the nucleus of a splendid team and when the practices begin there will likely be a great many hefty young aspirants to the team who will get down to training and take the game seriously. Lindsay promises to have a team on hand to enter the group which will make the locals step.

University of Toronto schools, owing to the large number that attend the school, always manage to have a smooth rugby team and this year will be no exception. They held their first practice yesterday and forty-one aspirants were out and they looked to be a husky squad. They have eight men of last year's team back, Bennett and Natham of the half line, Sparks the clever middle wing and the rest all line players. Mike Goulding, their star distance gainer will be sadly missed.

The P.C.I. will open their rugby season officially next Saturday when North Toronto Collegiate's gridiron gamesters will visit them for an exhibition game. The North Toronto team were up in front in the Toronto series last season and should be fairly strong. This game will give Coach Browne and the fans a chance to see how the local material will show up under fire.

The Collegiate's first will likely go at it hammer and tongs with seconds during the coming week in order to prepare for the fixture.

MUSKALUNGE FISHING AT FRENCH RIVER CAMP.

In the fall when the 'lunge become voracious and the life of a young fish is worth practically nothing, the fisherman comes into his own. Fighters to the last gasp, the 'lunge is the one fish that one prays, will rise to the plug or minnow and when he does—well, try and yawn. A hot shore dinner in the heart of the 'lunge territory, French River, a rest and then a recounting of the day's sport around the open fire, is something one never forgets.

The beauty of the woods in autumn, the snappy morning atmosphere when one's blood runs faster, good fishing, warm bungalows electrically lighted and a clubhouse with a huge fireplace, music, dancing—all these may be had at French River Bungalow Camp, which will remain open this year until October 15th, following the request of patrons of the camp. The camp is only 215 miles north of Toronto, and any Canadian Pacific agent will gladly supply all information, make your reservations, etc. An hour's communion with a hungry 'lunge is worth a life-time listening to the other fellow tell about it. Think it over.

NEWS OF OMEMEE.

Young People's League Held a Meeting—Personal Mention.

OMEMEE, Sept. 20.— The Epworth League of the Methodist Church, re-opened on Monday evening after the holiday season. The President, Miss Lila Parsons, conducted the opening exercises, a short programme followed consisting of two piano duets by Misses Eva and Lillian Race, a humorous reading by Mrs. Charles McCaffrey and a solo by Miss Rita Kennedy. Rev. E. W. Rowland was then called upon and said in part, "these weekly meetings would be just what we make them, let each member feel the responsibility of their success." Mr. Rowland then called Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hart, nee (Vivian Parsons), to the front and a clothes basket filled with various gifts of china, silverware, aluminium etc., was presented to the newly married couple from many of the bride's Omemee friends. After the parcels were opened the groom responded in a neat speech.

A flower contest followed and although a puzzler to many, brought much enjoyment to all. The prize was a beautiful bouquet of flowers and was won by Mrs. C. D. McCaffrey and Miss Lillian Race. Consolation prize, consisting of one large sunflower, was awarded to Miss Lila Parsons, and V. Lang.

Home-made candy and apples then appeared in large quantities and proved a real treat to the gathering. The National Anthem brought to a close, a pleasant evening.

The regular monthly meeting of Omemee branch of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. J. Widdis on Thursday afternoon. There was a large attendance of members and visitors present. The president, Mrs. T. E. McPherson occupied the chair and the meeting opened with the "Opening Ode," followed by "The Lord's Prayer" in unison. Several accounts were ordered to be paid, such as the annual donation to the Rest Room in Lindsay, also the annual fee to the Federation of Institutes amounting to 15 cents per member. A new scheme for raising money was suggested and found favor among the members. A covered basket containing a pencil, pad and a money box is to be passed around the Society during the month each member to add some article and purchase one if they desire, each time writing her name and article in the book and placing the price of same in the cash box. In this way it is hoped a nice sum of money will be added to the treasury. The roll-call followed, and a program committee consisting of Miss E. Jewett and Mrs. S. Wilson was appointed for the October meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. Harvey Hall.

A letter of appreciation and thanks from a family of fire sufferers in Western Ontario who recently received a bale of clothing from the Omemee Institute was read by Mrs. McGuiness and the Society felt greatly rewarded for their efforts. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in pitching a quilt, after which dainty refreshments were served by the hostesses.

The union "corn-boil" and dark night picnic" held by the Bethel and Omemee Leagues on Wednesday evening at Green Landing was a huge success. The Omemee League used the old time and yet novel mode of transportation, namely—the hayrack. Two racks were brough into play and the ride was thoroughly enjoyed, judging by the merry laughter and songs.

Two huge bon-fires were lighted and four large iron pots were suspended from an iron rod over one of the fires. While the corn was boiling, the party, numbering about sixty, played various games, sang songs, etc., while several seemed content to chat and enjoy the campfire. Finally the call was sounded that the corn was cooked and judging by the speed with which about sixteen dozen ears of choice corn were de-cobbed, the call was a welcome one. Sandwich, cake and apples followed, after which in the glow of the dying camp-fire, community singing was again indulged in. It was a jolly re-union of the two young people's societies which will be a pleasant memory when the wintry breezes blow.

Since writing of the many beautiful flower gardens in Omemee several which should have had special mention at that time have been visited. Mr. Samuel Skuce is in proud possession of a wonderful gladioli garden of about thirty different varieties which is the pride of villagers living in the West end. In the East end of the village Mrs. E. Mitchell and Mrs. Harry Lamb have floral displays of great beauty and variety. The home of Miss Lottie Howden is literally banked with dahlias of many shades which have bloomed profusely all summer. Miss Gladys Fee whose floral display is of the best has in the back lawn a great variety of bloom, conspicuous among which is one dahlia which last week had on it sixty blossoms at one time.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Corneil and daughter of Manilla spent Sunday with the former's uncle, Mr. William Robinson. Mrs. D. H. Corneil accompanied them home to pay a short visit.

Rev. J. and Mrs. Griffith of Blackstock visited friends in town last week.

Mr. Weldo Rhea of Lindsay was a visitor in town on Tuesday.

Mrs. Musgrove of Markham is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. E. W. Rowland.

Mrs. Sheridan Rea, of Toronto, visited Miss Edith Robinson this week.

Mr. Donald Carmichael of Peterboro spent Wednesday with his brother, Dr. H. Carmichael in town.

MR. F. D. KERR SPOKE KIWANIS LUNCHEON

Told of Experiences in France and England as Member of Canadian Bar Association.

In a sparkling address, F. D. Kerr, K.C., told the members of the Kiwanis Club his experiences in England and France, as a member of the joint delegation of the Canadian-American Bar, who visited Europe this year.

Amongst other things the distinctive methods of the French in entertaining was notworthy and remarkable in that it reflected the artistic nature and literary talent of the French. The American and Canadian Bar members, constituting English-speaking and French-Canadian judges and lawyers, were entertained by the President in the Palace de l'Elysee, the same palace that graced Napoleon III. and Marie Louis. When the visiting legalities from the American continent were ushered through the great court yard on to the lawn, where the reception took place, it afforded a unique and picturesque setting. About the beautifully decorated garden amongst the trees were sculptural works of magnificence; graceful statutary resembling the living in a manner for which the French are renowned. Varying from the English entertainments, which characterized traditional and historical features, singers from grand opera and Russian and French dancers radiated the modern mode of French amusement. The dramatic art of the ballad was so refined that one was impressed with the beauty and grace of the performance on the illuminated sward.

Mr. Kerr spoke of the structural grandeur of the Paris City Hall, with its massive corridors and arches which in itself is one of the greatest palaces in the world. The members of the American and French Bar Associations were given a civic reception in the large banquet hall.

Speaking of the people and artifices of Europe, where as in any other country, one sees plain people and plain buildings, it is necessary to associate the same buildings, made of brick, stone or mortar with the historical events of the past, in order to appreciate their significance.

What historical feature, asked the speaker, had the United States or Canada, other than the great war in any way a connection with the city of Paris? This question would naturally be asked, as English-speaking judges and lawyers and French-Canadian judges and lawyers sailed from Quebec, to pay tribute to the Mother Country.

But, in 1763, Canada's destiny was settled by the Treaty of Paris, when France relinquished her hold upon this Dominion, leaving some 60,000 inhabitants which have developed into a large proportion of the present population bringing customs and influence first acquired from France, which Canadians must study, to afford national co-operation.

Recollecting that the Treaty of Versailles, signed in 1783, permitted the American people to establish themselves on this continent, one realizes there is a historical and distinctive connection in the historical association of the two countries.

Turning to the first impressions of the Canadian in France, the speaker touched upon the attitude held by the Frenchman, in reference to Canadians in general.

The Canadian is held in high esteem, and from the first meeting between a Frenchman and a Canadian visitor in France there seems to flow from the acquaintanceship a greater friendship and a kindred relationship. Canadians are liked for the individual impressions they create and this courtesy accorded resulted from the valour and heroism of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces. "It therefore ill behooves any Canadian to deregate from the high standard these men set, while in that country," opined Mr. Kerr.

Introducing a different thought, the speaker dealt with the attitude of the Frenchman to Germany's future, and his general outlook up on the future of his own nation.

It was his opinion that the French would merge from their troubles in safety, despite the harassing situations that have continually confronted the Chamber of Deputies in Domestic as well as foreign matters. Courtesy is an outstanding attribute of the Frenchman, remarked the speaker. They are a cheerful and vigorous people, but overwrought, worrying about Germany's future, and have a tendency to watch the movements of England and the United States too closely.

Mr. Kerr stated that his observations had convinced him that reconstruction had almost entirely eradicated material traces of the war in France. But, while the French and the British speak different languages, there is something between them that makes for goodwill and peace that will never be forgotten. The French can't read the great memorial in the Cathedral at Notre Dame without realizing that of over a million British, the majority of which are buried in French soil, without feeling a kindred regard for old England. When the American reads this inscription, realizing the United States' noble contribution toward the end of the war, he cannot but think, that were is not for Britain's stand in the forefront, history would have read differently.

The war has served to bring France, Britain and the United States closer together. "The power of Canada as a medium between the United States and England and England and France is great. That wonderful memorial in Notre Dame, symbolic of the sacrifices of all allied nations—the time will never come when the same memorial will have to be raised, for the great nations realizing that it is necessary to stand and keep together, rather than to separate and divide, it means permanent peace to the world."

Kiwanian Joseph Wearing said that he had been informed from another Canadian lawyer that visited Paris of a speech delivered in French by Mr. Kerr, at a Paris banquet.

"It would be fitting to introduce a thought of flowers following Mr. Kerr's address," said Dr. J. Middleton, a visitor at the luncheon. He spoke briefly of the Flower Show and thanked the Kiwanians for the support they had always given to the Horticultural Society.

Anything To Be Different—Alderman Stocker.

One of the unique features of the Kiwanian luncheons is their system of calling the roll, a system peculiar to themselves, which incidentally apprises those present of the calling of each member.

Beginning at the end of one table, each Kiwanian rises to his feet when his turn comes, calling his name and adding his calling in this style: John Turner, tents; Joseph Wearing, City Solicitor; Bob Mackey, bread, and so on.

At yesterday's luncheon, one member attached to his name in the roll call, a variation creating a hearty laugh as well as a precedent despite the numerous and diversified occupations of the Kiwanian members, including richmen, poormen, beggermen and probably.....

The new one was sprung when Alderman Stocker rose and said "Walter Stocker, Gentleman of Leisure."

Even though he admitted wealth, no fine was imposed.

Eagle Gobbles Golf Ball.

Contendor Says Eagle An Agency Outside Match.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Sept. 20.—A possible eagle on the course of the Tallahassee country club here was made impossible by a real eagle, the big bird swooping down on the eighth green to seize a golf ball as it was trickling in the general direction of the cup. Fred C. Elliott was the victim and gained scant comfort from the assurance that the eagle was "an agency outside the match" and the incident could not be held "a rub of the green."

AT THE GRAND.

"THE FIRST YEAR."

It is a long time since Peterboro playgoers have had an opportunity of enjoying such a delightful comedy as "The First Year, the John Golden-Frank Craven production, which was the attraction at the Grand last night and is being repeated at a matinee and evening performance to-day. Wholesome, true to life, its characters the people you brush elbows with every day, just a cross section out of the life of the average man and woman, "The First Year" points a moral and yet remains one of the funniest comedies of the last decade. Some producers apparently believe no play is amusing nowadays unless it deals with bedrooms and boudoirs, and provides opportunity for pyjama-clad characters to get into the wrong rooms.

John Golden does not belong to that school, however. He feels that there is a warm place in the affections of theatrical patrons for plays of a more elevating type and that to be funny there is no need of being vulgar. Hence "The First Year," and New York confirmed his opinion by giving this comedy a record run.

To explain the story briefly, it deals as the title suggests, with that most dangerous phase of the matrimonial voyage, the first year, when husband and wife have not shaked down to their new roles, when minor tragedies arise that appear very serious just then, however much they may be laughed at later on when looked back at with the philosophic eye of experience. Tommy Tucker and Grace Livingstone are the characters in the play who set out from their home port into the sea of matrimony and come near to wrecking their craft before the first twelve months are over. The rift in the lute is soon in evidence and half way through the tearful bride goes home to mother. The reconciliation comes in the last act of course, but not before the audience has enjoyed many a laugh, and once in a while felt a tug at the heart strings.

It would spoil things to go into details as to the actions. Suffice it to say that there are no dragging moments from the moment the curtain goes up on the first realistic scene in the Livingstone home until its fall upon Tommy and Grace clasped in each other's arms. A real play, with real people—that is "The First Year." There will be nothing better this season.

The comedy is magnificently presented by a most capable and clever cast. Bert Chapman, who gives a remarkable portrayal of the part of Tommy Tucker, is never out of the picture. He makes the young husband a character that will linger long in the memories of local playgoers. Lucille Sears, who is the Grace Tucker of the performance, is equally at home in her none to easy role, and scores heavily throughout. John P. Brawn's work as Mr. Livingston, is masterly and adds much to the fun of the play, and Stella Boniface Weaver is equally as effective as Mrs. Livingston. Ray L. Royce gives a finished performance as the kindly old Dr. Anderson; Mary Marbles' work as Hattie is a high light of the production, and Paul McGrath, Earl McMillan and Rose Tiffany all add materially to the success of the production.

If Peterboro people want to see one of the best comedies of this or any other season, brilliantly acted and most handsomely mounted, they cannot afford to miss "The First Year," in its final performance to-night.

"THE LOVE TEST."

Recently the newspapers of the nation devoted much space and printers' ink to the story of a man who in his prime had been one of the best, if not the best, bank robber in the country. Such a problem was this man to the bankers that he was paid a salary for life by the American Bankers Ass., on his promise to abandon his burgling tools and tarverse the straight and narrow path. This is practically the same as an incident in the career of one of the characters in "The Love Test," the offering at the Grand next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The story of "The Love Test" is about a young girl, who is the owner of a small town hotel, and her childhood sweetheart. The hotel has been left her by her father, who, on his death bed has made the request that she never sell it. The girl endeavors to live up to her promise, but unforseen financial difficulties have about forced her to sell it to the town banker, who has been using every means in his power to secure it, when her sweetheart returns to the home town after an absence of three years. He learns of her predicament, and with the aid of a friend, who is a guest of the hotel at the times, saves her property and clears up a mystery that has been the topic of conversation in the village for some time.

The story is told in three acts, abounding in situations that cause a tear to appear one moment and be wiped away with a smile or a laugh the next. After viewing the homey little play you will no doubt be one of its biggest boosters and will describe it to your friends as many others have, with the words—"just a darn good play!"

W. Leonard Howe, the raconteur of the Man They Could not Hang, which comes to the Grand for three days next week commencing Thursday, toured America with Sir Johnstone Forbes Robertson, and later with the renounced "Doug". With Mr. Fairbanks he scored a decided hit in Hawthorne U.S.A. He is one of the many actors as much at home on the screen as the stage, a combined knowledge most useful in his present capacity since he delivers a most thrilling talk on the salient features of the Lee case while the picture is being screened.

AT THE ROYAL.

COLLEEN MOORE IN SLIPPY McGEE

Famous Story comes to Royal.

Trapped. Fleeing from the close-pressing officers on a freight train. Awakening in a strange room with one leg amputated and a priest standing over the bed looking down upon him.

That is the situation from which the remarkable story of "Slippy McGee" works to its ending in the picturization of the widely-read Oemler book which Oliver Morosco has just completed for First National release. The picture, which will be seen at Royal Theatre on Monday, brings a refreshing newness to the screen in its working of human salvage with the action revolving about a small mill town priest and America's most daring safe cracker.

"Slippy McGee," in its book form has been read by tens of thousands in American homes. It is not a preachment but a vital, human story of conflict in which a girl, butterflies, and a dog help the priest in his steady overpowering of a will that could work mightily for good or desperately for evil.

The scenes are set amid the contrasting streets of the poor and the aristocratic old mansions of the South. Following the Morosco policy of obtaining the exact "atmosphere" not a studio set was used by the Morosco specially selected cast spent two month at Natchez, Miss.

The role of 'Slippy McGee" is made a triumph by Wheeler Oakman, whose flashes and shadowings between the physical and mental are the best work he ever has done for the screen. Sam de Grasse is a superb contrast as the priest. Colleen Moore, alternately dignifiedly 'grown up" and roguishly the blossoming Southern school girl, has the feminie lead.

WU PEI FU LOST FIRST ROUND IN A FINISH FIGHT

Declares War To the Death On Manchurian War Lord.

CAVALRY FAILED.

Chang's Aeroplanes Do Damage To Peking Government Forces.

(By Ray G. Marshall—United Press Staff Correspondent).

PEKING, Sept. 20.—"War to the finish."

With this edict Genera Wu Pei Fu started his campaign against Chang Tso Lin, the Manchurian war lord, to-day, announcing the fight will last until Manchuria has been brought under control of the Central Government and Chang crushed. Wu received the foreign correspondents at his headquarters and announced plans for the campaign.

Two hundred Government troops are ready to fight on the northern frontier, he said. They already have been equipped with heavy clothing for a struggle throughout the winter, although Wu estimates it will take only two months to subdue the Manchurian forces.

The Government will accept full responsibility for life and property in Manchuria during the campaign.

Loses First Round.

Chang Tso Lin, the Manchurian war lord, won the first battle of China's civil war in the north to-day when strong cavalry units of Wu Fu's troops attempted a surprise attack on the Manchu forces in the Tapan Chao Yang district and were repulsed with heavy losses, according to a Mukden despatch to the London Evening News.

Chang is preparing for a general attack on Chao Yang within a few days. The opposing armies are four miles apart, now. Chang's airplanes are doing considerable damage to the Peking Government forces.

Artillery Busy.

There was a sharp resumption of artillery bombardment this morning in the battle area between the Shanghai - Nanking railway and Kianting, west of here, where the Kiangsu army is vigorously attacking the Chekiang line defending Shanghai.

The artillery duel lasted two hours, after which the bombardment subsided, continuing sporadic during the rest of the morning.

Chekiang Forces Won.

In an engagement which started at daybreak, reinforced Chekiang troops on the front between the Shanghai-Nanking line and Kianting pushed the invading Kiangsu forces back, strengthened their lines and regained the positions near Swangtu, fifteen miles west of here.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"REVELATION" IS ONE OF GREATEST

Big Metro Picture Sets a New Standard With Superb Cast and Story

"The most satisfying picture of the year," describes Metro's special production, "Revelation," which shows Monday, Tuesday at the Capitol Theatre. Story, cast and direction, are all three of extraordinary worth, so that the spectator comes away from the theatre feeling that he has seen something head and shoulders above the ordinary feature.

Motion picture fans have been saying all along that the crying need is better stories. They are answered in "Revelation," for the story, which was written by Mabel Wagnalls, is a classic of the screen, and is destined to stand out as one of the milestones in film history.

With such a story to work on, the chance was there to make a great picture, and George D. Baker, the director, never let an opportunity slip by. His good taste and tenderness in handling the subject is always manifest.

Has Wonderful Cast

The picture is superby acted by a real all-star cast that includes such favorites as Viola Dana, Monte Blue Lew Cody, Marjorie Daw, Frank Currier, Edward Connelly, George Siegmann, Kathleen Key, Otto Matiesen, Bruce Guerin and Ethel Wales The actors all seemed inspired, Viola Dana and Monte Blue, who carry the chief acting burden, doing by far the best work they have ever contributed to the screen.

The picture centers on a beautiful legend of an old French monastery. A monk planted a rosebush, and when it did not bloom, he thought it was because of his sins. When he was praying one day the Virgin appeared to him, the bush bluossoming forth afterward as a sign of forgiveness.

The story proper concerns a young girl, Joline Hofer, who thrown from her home, takes her fatherless baby to a convent and goes to Paris to enjoy life as she can. She falls in love with a poor American artist, Paul Granville, and brings success to him by posing in a series of history's notorious women.

A Modern Miracle

Then Granville decides to paint the legend of the monastery rosebush, with Joline posing as the Madonna. When they start work in the monastery garden, the rosebush is no longer in bloom, and one of the monks, Brother Augustin, believes that its barrenness is due to the fact that he, like the monk in olden times has sinned. He sees Joline in the garden and thinks she is the Madonna appearing to forgive him. Then—the rosebush blooms!

News of the miracle spreads, but Joline, knowing the Madonna had not appeared, confesses to the Prior. He explains that the rosebush bloom is proof of a real miracle—that the Holy Mother had revealed herself through Joline's eyes. This revelation leads Joline back to a life of penance with her little boy, until Granville comes to marry her.

BARTHELMESS STARS IN MODERN ROMANCE

"Twenty-One," a John S. Robertson production, starring the popular Richard Barthelmess, will be the First National picture at the Capitol Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday. Dorothy Mackaill, portraying the role of a poor young factory girl with whom the wealthy young hero of the story falls in love and for whose sake he runs away from home to the city to gain independence as a taxicab driver, is once more to be seen as Dick's leading lady. Others interpreting important parts in this modern story of the jazz life and its anithesis are Joe King, Dorothy Cumming, Elsie Lawson, Bradley Barker, Ivan Simpson, Nellie Parker Spaulding and Helen Tracy. "Twenty-One" is the first modern story in which Barthelmess has appeared since "Fury," his two intervening vehicles, "The Bright Shawl" and "The Fighting Blade," having been costume period pictures, which required long hair and swords. In this newest production, which is said to be one of the best vehicles yet given the star, Richard enjoys the luxury of a haircut.

HOOT GIBSON AT CAPITOL NEXT. FRI.-SAT.

Although a story of the West, "The Ramblin' Kid," Universal's Hoot Gibson special at the Capitol Theatre next Friday and Saturday is not to be confused with "western pictures," according to announcements. It was taken from a very human novel by Earl Wayland Bowman, of the same title, which depicts a modernized West.
